THE DOGS OF WAR NOW LET LOOSE

A Great Naval Battle Now Considered Imminent

THE FLOTILLA INTERCEPTED

One of the United States' Fleets to Sail for the Canary Islands

Great Britain to Support the United States A Crucial Day at Washington. The War Feeling Growing Rapidly

(Special to the Times.)

New York, April 6.—A special to the Times from Washington says:

The flying squadron, under command of Commodore Schley, will move on the Canaries within 24 or 48 hours.

This is the program of the Navy Department.

It is both a reply to the despatch of the torpedo flotilla and fleet of cruisers toward "American" shores, and preliminary to a decisive blow at the sea power of Spain.

This is the first positive war order issued.

THE PLAN OF ACTION

A HIGH AUTHORITY AT WASHINGTON GIVES AWAY NAVAL SECRETS.

Washington, April 6.—The plan of action for the naval forces is now practically completed.

While these plans are naturally most closely guarded, it may be stated on high authority that one feature of them contemplates a dash by the flying squadron under Commodore Schley to the Canary Islands.

The plan is that in the event of a declaration of war, the flying squadron, possibly with the addition of a few more ships, will immediately start for the Canaries to establish a station at that point and harass the coast of Spain. From that point the squadron would not only be placed advantageously to intercept Spanish merchantmen, but would be in a position, should circumstances demand so desperate a venture to attack a seaport. It was also pointed out that to seize and hold the Canary Islands would be a severe blow to Spain, inasmuch as the islands lie between the Cape Verde Islands and Spain, and in direct line with the route to Cuba.

THREATENING HAVANA

REBEL LEADERS BREAK THRO' THE TROCHA AND JOIN THEIR FORCES.

Havana, April 6.—A report here says that the rebel Gen. Garcia has evaded Gen. Pando, crossed the trocha and joined Gen. Gomez, and that the combined forces, making fully 4,000 men are now en route for the Provinces of Matanzas and Havana, on the long-threatened raid.

THE U.S. FLEET IN THE FAR EAST.

Hong Kong, April 6.—The United States fleet is preparing to go to sea.

The United States authorities have purchased the British steamer Nanshan, which will be used as a store ship. Coal is being bought.

PREPARED FOR FLIGHT.

New York, April 6.—The Press, a sensational sheet, declares that all preparations have been made at the Spanish consulate for all the officials to leave the country; all papers and books have been packed, farewells said, passages arranged for, and arrangemnets made for the French consulate to look after Spanish affairs.

THE SPANISH FLEET.

New York, April 6.—A despatch to the World from San Juan de Porto Rico says: The Spanish cruisers Viscaya and Almirante Oquendo, which sailed from Havana last Saturday, have arrived here, presumably to meet and convoy the torpedo fleet. It is believed that both would attack the United States at or near Key West.

This place is being fortified.

THE TEXAS SAILS.

New York, April 6.—The battleship UTexas sailed to-day to join the squadron at Hampton Roads.

LEE ORDERED TO LEAVE HAVANA.

New York, April 6.—The Herald's Washington news says that the Government cabled General Lee last night to leave Havana at the earliest possible moment.

BRITAIN'S HELP.

LONDON, April 6.— On the highest authority the Associated Press can announce that the British Government has assured the United States that the latter has its fullest and most cordial sympathy in its Cuban policy. This assurance was given with the most complete knowledge of the latest developments in the negotiations between the United States and Spain, and on the understanding that events are tending steadily towards armed intervention in Cuba.

The British Government is even more friendly to the United States than the newspapers here, having more accurate knowledge of the real nature and purport of the dealings between the United States and Spain.

WASHINGTON, April 6—The Speaker has been informed that the Message will be sent to the House at two o'clock.

WASHINGTON, April 6—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee met at 10 o'clock, but only five members were present at that hour. The discussion to change the Cuban resolution to meet the recommendations of the President, was resumed.

REPUBLICAN JINGOES.

Four of the Republicans of the Foreign Affairs House Committee, Messrs. Henry of Indiana, Heatwole of Minnesota, Smith of Michigan, and Quigg of New York, have announced this morning that they will not support the President's recommendations if they are as outlined in some of the morning papers, an despecially if he asks intervention at his discretion. Mr. Henry declares that he is in favor of resolutions which recite the conditions in Cuba and the blowing up of the Maine an dthen resolve that Spain has forfeited all dominion over Cuba, and authorizing the President to use the army and navy to drive Spain from the Island.

DESERTING THE PRESIDENT.

The Democrats of the committee probably will join these four, and before the Message comes in it seems certain that the resolution presented to the House will not support him.

Nothing will be done by the committee, however, until the Message is presented. The committee met at 10.03 p.m.

REPUBLICAN SANGRY.

The Republican Conference, which has been opposed to delay in the Cuban matter, met at 10.30 a.m., to-day, About 80 or 90 Republicans were present.

There were some very heated speecheses. Mr. Tawney, of Minnesota, who has been especially vigorous for Cuba, made a very pointed speech against the alleged policy of the President, and wanted action which would be immediate.

Mr. Colson, (Rep.-Ky.) left the meeting while it was still in progress.

"We are still in the dark," he declared in a disgusted tone. 'We do not know what the Message will be, and as it is to come in to-day we will have to wait to decide our coast."

No proposition wa spresented to the conference, but the tone of other speeches was in favor of vigorous action if the President's Message should not meet expectation.

The Republican conference adjourned at 11.30 a.m. to meet again at 8 o'clock. The tone of the meeting was strongly against empowering the President to intervene at his discretion. But as no absolute information was at hand, as to the character of the Message, it was decided to wait until after it had been presented, and to meet again this evening.

THE RUSH TO THE HOUSES.

Never in recen tyears, if ever at any time, has ther ebeen such a demand for admission to the halls of Congress as was made to-day. People who appreciated what the conditions of affairs would be began to arive at 6 a.m.... notwithstanding freezing weather, and wer ent the doors before nine o'clock in such number sthat when the doors were opened not half of them could find seats.

Five minutes after the door sopened the crowds in the corridors were dense. In great waves the iresistible stream surged on up the marble stairway to the gallaries, in front of the doors of which the great mass pressed, women fainting in the press, old men and children crushed by those behind.

On the floor the greatest excitement and activity prevailed. Rumors flew about. Here indignation was riot against the report that the President would ask for discretion as to when intervention shoul dtake place; there a staunch supporter of the President was counselling calmness; here a group was discussing the probability of an alliance between the Democrats and the dissatisfied Republicans; there an appeal to a group of Republicans was being made to stand solidly by the President and party organizations.

The battle was already on in a corner of the Capitol, the House Committee on Foreign Affairs was meeting In the old library hall the "reconcentrados," as the Republicans who have been urgent for action have been called, were discussing the latest phase of the situation with stormy words. Everywhere was the militant spirit apparent.

No more inspiring scene could be witnessed than was discussed by the great hall o fthe House of Representatives just before the House met. Tier upon tier of people from gallery rail to wall stretched in unbroken lines about the pit where the members sit, the gay colors of the gowns and hats and flowers of the ladies relieving the sombre black of the garments of the men.

As the hands of the clock pointed to twelve Speaker Reed pushed his way through the green base doors leading to the lobby of the House and ascended the rostrum. With two whacks of the gavel the great multitude rose, hushed, the members and many of the spenctators in the gallery arose and stood with bowed head, an dthe blind chaplain of the House delivered a solemn invocation for the Divine aid in this day's deliberations.

$600 GRANT REFUSED

'Cyclists Will Have to Depend on Their Own Resources

MARKET BY-LAW AMENDED

The Three Cent Toll on Potatoes to be Discontinued

The Standard Weight of a Bag of Potatoes Specified at 90 lbs.—Light-Weight Vendors to be Looked After by the Police. Weighing Potatoes not to be Compulsory in Future

A committee meeting of the whole council was held in the town offices last night to discuss the advisibility of making a grant to the Bicycle Club with a view to securing the annual meet of the C.W.A. for Peterborough.

The new Market By-Law also came in for a share of the committee's attention and one of its sections was materially altered during the evening.

The Councillors present were: Mayor Davis, in the chair, and Messrs. Denne, Langford, Allen, Dawson, W. H. White, Cobb, Best, J. M. White and Robertson.

The Mayor briefly stated the object of the meeting. The principal question that would be brought to the attention of the Committee was that of a grant to the local Bicycle Club. The Club have asked for a grant of $600 and refusal or acquiesence would require grave consideration. Personally he was in favor of a grant, but from opinions expressed by a number of prominent ratepayers he considered that the grant should not exceed $300. The entire matter, however, rested with the Council and it was for them to decide.

Councillor Denne was in favor of a grant, but did not see where the money was to come from. If the Council would relieve his mind on this point he would be prepared, so far as he was concerned, to act and act quickly.

Councillor Dawson was of the opinion that the argument advanced that securing the Meet would keep the people in town was erroneous. He didn't believe it would, and why should the taxpayers spend their good money for the entertainment of strangers. Until some argument more convincing than he had yet heard was forthcoming, he wished it to be distinctly understood that he was opposed to a grant.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, Secretary of the Bicycle Club, who was present, in answer to a question, stated that securing the event for Peterborough would be the means of bringing 5,000 visitors into town, which would mean the expenditure of a very large sum of money in our midst.

Councillor Allen was in favor of a grant of $300. He considered the Meet would very materially benefit Peterborough and was prepared to support a grant of the dimensions above stated.

Councillor Best was opposed to a grant of $300. The only classes to be benefitted would be the grocers butchers and hotelkeepers. They had no guarantee that 5,000 visitors would attend the Meet, and the Council had no right to gamble with the taxpayers' money. He was decidedly opposed to a grant and believed in taking this stand he was working in the best interests of the town.

As the discussion gave every promise of lasting indefinitely, a motion was presented recommending a grant of $600. This was very promptly voted down—only the mover and seconder voting for the motion.

This practically terminated the matter, and the Council having thus squared themselves with the masses will have to use their ingenuity to line up properly with the bicycle people at the elections next January.

RELATING TO BICYCLISTS.

The Mayor referred to the amended by-law in reference to the privileges of bicyclists, stating that many of its provisions were worthy of consideration.

An informal exchange of views took place but ended in the new legislation receiving a six months hoist.

THE NEW MARKET BY-LAW.

The new Market By-Law, in view of recent occurrences, caused an immense amount of discussion and resulted in certain recommendations being referred to the Council.

Council met with the Mayor in the chair, and committee's recommendations were adopted—the amended by-law receiving its several readings and being passed.

The standard weight of a bag of potatoes was specified at 90 pounds; the three cent fee for weighing is abolished; light-weight vendors are to be looked after by the police, and notices to this effect are to be posted on the market.

STAND PIPES.

A communication referring to the unserviceable condition of a number of stand pipes was laid before the Council, and, on motion, were ordered to be repaired.

T. V. C. DEPUTATION.

On motion of Councillor Best, seconded by Councillor Langford, it was decided to request the Joint Committee to take immediate action to arrange with the Board of Trade and the County Council for a strong deputation to visit Ottawa and urge upon the Government the necessity of prosecuting with the utmost dispatch the completion of the Trent Valley Canal.

This action was considered particularly necessary on account of the recent action of the Toronto Board of Trade in condemning the work.

The Council then adjourned.

FARM HELP WANTED

The Department of Agriculture is receiving requests for farm help. This is due to the fact that a large majority of our floating population, upon whom the farmer usually relies to obtain assistance at this time of the year, are seized with the Klondike craze, and are off to the Northwest. This seems to have affected all parts of the Province. As a natural consequence higher wages are being paid to those remaining.

All the trades and business in British Columbia are suffering from the gold fever. Many are leaving a good business or steady employment to hunt for gold. Employment agencies that are taking men out to fill these vacancies state that those brought out, soon get the gold fever, throw up their contracts and are away to the mines.

Young men who can resist this temptation and desire good situations have no difficulty in obtaining them in the towns an dcities of British Columbia. They can be sure of a good comfortable living with opportunity to store up for "a rainy day," but those who go to the Klondike can be sure of nothing.

TORONTO AND THE T. V. C.

The efforts now being put forward by Toronto to put a stop to further expenditure on the Trent Valley Canal is on a par with the efforts of that city to entice the Grand Trunk out of Montreal with its head office. There is nothing that other towns or cities possess that a certain section of the Toronto people do not crave for. So far as the Trent Canal is concerned, their efforts to injure it are not likely to be successful. The scheme is too well known, and the great advantage it will be to the country has been demonstrated too often to make it liable to injury now. The Toronto Board of Trade should read the report of the Royal commission appointed by the Dominion Government, as to the feasibility and usefulness of the canal, before they start to give gratuitous advice to the Minister of Railways.

Mr. Blair has himself been over the route of the proposed canal, and the people interested can rest assured that he will not be coerced by any silly nonsense such as the Toronto Board of Trade has been indulging in with respect to this great national scheme.

They say that March borrows twelve days from April. Repayment began early.

YOUNG'S POINT NEWS

The Young's Point Football Club met on Thursday evening of last week for the purpose of reorganization. A large number were present, including a number from Lakefield.

The following are the officers for the coming season:

Hon. Presidents—Rev. Father Fitzpatrick and Rev. Mr. Greame.
President—W. Brooks.
1st Vice-President—J. Ridpath.
2nd Vice-President—P. Young.
3rd Vice-President—F. Walsh.
Secretary—Wm. McFarlane.
Treasurer—F. J. Young.
Councillors—J. Ridpath, W. Watson, W. Dier and L. Anglesey.
Curator—F. M. Young.
Executive Committee—Officers of the Club.

The boys intend putting on a strong season. They will join the league, if formed, and will put on a team to play in Lakefield on the 24th of May, if opponents are to be found.

NOTES.

Mr. Jas Johnston, of the Carleton House, left on Monday last for Bobcaygeon, where he will resume his position as wheelsman on the steamer Esturion.

Mr. P.P. Young is having his tidy little steamer Majestic repainted, and she will soon be seen again gliding swiftly o'er the waters of the back lakes. She will be engaged next week towing logs from Deer Bay, after which she will take wood to Lakefield.

The ice is all out of Clear Lake now, and last week large quantities of it passed over the dam.

A Horse Drowned

A horse belonging to Messrs. Corry & Laverdure was drowned in the canal just where it empties into the Little lake on Tuesday afternoon at about three o'clock. The driver was dumping a load close to the bank, when the cart went backwards and its weight pulled the horse back. It was pulled out a few minutes afterwards but was dead.

Wells & Richardson Co.,

Dear Sirs,—I feel constrained, for the benefit of suffering humanity, to add my testimony to the wonderful effects of Paine's Celery Compound. I was induced to try your Compound through its wonderful efects upon a Mr. Parks. I had previously used a vast quantity of patent an ddoctors' medicine, only to find my self growing weaker. After using your Paine's Celery Compound to the number of five bottles I gained forty-three and a half pounds, and am able to work hard all day as a mason with comfort to myself.

MAHMOUD DEFEATED

ANOTHER BATTLE IN THE EGYPTIAN CAMPAIGN RESULTING IN BRITISH VICTORY.

(Special to the Times.)

ABADAR CAMP, South of the Afbara, Nubia, April 6—A reconnaissance in force with cavalry, artillery, and two Egyptian battalions to the camp of Mahmoud Pasha brought the enemy out in force. The fighting lasted from 8.30 until 10.30.

The British loss was 6 killed and 10 wounded. Capt. W. H. Persse, of the Second Dragoon Guards, was wounded slightly. The Dervishes lost about 200.

The reconnaissance is regarded as a great success, its chief features being the admirable behaviour of the Egyptian cavalry an dthe avluable services of the Maxims. Mahmoud's gun fire was ineffective.

Intercolonial Railway OF CANADA.

The direct point between the west and all points on the Lower St. Lawrence and Baie des Chaleurs, Province of Quebec; also for New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward and Cape Breton Islands, Newfoundland and St. Pierre.

Express trains leave Montreal and Halifax daily, Sundays excepted, and run through without change between these points.

The through express train cars of the Intercolonial Railway are brilliantly lighted by electricity and heated by steam from the locomotive, thus greatly increasing the comfort and safety of travellers.

Comfortable and elegant buffet, sleeping and day cars are run on all through express trains.

The popular summer sea bathing and fishing resorts of Canada are along the Intercolonial and are reached by that route.

Canadian-European Mail and Passenger Route.

Passengers for Great Britain and the Continent can leave Montreal Tuesday morning and join outward Mail Steamers at St John on Wednesday, or they can leave Montreal on Wednesday morning and join outward Mail Steamers at Halifax on Thursday.

The attention of shippers is directed to the superior facilities offered by this route for the transport of flour and general merchandise intended for the Eastern Provinces, Newfoundland and the West Indies, also for shipments of grain and produce intended for the European market, either by way of Halifax or St John.

EXTENSION OF TIME

THE time for receiving Tenders for Power House has been extended until Sixteen o'clock on the 9th April, 1898.

By order,
L. K. JONES
Secretary.

Department of Railways and Canals,
Ottawa, 12th March, 1898.

Newspapers inserting this advertisement without authority from the Department will not be paid for it.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tenders for green House, Parliament Grounds," will be received at this office until Monday 25th April 1898, inclusively, for the erection of a Green House, Parliament Grounds Ottawa, according to a plan and a specification to be seen at the Department of Public Works Ottawa

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the form supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of tenderers.

An accepted bank cheque, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, FOR FIVE PER CENT (5%) OF THE AMOUNT OF TENDER must accompany each tender. This cheque will be forfeited if the party decline the contract or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

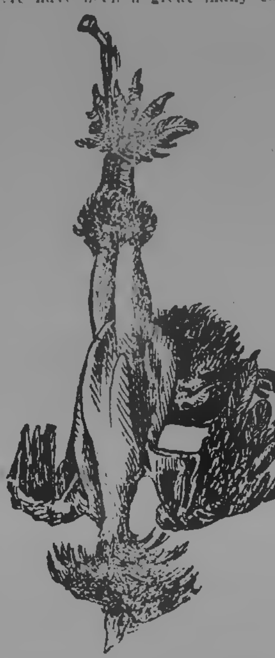
CAPONS.

The Market Results of the Operation by One Who Knows.

We reproduce herewith the cut of capon, showing just how this class of poultry should be dressed for this market. You will notice that the feathers are left on the neck, legs, wings and rump, and also that the tail feathers are left on. Otherwise capons should be dressed for this market the same as other fowls, except that they should be dry-picked, as it would be impossible to scald them and leave part of the feathers on, and if they are scalded, the same as other chickens, they will not bring any more than the price of common fowls for they are distinguished more by the way they are picked than in any other manner. All other chickens sell better in this market scalded, while turkeys sell best dry-picked.

P. S. Sprague, of the Sprague Commission Company of Chicago, a firm which deals largely in poultry, writes as follows on the subject of capons and their market:

Capons are in the best demand with us from the first of November until the first of May. For the last year or two there have been a great many common roosters dressed in capon style and sent to this market, which has hurt the capon trade some, but still good capons always bring a good price. The larger the birds are, the more they will bring per pound. Birds that weigh less than seven pounds each will not bring any more than common chickens, as a rule. Each year the call in this market for genuine, large capons becomes greater. The reason is that people are becoming educated to the enjoyment of the luxury.



CAPON READY FOR MARKET.

Looking over the quotations on Jan. 1st we note that large and choice capons sold, dressed, at 15c per pound, while mixed lots brought 12c per pound. What are termed "slips" (cockerels that have been imperfectly caponized) sold at from 8c to 10c per pound. A capon will bring upwards of three times as much as a cock. Capons grow to be larger and heavier than cocks and may, if well bred, be made to attain a size of from 12 to 15 pounds each. A capon of such weight will sell for from $2 to $3, while a cock will not bring more than 50 cents. Yet it costs just as much to raise cocks as to raise capons.

When raising capons the breed should be carefully considered. If the operation is performed early the capon will not develop a comb. The operation should be performed before the bird is three months old. It is a waste of time to use small breeds and scrub, as they will only sell as second-class stock. The largest capons, according to our information, are produced by crossing a Dorking male with Brahma hens, and the best in quality are produced by keeping the pullets of the Dorking-Brahma cross and mating them with an Indian game male. The capons so produced combine the size of the Brahma, the compactness of the Dorking and the full breast and juicy qualities of the Indian game. Other good crosses may be made by the use of Houdan male with Brahma, Cochin or Plymouth Rock hens, or the Dorking or Indian game may be used in place of the Houdan. The hen should always be large. The form and quality are mostly derived from the sire.

A capon grows and fattens on a small amount of food. The first point should be to secure large frames and fatten them after they are fully matured. If the capon is produced from a large breed it should have plenty of time for growth—about fifteen months—for every pound is valuable. The food should be nourishing but not fattening. Corn is unnecessary until near the time for fattening. Wheat, oats, pounded bone, meat, and and green food, all that it can eat twice a day will be sufficient to help the capon rapidly in growth.

Capons should be put in a small yard (not too crowded) three weeks before being sold and fed four times a day, giving plenty of corn, and also a variety of other food. One of the best preparations for fattening capons is cornmeal and ground oats, equal parts, adding half a pound of crude tallow to every quart of the mixture. Moisten the whole with skimmed milk or boiling water and season with salt.

Buyers are not so particular about the color of the legs and skin of the capon as they are of its size and attractive appearance in other respects, yet a yellow leg capon holds an advantage. Yellow legs may be secured by using Plymouth Rock males on pullets that have been produced by mating a Dorking male and a Brahma hen. Such a capon will be of excellent quality and will always bring a good price. Light Brahma males are also mated with Cochin hens in order to secure large capons, but they do not have that full breast which is imparted by the Houdan, Dorking or Game. If the color of the leg is of no consequence, the Houdan male and Langshan hen produce excellent capons when mated.

The comparison of a well-bred, well kept and well-fed capon with a cock of the same breeding, will show that when a cock reaches ten pounds weight in a given period of time, the capon will weigh one-third more, and the difference in price is three to four times as much. If, instead of keeping the yards full of useless and unprofitable cockerels, caponizing were resorted to, there would be a greater desire to have more cockerels hatched than pullets. By keeping good breeds, neighbors may be induced to use the eggs for hatching purposes. Then the surplus cockerels may be bought at a slight advance, as they will prefer to keep the pullets for their own use. By then providing the neighbors with pure bred males every season there would be no limit to the supply of eggs for hatching cockerels for capons.

CACKLES.

"Go boldly forth, my simple lay."—Sir William Jay.

The bicycle stopped suddenly. The old man went over the handle-bar and turned a complete somersault in the air. Then he sat down on the pavement—hard.

"Now, you know how it feels to be whacked there," said the boy.

And with a merry laugh he disappeared around the corner.—Chicago Post.

Carmelita—Yes, but he insulted her.

Grace—How?

Carmelita—He told her she was worth her weight in silver.—New York Press.

Too Forcible.—"They say Dumley's wife rules him with a rod of iron."

"Oh, no; that's an exaggeration. Why, she can make him jump by merely crooking her little finger at him."—Cleveland Leader.

A Scientific Request.

"Well," remarked the gentleman to whom Tired Teddy had applied for enough coin to secure a drink, "you are the most perfect specimen of the genus hobo I have ever seen."

"Yes, dat's right," returned Teddy, "an' it's fer dis reason I'm tryin' to preserve meself in alcohol. Can't you help me out?"

He got the dime.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Fractions.

"Suppose," suggested the teacher, "that you take a piece of beefsteak and cut it into halves, then cut the halves into quarters, the quarters into eighths, and the eighths into sixteenths, into what could the sixteenth be cut?"

"Hash," responded Tommy, whose mother kept a boarding house.

And the class in fractions was dismissed.—London Tid-Bits.

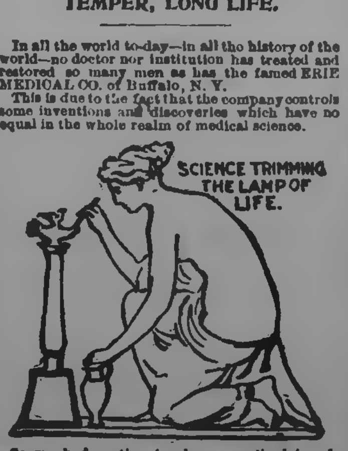
Free Trial To Any Honest Man

The Foremost Medical Company in the World in the Cure of Weak Men Makes this Offer.

HEALTH AND ENERGY ASSURED. HAPPY MARRIAGE, GOOD TEMPER, LONG LIFE.

In all the world to-day—in all the history of the world—no doctor nor institution has treated and restored so many men as has the famed ERIE MEDICAL CO. of Buffalo, N. Y.

This is due to the fact that the company controls some inventions and discoveries which have no equal in the whole realm of medical science.



SCIENCE TRIMMING THE LAMP OF LIFE.

So much deception has been practiced in advertising that this grand old company now for the first time makes this startling offer:—

They will send their costly and magically effective appliance and a whole month's course of restorative remedies, positively on trial without expense to any honest and reliable man!

Not a dollar need be advanced—not a penny paid—till results are known to and acknowledged by the patient.

The Erie Medical Company's appliance and remedies have been talked about and written about all over the world, till every man has heard of them.

They restore or create strength, vigor, healthy tissue and new life.

They quickly stop drains on the system that sap the energy.

They cure nervousness, despondency and all the effects of evil habits, excesses, overwork, etc.

They give full strength, development and tone to every portion and organ of the body.

Failure is impossible and age is no barrier.

This "Trial without Expense" offer is limited by the company to a short time, and application must be made at once.

No C. O. D. scheme, no bogus philanthropy nor deception, no exposure—a clean business proposition by a company of high financial and professional standing.

Write to the ERIE MEDICAL COMPANY, BUFFALO, N.Y., and refer to seeing the account of their offer in this paper.

HERE IS AGE FOR YOU

REMARKABLE COLLECTION OF STONE IMPLEMENTS FROM AFRICA.

Over 100,000 Years Old—Found in a Spot Which May Have Been the Garden of Eden—Great Scientists and Archæologists Puzzled.

Forty centuries look down upon you!' cried Napoleon, as he marshalled his soldiers to battle under the shadow of the Pyramids. The Pyramids were not built yesterday, but in the light of recent archaeological discoveries they must be regarded as very recent works of man.

Visitors at the British Museum may examine a collection of stone implements in a remarkably perfect state of preservation, to which the most expert archaeologists of to-day ascribe an age of not less than from one hundred thousand to two hundred thousand years. It is the most recent acquisition to the museum, and is a portion of a collection made last year in the deserts of Somaliland by Mr. H. W. Sexton-Karr, a well-known English archaeologist and big game hunter. He was the first explorer, in 1885, of the Mount St. Elias range, in North America. More recently he has confined his explorations and hunting expeditions to Southwestern Asia and Eastern Africa, and has amassed a large and very valuable collection of prehistoric remains. Three years ago he made a thorough study of the paleolithic collections in England, notably that of Sir John Evans of the Royal Society, and with that savant gave a great deal of time to prehistoric research.

On account of the rich finds in the upper Nile Valley by Professor Flinders Petrie, the eminent Egyptologist, Mr. Sexton-Karr, was led to believe that diligent exploration in the regions farther to the south and east would be productive of great additions to the scientific knowledge of prehistoric man. Accordingly, early last year he started in to make a general survey of the Eastern African deserts. At first he was rewarded by the discovery of a large number of stray flints in the vicinity of Thebes, and from the condition and localities in which they were found the explorer felt certain that they had no historic connection with the comparatively modern temples and pyramids of Egypt. Encouraged by this success, he pressed further into the desert, in the hope of finding authentic traces of the lost flint mines, which he believed had existed in that region.

He directed his journeyings into the land of the Bedouins, and by constant intercourse with the nomads, endeavored to learn from them the whereabouts of any remains of topographical conditions which gave promise of satisfying his quest. After hundreds of miles of fruitless wanderings over a waterless and treeless country he would be rewarded now and again by some little discovery, often of indifferent value in itself, but sufficient to keep alive the hope that he was on the right track. Finally late in November of last year, in the hidden cliff plateaus of the Wady Sheik, accompanied by his caravan of Bedouins and camels, the intrepid scientist came upon appearances of ruined cities of vast extent, stretching for twenty miles or more across the desert, and here unmistakable evidences of abandoned mines of great antiquity were found. Each of the mines was characterized by its own special type of implements, which experts have since agreed are of the greatest possible interest and were previously unknown to science.

Scattered all over the region were found stone axes, wedges, spear heads, rings, dirks, sickle shaped knives and hundreds of stone truncheons, resembling a policeman's baton, with which the other articles were probably shaped. Many of these evidently lay as the workmen had last left them when they went home to dinner, thousands of years before Thebes or Memphis were even dreamed of. The implements were found in a fine state of preservation. On the long, low hills of Central Somaliland great numbers of the stone tools were discovered, once buried deep for concealment, but now each raised on a little pyramid of solidified gravel. They appear not to have been subjected to river action, as the remains found in the valley of the Nile and its branches. Many of the best of the specimens Mr. Seton-Karr loaded on to his pack camels, and after thoroughly scouring the country for a great distance, returned to the shore of the Red Sea and sailed with his treasures for England. Although a diligent search had been made for fossil mammalian remains, which might assist in establishing with a greater degree of certainty the antiquity of the discoveries, few were found in close proximity to the ancient mines, yet Mr. Sexton-Karr believes he has visited the only paleolithic city yet discovered.

In London the newly found relics of the Stone Age were exhibited before the Royal Society, and the archaeologists agree that the implements date from a period not far remote from the very infancy of man's development of the mechanic arts. Furthermore, they show a universal similarity in the oldest implements yet discovered in all parts of the world, implying an intercourse between Europe, Asia and Africa for purposes of trade in flint spear and arrow heads, if not a unity of race over the greater part of the inhabited world at that early time. Analogous remains, but hardly of such undoubted antiquity, have been found further north in Africa, and in South Africa, India, the valley of the Euphrates, Central Italy and the valley of the Manzanares, in Spain. Mr. Seton-Karr has ingeniously suggested that Central Somaliland may, indeed, be the site of the Garden of Eden. He claims that he found four rivers which might be identified with those of the first chapters of the book of Genesis, and other landmarks which, he contends not without seriousness, encourage him in the belief that he may have really trod the virgin acres of our first parents. The aridity of the Somali deserts to-day gives no suggestion of the fertility and luxuriance of Eden, and even the enthusiastic archaeologists of the Royal Society are inclined to think that Eden must have been located in a more favored region of the earth, even with due allowance for many possible changes in climate and topography in the time that has elapsed since the fall. Sir John Evans says of the collection: "The paleolithic discoveries of Mr. Seton-Karr in Egypt and Somaliland have assisted in bringing over the interval between paleolithic man in Britain and in India and have added another link to the chain of evidence by which the original cradle of the human family may eventually be identified. They certainly tend to prove an identity of race between the inhabitants of Asia, Africa and Europe."

"Answering" a Letter.

The average person does not "answer" a letter at all. He simply waits until the spirit moves and then "writes" to the one to whom a letter is due, saying everything and telling everything, presumably, except that which the correspondent has asked about. The letter to be answered is probably mislaid, or is not near at hand, and so the questions therein are unheeded and when the friend or relative who asked for information receives the long-looked-for letter, it is a means of disappointment rather than satisfaction, and is, in reality, anything but an "answer." Bear this fact in mind, when next you write to any of your correspondents and write with their last letter at hand, read it through carefully and reply to each question as you go along and you will thus prove yourself "one correspondent in a thousand." When you stop to think of it, why does not a query on paper require an answer quite as much as one pronounced verbally, and why should we not feel that it is as much of an impoliteness to neglect the one as the other? To be sure, your friends cannot expect you always to answer a letter by return mail, nor the same day; such a correspondence would often prove a burden to them as well as yourself—but they certainly have the right to expect a reasonably prompt reply to their epistles and an "answer" in the full meaning of the word. There are correspondents, of course, who deserve to be ignored. The person who writes for information, or to ask a favor for his own accommodation, failing to enclose a stamp for reply, is more impolite in so doing than you would be in failing to respond. It is not the value of the stamp nor the trouble of replying that justifies you in so acting, it is the lack of courtesy on the part of one person that precludes the possibility of discourtesy on the part of the other. For there is courtesy and lack of courtesy in letter writing, indeed there is, and alas, it is to be feared that the majority of us are guilty of a lack of it.

Why Called Tumblers.

Every day we drink out of a tumbler. Why is the large glass that holds our milk and water so-called? Years ago Prof. Max Muller was giving a luncheon at All Souls' College, Oxford, to the Princess Alice, the wife of the Grand Duke of Hesse-Darmstadt and the second daughter of Queen Victoria. There were not a dozen guests besides the Princess and her husband, and a very agreeable luncheon we had, with talk on all kinds of interesting subjects.

But what excited the curiosity of all strangers present was a set of little round bowls of silver, about the size of a large orange. They were brought round filled to the brim with the famous ale brewed in the college. These, we are told, were tumblers, and we were speedily shown how they came by their names—a fitting lesson for the guests of a philologist. When one of these little bowls was empty it was placed upon the table mouth downward. Instantly, so perfect was the balance, it flew back to its proper position as if asking to be filled again. No matter how it was treated—trundled along the floors, balanced carefully on its side, dropped suddenly upon the soft, thick carpet—up it rolled again and settled itself with a few gentle shakings and swayings into its place, like one of those India rubber tumbling dolls babies delight in.

This, then, was the origin of our word tumbler, at first made of silver, as are all these All Souls' tumblers. Then, when glass became common, the round glasses that stood on a flat base superseded the exquisitely balanced silver spheres, and stole their names so successfully that you have to go to All Souls' to see the real thing.—Philadelphia Times.

When the Earth Was Young.

Some naturalists are of the opinion that the whale was once a land animal, and that it was forced to take to water as a means of protection.

His Reason.

"Why don't you go to work?" asked the housewife.

"It all comes o' bein' too well educated," replied Meandering Mike.

"A proper education does not encourage a man to despise honest toil."

"I don't despise it. I've made up my mind dozens o' times to go to work. But widout fail, jes' ez I'd got it all settled dat I was goin' to ask somebody fur a job in a week or two, I'd run acrost one o' dese articles dat says de sun or one o' the planets is goin' to 'et loose an' smash the eart' into a bunch of sizzlin' debris, an' den I'd hafter jes' lay down an' say, 'What's de use?'"—Washington Star.

250,000 CURED.

Thousands of young men are made nervous wrecks, unfit for business, social pleasures or home duties by evil habits in youth, later excesses, or private diseases. W. C. Andrews, of Akron, O., says: "I read this paper and have seen many reports of remarkable cures made by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan. I decided to treat with them. Indiscretion was the cause of my trouble. I was weak and nervous; no ambition; back weak; pimples on the face; thin and haggard; eyes sunken and cheeks hollow; dreams and drains at night; memory poor; varicocele and weak parts; irritable; sinking spells; specks before the eyes; lack of confidence; no energy; and many other complaints. I had tried fourteen doctors, bought four electric belts took scores of bottles of patent medicines—all failed. I tried the New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, and it cured me. I am a Man Again. I have gained twenty-six pounds and am strong mentally, physically and sexually. It is a wonderful treatment."

IF LOVE WERE OTHER THAN PERFECT.

If love were other than a perfect thing,
Love were no gain, but only all a grief,
And better were to check its blossoming
Ere one poor bud could struggle into leaf;
To kill it in the spring,
If love were other than a perfect thing.

If love were other than most sweet of all,
Love were the bitterest gift of bitter fate,
And better were to spurn beyond recall
Its magic cup more perilous than hate.
Its sweetness were but gall,
If love were other than most sweet of all.

If love were other than the love of you,
Love were a poverty, and nothing worth,
And all the task that memory had to do
Would be to loathe the hour that gave it birth.
Love were not sweet nor true
If love were other than the love of you.

But love is love, and you are you, and I
Am I that dare to love you with a will,
Knowing that love is perfect, true and high,
And always greater than its greatest ill;
Knowing it cannot die,
Since love is love of you, and I am I.
—J. Colmore in Woman's Journal.

A VILLAGE ROMANCE.

There could be no doubt about it. Molly had been a different girl since she and John Lock had been "keeping company." At least this was what the village gossips declared, and surely no one would have the temerity to contradict authorities so well informed. And the village gossips had spoken truth this time. Molly, the pride of all Longville, the pretty country girl whom nature had endowed with a superabundance of animal spirits; Molly, the fascinating coquette, had been subdued, and John Lock, the village carpenter's son, had conquered. At least that was what all Longville thought.

John in himself, although boasting no ancient lineage, was, as the laborers termed him, "a cut above the ordinary run." Somehow without having had any educational advantages he had developed a strong love for books, and when the day's work in the little carpenter's shop was done he would go out into the soft summer eve, and a brisk walk over the hills would bring him to the rugged cliffs by the sea. Here he would throw himself down, and as long as the red shoots of the setting sun gave light over the land he would read with rapturous intent, and when at last it had disappeared in a blaze of color in an opalescent sea he would watch the stars and talk learnedly of their distances and of what constellations they formed part.

The good people of Longville could never quite understand John. He would astound them with his enthusiastic descriptions of fleeting clouds, would bid them hear a poem in the constant roaring of the sea and tell them that there were new worlds, of which they knew nothing, in pictures and books. But John was genial and kind hearted, and so, although his personality eluded definite analysis by them, they yet recognized him as the village favorite for the humbler and maybe more useful qualities of good fellowship and unselfish courage.

It was little wonder that when Molly and John commenced "keeping company" that Longville should talk. Never two persons had less in common, so far as temperament and tastes were concerned, and yet somehow, for a reason which even old Mrs. Knight, who had seen two generations of village courtships, could not explain, these two people of opposite dispositions were destined to share life's storm and sunshine together.

How they came to be engaged I cannot say. There was a meeting of the two, when the usual cheery "Good night, John," and "Good night, Molly," ceased to have the old prosaic significance. The untamed, restless little heart of Molly beat convulsively, and the roses on her cheeks burned a deeper hue when that evening John stopped her and insisted on her talking with him. I was not there, so that of what was said I am unaware.

This much, however, all Longville soon knew—that John Lock and Molly Lane had become sweethearts. How the good wives enjoyed standing at the doorway of their cottages and discussing the probabilities of a village wedding and what it involved! These good souls would have made the devious, sinuous track of these two lives much straighter and more direct than it was fated to be.

No event is too wonderful to become familiarized with, and so it was that the wonder ceased, and Molly and John for months pursued their pleasant way, dreaming the old love dreams common to youth since the world began. It was true that sometimes John imagined "his Molly" was restless and scarcely contented. She seemed to sigh for new opportunities of conquest. The old spirit, which he thought dead, reared its head again and gave warning of, although it never actually broke out in, open rebellion. Then John would be troubled and would search his generous, simple heart in the hope of discovering some excuse for the discontent which only too obviously was smoldering in his sweetheart's mind.

One week in the midsummer of the following year Squire Hurst's only son came of age, and the event was celebrated with great eclat by the whole of the inhabitants of the village. The lovely old park surrounding the hall was thrown open, and numerous were the al fresco attractions provided to amuse the assembled guests. The sports of the day terminated with a grand villagers' ball, at which the heir to Longville Hall himself was present. There had been many a rumor that Harry Hurst had been "a gay young spark" in his time, but tonight all ugly memories were lost in the pleasure and excitement of his presence among the common folk at the ball.

All seemed happy save one, and that was John. In spite of his best attempts to suppress it a great pain was at his heart—almost as severe as a physical one—as he saw his Molly being claimed for dance after dance by the squire's son. How she seemed to enjoy the distinction, too, as with flushed cheeks she was waltzed around in a whirl of excitement!

And when the evening's amusements had ended Molly seemed cross when John pushed his way to the front and claimed his right of seeing her from the park to her father's cottage gate. She was irritable and moody. John had never known her so before, and it was with a heavy, aching heart that he kissed her good night. Nor was the unhappiness of his mind diminished when for several nights after she refused to take her customary walk with him.

At length the climax came, and one evening, after he had succeeded in inducing her to come with him over the hills, he received the dread ultimatum which he had almost expected would fall. Molly was frank. She avowed shyly that she did not and could not love him and then, with a pretty, disdainful toss of the head, declared that she would be glad if he did not worry her any more. John took the blow quietly, but the agony of soul he suffered no one but himself knew.

Then grave whispers and nods and winks passed around from house to house in the village. There were talks in bated breath of secret meetings at night, and of Molly and the young squire being seen together. And John would be questioned, but he never answered. His sorrow was for himself alone—so he would tell himself—it could not be shared by the curious. It was his wont to go and sit by the sea, and there find a sort of melancholy satisfaction in the low wail of the billows as they broke in at the foot of the cliffs. As for Molly, after one final attempt to reclaim her, John avoided her. To have met her would have increased the inconvenience of both, and in his case would have opened afresh the wounds but hardly healed. In the months that followed the whispers took an uglier form, and Longville delighted its soul at last in a village scandal.

There was only one who ever defended the fair name of Molly when it was made a byword with the young roughs of the place, who loafed outside the village inn or at the roadsides. John was never known to have become so incensed as when one evening in his hearing one of these thoughtless youths mentioned inappropriately Molly's name and coupled it with a foul epithet. Then he thrashed the young lout within an inch of his life.

After awhile the sad incident was forgotten—at least until Molly's return to her home again. Then trouble began anew. She was very much altered, and the roses had faded from her cheeks. In tearful sorrow she would sit and nurse her baby all day long.

The last act in the tragedy came when one day Molly's father received a note from the hall. The steward brought it round, and as Molly's father was growing old and feeble and his sight waning the steward read the note aloud. It was a formally worded epistle giving the poor, old, sorrow stricken parent a month's notice because the squire felt that it was "not conducive to the morals of the village that people of Molly's stamp should be harbored" in the midst of his cottagers. Needless to say Molly's father was almost broken hearted at the thought of leaving the house he had occupied for so long, while as for Molly herself her distress was too piteous for words.

One morning not long after John stepped down the old roadway, his face haggard, but the expression firm, resolute and determined. He presented himself at the door of Molly's cottage and was admitted. It was only a look they exchanged, and the floodgates were opened again, and, having sobbed on his shoulder awhile, Molly gradually recovered herself, while John, with a choking sensation in the throat which he tried in vain to keep down, avowed: "I have always waited for you, Molly. I knew you would come back to me."

"But I can't. You forget that is his," and she pointed in her anguish to the cot wherein the babe was slumbering peacefully.

John didn't turn his head to look, but he took Molly in his arms again.

And love was consummated in service.—London Sun.

The Newest Stationery.

The latest fad in paper is a sheet the size of the envelope, which goes into its envelope without folding. In the usual correspondence size—that small size used for a hurried note or invitation—the style goes very well, but when it comes to larger sizes stationers say it will not take. In this connection it is reported in the New York Herald that the most popular style is a sheet of paper which folds in half and fits into an envelope which has a square flap. This style comes in billet, note and letter sizes, and the envelopes are graduated to match. The favorite colors are white, cream azure, regimental gray and bond blue. The fancy tints of pinks and heliotropes, yellows and greens, though carried to meet a certain demand for them, are considered in poor taste.

A very dainty little machine is made for weighing letters, useful to a woman with a large correspondence or to a business woman who must needs send letters inclosing samples or circulars.

Smooth Roads and Traffic.

The increase of efficiency in vehicles having a smooth surface on which to travel is very great. Perfect rails are a necessity for the steam engine, and a smooth roadbed is essential if high speed is to be obtained. The motor carriage, which has already become an established fact abroad, depends for its efficiency on good road surface. The bicycle gains enormously in ease of propulsion, in speed and in adaptability to new fields of usefulness by having good roads. About these three there is no dispute, but it seems necessary to prove by argument, illustration and statistics that carriages, wagons, trucks, carts and all other vehicles are equally benefited by a smooth traveling surface.—Exchange.

Cure all that by making Rich, Red Blood and Restoring Shattered Nerves.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

Not always; people who claim to cure it always claim what is not true. But it can be cured if taken in time. If you are threatened by consumption—if you are bloodless, anæmic, pale, breathless on slight exertion; if you have a cough or spit blood,

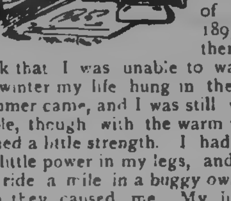
YOU ARE THREATENED.

Thousands of anæmic people who would have gone into decline and consumption in a little time, have been cured and made strong men and women by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

DOCTORS GAVE HIM UP.

From the Sherbrooke Gazette.

When a man faces what medical authorities tell him is certain death, and regains health and strength, he is naturally grateful to the medicine that has restored him. Such a man is Mr. James Owen, one of the best known farmers in the vicinity of Johnville, Que. Mr. Owen tells his story as follows:—"On the 17th of December, 1894, I was attacked with la grippe. A week later the trouble developed into pneumonia in its worst form and I did not leave my bed until the first of March, 1895, and then I was so weak that I was unable to walk alone. All winter my life hung in the balance. Summer came, and I was still weak and feeble, though with the warm weather I gained a little strength. I had however, but little power in my legs, and I could not ride a mile in a buggy owing to the pain they caused me. My lungs also troubled me and I raised a great deal of matter. I then consulted the best doctor we had in this section of the province. He told me candidly that I was past medical help. He said that my left lung was in a state of collapse, and that my right lung was also affected. This was in July, 1895. For the next three months every day seemed to draw me nearer and nearer the end. I was so pressed for breath at times that I could not walk any distance without stopping to regain it. In the month of November I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It was certainly a folorn hope, and I admit I did not expect much benefit from them, but took them rather to please a friend who urged me to do so. The result is they have made a well man of me. I have not a pain about me. My breath comes as freely as it ever did, and I am strong and vigorous. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have given me a new lease of life, and I am glad to let everybody know it.



FACE WHITE AS CHALK.

From the Sun, Orangeville, Ont

Some months ago Maggie, the fifteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Sweeney, of John street, of this town, began to fail both in health and spirits. Her face was almost as white as chalk, her appetite very fickle, and her limbs began to swell. Notwithstanding her growing weakness she persisted in attending school, until one day her teacher advised her to go home, and not to return until she felt better. At the same time the teacher, who knew the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in such cases, advised her to take them. The advice was followed and Mrs. Sweeney told our reporter that almost from the outset there was an improvement in her daughter's condition. Her appetite became better, the color retuned to her face, and the severe headaches that had made her so miserable, vanished, and she is now feeling better than she has done for many months.

It is quite evident that this young maiden was suffering from a lack of blood, as do so many young girls who are just at a critical point in life, and it is quite as apparent that there is no other remedy the equal of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in such cases. They enrich the blood, stimulate the nerves, and build up the entire system, and mothers will act prudently if they insist upon their daughters taking an occasional box. We know from experience that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done great good in Orangeville and vicinity, and there is scarcely a day that our reporter does not come in contact with some one who has a good word to say for this wonderful medicine.

AN APPEAL TO THE READER.

If you have used Dr. Williams, Pink Pills and derived benefit from them, will you write us and let us know? If you have been disappointed, will you write us just the same? We cannot expect to cure every case. Anyone who pretends to do so is unworthy of confidence. We do business in good faith. If by experience we learn that some forms of disorder are not cured by our pills, we want to know it, so that we may refuse to sell pills for such cases. We never sell pills except when we think they will cure.

Thousands of People who are not really ill require a tonic at this season of the year. Close confinement in imperfectly ventilated houses, shops and school rooms during the winter months, makes people feel depressed, languid and "out of sorts." Unless nature is assisted in throwing off the poison that has accumulated in the system during these months people fall an easy prey to disease. A TONIC IS WHAT IS NEEDED, and Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People is the greatest tonic medicine in the world. These pills make rich, red blood, strengthen the nerves and make dull, tired, listless men, momen and children, feel bright, active and strong.

BUT BE SURE YOU GET THE GENUINE, always put up in Wooden boxes the wrapper around which bears the full trade mark "DR WILLIAMS PINK PILLS FOR PALE PEOPLE." Sold by all dealers in medicine, but if in doubt send direct to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and they will be mailed post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.00.

A TEACHER'S ADVICE.

Miss Aglae Caret, St. Joseph, Que., writes:—"I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with the most gratifying results. I am a teacher by profession, and last winter as a result of hard work, I became weak and run down. My appetite was very poor, and I had hardly the courage to undertake my occupation, I was advised to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and their effect was marvellous. I have never enjoyed better health than I am doing now. In recommending them to others I feel that I am only doing a service to our common humanity."

A MINISTER'S ADVICE,

Rev. John Perry, Baptist minister, Wickham, Ont., writes:—"I have much pleasure in recommending your valuable medicine. I was troubled with indigestion for more than twenty years, and at times suffered much. I tried many medicines during that time, and found no cure until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have not only fully restored my health, but have made me feel ten years younger. I therefore advise their use to all who are run down in health, or feel old age coming on. I am now seventy-six years of age, and have been preaching for 54 years."

SCIATIC RHEUMATISM.

From the Napanee Beaver.

The life of one afflicted by rheumatism is at times almost unbearable. The sufferer is racked with pain until he thinks even death would be a relief from this painful malady. Among those who have suffered much and found relief is Mr. Samuel Sparks, a market gardener well known in Napanee and vicinity, Mr. Sparks recently related to a reporter how he was restored to health and strenght. He said:—"for several years I have been a great sufferer from rheumatism in my limbs. The doctor who attended me called it sciatic rheumatism, and the trouble was always worse in the spring than at any other season. In the spring of 1895 I had a very severe attack, and was much worse than I had ever been before. I was not able to do work even of the lightest kind. I suffered the greatest agony and could get no relief either sitting up or lying down. At times I was as helpless as a little child, for my legs felt as though they had become paralyzed. Then the trouble seemed to settle in my bowels, and the doctor said it was consumption of the bowels and that I could not live much longer. As the doctor could do nothing for me I determined to make another fight for life and try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I felt that even if they would give me relief it would be a blessing. Great was my astonishment, however, when within forty-eight hours after beginning the use of the pills I found relief. I kept on taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, every day growing stronger and stronger, until at last I was a new man, and again able to do as hard a day's work as any man in the township. I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too much, as in my case they restored health after all other means had failed."

SCIATICA.

Have you acute darting pain—a pain almost like hot needles—in the hip, down the back of the thigh? Does it extend to the knee and perhaps sometimes to the ankle? Is the course taken by the pain tender to the touch? Cure it—it is Sciatica. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are always successful in curing this trouble.

PRIVATEERS ALLOWED

NEITHER THE UNITED STATES OR SPAIN BOUND BY THE PARIS AGREEMENT.

Special to the Times.

WASHINGTON, April 6—The view of Sir Richard Webster as to the right in the event of wa rof seach ofneutral ships by Spain or the United States, delivered in th eBritish House of Commons yesterday, are concurred in by the State Department.

It is pointed out that the capture of contraband is legitimate during hostilities, and that search is necessary to determine the character of a ship's cargo.

The fact that neither Spain nor the United States are signatories of the Paris convention has caused considerable discussion as to the possibility of privateering in the event of war. It has been suggested that the powers might attempt to treat the privateers of either nation as pirates. An official of the State Department said to-day however, that it had been held by the best authorities of international law that the declaration at Paris that "privateering is and remains abolished," is merely a compact, and cannot affect international law; consequently no nation by reason of its being a member of the Paris treaty can treat privateers of non-signatories a spirates, nor is it prohibited from using privateers itself when at war with a nation not a member of the Paris convention.

Gladstone Worse

LONDON, April 6.—Renewed anxiety is expressed to-day regarding the health of Mr. Gladstone.

For the Skating Rink.

Skating sets are to be all the vogue. A stylish skating set suitable for wear at the rink consists of a hat, boa and muff. The hat is made of deep violet velvet, and fits closely to the head something like a peasant girl's cap. It is edged with a narrow band of marten. In the direct front two white birds are caught. They look as if they had just alighted upon the fair wearer's hair. The boa is made of fluffy loops of black chiffon, edged with pipings of violet satin, and nestling among the soft folds are the heads of furry little animals. Sometimes these small animals have wonderfully brilliant eyes, made of rhinestones, perhaps, or they have gleaming yellow eyes of topaz. The muff is a most elaborate affair. It is made of shirred violet velvet, finished at each side with a gorgeous frill of violet satin in a shade or two lighter than the muff. For the trimming marten tails are coiled in curious shapes, with the ends of two or three tails dangling below the muff.

A Hint to the Middle-Aged.

If women would but realize it, no one but very young women should wear a broad-brimmed hat; the shading of the features with such a broad brim helps to accentuate every line and wrinkle.

Weaning.

With colts, calves and lambs dropped in the spring, now is a good time to wean. So far as their growth and condition will admit, all young stock of these kinds should be weaned while there is plenty of good pasture. But in doing this care should be taken that they are well accustomed to eating before weaning. It is important to maintain a vigorous, thrifty growth from birth to maturity; and young stock must be well accustomed to eating at weaning time or there will be a check in the growth. For this reason at this season it will pay to give a little wheat bran, shorts or ground grain. A very little ration given while they are on good pasture is all that is necessary, as the quantity of the ration can be gradually increased as the feed in the pasture fails. But enough should be fed now to accustom them to eating. In weaning there will be less fretting among the young stock if they are left in the pasture where they are accustomed to run and the dams are taken away. Generally it is best to make the separation complete at once. Sometimes, with colts and lambs, it may be best to let them suck two or three times rather for the benefit of the dam than of the young animal. The same object can be secured by milking out the udder two or three times; bathing it with camphor water will be a great help, especially if there is any indication of fever or swelling.

It will be best for the dams if they are put on dry feed for four or five days, or until the milk dries up. In this way the risk of injury may be greatly lessened.

The Black Velvet Ribbon Blouse. Among the most becoming of the new fall models is the blouse composed of interlaced black velvet ribbon. This is to be worn over a silk blouse of some brilliant color, preferably cerise. This gown is of fine black cloth and the skirt has a trimming of black velvet ribbon to correspond.

Shetland Wool.

The chief characteristics of Shetland hosiery is the extreme fineness of the wool used. This wool is obtained from the native Shetland sheep, an animal of decidedly meagre appearance, and which a southern flockmaster would be inclined to "have none of." Nevertheless, this humble beast, picking up a scanty living on the bleak hillsides where its larger relatives would starve produces, wool of remarkable fineness; and when it is mentioned that the natural colors vary from black and white to an endless variety of grays, browns, fawns and chestnuts of many shades (locally called "moorit,") it will be seen that the Shetland people have ready to their hand raw material of the most suitable kind for their purpose.

In connection with the fineness of the wool, the method of taking it from the sheep is worthy of note. It is not clipped or shorn in the usual way; but at the proper season is literally plucked from the backs of the animals, it being averred that shearing tends to deteriorate the quality of every succeeding fleece; and, of course, to keep the yield of wool as fine as possible is a great desideratum. The plucking referred to usually appears to strangers to be a cruel expedient; but in reality the sheep seems to suffer no more from it than from ordinary shearing.—Chambers' Journal.

POND'S EXTRACT

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29, 1894.
I have used "Pond's Extract" for many years and always insist upon my patients getting "Pond's," not the ordinary Extract, which is often a very poor article. W. K. BROWN, M. D.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9, 1895.
I use Pond's Extract a great deal in my practice. I think it very valuable in all venous enlargements.
J. L. BRADFORD, M. D.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., Nov. 27, 1894.
I have been using Pond's Extract in my practice for twenty years. I frequently have the experience you mention of druggists insisting they can put up as good as yours. I don't believe it. I use Pond's Extract a great deal as an antiseptic in combination with glycerine and carbolic acid. I think it far superior to any antiseptic known.

Railway Note

—The Grand Trunk will lay 120 miles of new track this summer between Niagra Falls, Sarnia and Windsor. The new rail will weigh 80 pounds to the yard; that which is down at present weighs from 56 to 66 pounds.

Joint Committees

The sub-committee of the Town and County Councils will be called to meet on next Saturday afternoon to make arrangements for their reports regarding joint matters such as the proposed House of Refuge and the Mud Lake Bridge.

Acknowledgement

The committee of management of the Peterborough Protestant Home gratefully acknowledge the following donations for March: Mrs. J. R. Stratton, cake and bottle jam; Mrs. McGill, Toronto papers; Mrs. Spillsbury, Clothing; a friend, reading matter.

Judgment Reserved

At the County Court yesterday the case of James White proprietor of the National Hotel, against the Street Railway Company for damages alleged to be sustained through the death of a horse by coming in contact with a "live" electric wire, was heard, and judgment reserved.

Miss Melville's New Premises

Miss Melville has removed her fancy fancy goods' business to handsome new premises on Hunter street, next door to Clark and Gibson's jewellery establishment. The new store is a model of neatness and helps very materially to enhance the appearance of the large and well-selected stock on view. The superior class of goods carried by Miss Melville and the exceedingly reasonable prices charged should substantially increase her already large trade. The reader when in search of anything in the fancy goods' line, should certainly inspect Miss Melville's stock.

An Honored Position

The Toronto World says: Mr. Lionel King of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club is a candidate for the vice-presidency of the C.L.A. Mr. King is a well-known lacrosse player and is now a member of the Executive of the Hockey Association. Peterborough feels entitled to a representative on the C.L. A. Board and in Mr. King they have a good candidate.

Death of Mrs. Potter

The Kingston papers contain notices of the death of Mrs. Potter, mother of the Rev. J. G. Potter, of St. Andrew's church, Peterborough, which took place on Tuesday last, at 11.30 a.m. Mrs. Potter was 56 years of age, and leaves a family of six sons and five daughters. The deceased lady was beloved by all who knew her, and her death is lamented by a very large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Fire Sale at Mason's

The recent fire at E. F. Mason & Co's. has had the effect of slightly damaging by smoke the immense stock of groceries and provisions carried by this firm, and in order to facilitate renovation and make room for new goods, a clearing sale has been inaugurated and is now in full swing. Everything must go, and at almost your own price. Don't procrastinate! Call to-day!

A Burglar Captured

Mr. J. B. Pearce, the Norwood postmaster, arrested a man who, there can be little doubt, was one of the burglars who operated on the safe in the Norwood post office on Tuesday morning. The man, who calls himself James Macdonald, says he belongs to Toronto. He was brought to Peterborough by Constable McWilliams, of Havelock, and Constable Parkinson, of the Dominion Police, Ottawa. He carried a complete "kit" of burglar's tools, a revolver and about $10 in cash, besides a canvas bag well filled with postage stamps. The fellow will appear forpreliminary trial on Saturday.

Daring Burglary

It isn't often that we are honored with a visit from the "midnight mechanic," but on Tuesday night, or rather Wednesday morning, we got the call. When our chief entered the Times Bookstore yesterday morning he noticed a large pane of glass in the panel of the door leading into his office broken. Further investigation shewed that the thief or thieves forced the door leading from the rear hallway into the manager's office, then smashed the window above referred to, and after rifling the stamp till in the bookstore and smashing open the money compartment of the gas metre, which works on the principle of a "nickle in the slot" machine, and abstracting the contents—about six or seven dollars—the rascals decamped. The police are certain to capture the culprit or culprits, and a term in the Central Prison will probably be the result.

Another Robbery

Robberies are becoming numerous these days. In addition to the burglarly at the Times Bookstore, referred to elsewhere, the house of Mr. John Delare, on Park-st., near Gladstone terrace, was entered on Wednesday morning. It appears the family retired about eleven o'clock on Tuesday night. On arising yesterday morning they noticed that the kitchen window was slightly raised and that the clothes on a rack had been disordered. A search showed that a pair of trousers, in the pockets of which was $18 in cash, had been stolen. Tuesday was pay day at the lock works, of which Mr. Delare is an employee, and he had left the money in the trousers. Tramps have been seen around the vicinity a lot of late, and it is suspected that the crime was committed by one of them, though no clue was left. None of the family was disturbed during the night. A gold watch and chain lying beside the bed were unnoticed by the burglar.

AN APRIL WEDDING

A Pretty Wedding in a Norwood Home Yesterday Afternoon

The residence of Mr. James Harper, Ridge Street, Norwood, was the scene of a very happy event yesterday afternoon, it being the marriage of his of his daughter, Minnie A., to Mr. Charles H. Cress, the popular night agent at the C.P.R. Rev. J. F. Sommerville, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, made them one, in the presence of 30 guests, Miss Mabel Harper acting as bridesmaid, while the groom was attended by Mr. Bert Howard, of Toronto. Following the ceremony a delightful wedding breakfast was served, after which the happy couple left for Detroit, Chicago and other western points, amid a shower of rice and old shoes.

Mr. and Mrs. Cress were the recipients of many costly and useful presents and start forth upon the smiling sea of matrimony with the best wishes of their numerous friends.

The C. W. A. Meet

The Toronto World says:

J. P. Dixon of the Ottawa Bicycle Club has returned to the Capital from his missionary tour in the western part of the province. He writes most encouragingly of the prospects and is confident that the Dominion Day meet will not be at Peterborough. Among other things Mr. Dickson says: "I had considerable encouragement from the western clubs on my recent trip and feel quite satisfied that we will receive good substantial support, as all the clubs who have the interest of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association at heart realize that it is necessary for the future success of race meet that it should be sent hereafter to places of such size as can provide the necessary accommodation, not only for the races, but hotel accommodation for visitors, such as will ensure them a pleasant outing, rather than a hardship, as it has been to attend a good many of the race meets in the past, among which I might particularly mention Chatham and Waterloo."

Mayor Bingham, of Ottawa, and Mr. Stratton, M.L.A., of Peterborough, will head their club's delegation at the Wanderers' smoker in Toronto tonight.

Pupils irregular in attendance cannot expect promotion:

In the Senior Fourth Class the total possible number of marks was 390 and the standing of the different members of this class was as follows:

Wallie Wood, 310; Ida Armstrong, 297; Ralph Quinn, 291; Florence Dormer, 285; Daisy Distin, 272; Mabel Crocker, 263; Ross Craig, 262; Bertha Symonds, 260; Bruce Pollock, 250; George Smith, 250; Bruce Armstrong, 226; Pearl Law, 220; Harry Rogers, 219; Frank Eden, 217; Ethel Record, 207; Harry Crocker, 200; Helen Stethem, 186; Maud Long, 155; Eva Moore, 75.

Gordon Logan, 302; May Pollock, 275; Effie Fowler, 269; Claude Rogers, 263; Sid Gibbs, 256; Alex. Gillespie, 251; Howard Bennett, 248; Annie Ferguson, 199; Bessie Rogers, 179, Bruce Gillespie, 168; Ivan Law, 100,.

Sr. Third—Bertha Telford, Evelyn Dormer, Ella Distin.

Jr. Third—Gordon Butcher, Clara Craig, Edna Rogers.

Sr. Second—Herbert Stethem, Bella Long, Annie Pollock.

Jr. Second— Clara Adams, Jennet Quinn, Gertie Hamilton.

Miss Erskine's Room—Sr. Part II.—Tom Hamilton, Leslie Russell, Willie Butcher.

Jr. Part II.—Dave Smith, Kathleen Long, Violet Whittaker.

Sr. Part I.—Percy Hartley, May McCubbin, Wellie Henthorne.

Miss Dawson's Room—Sr. Part II.—Ada Straine, Tillie Graham, George Ferguson.

Jr. Part II—Elsie Pollock, Lillie McCubbin, Fred Wyatt.

Second Tablet—Clara Dodds, Wesley Chrowe and Vincent Pe, Percy Pue.

First Tablet—Paul Graham, Eddie Paterson, Maud Stevens.

The school re-opens after Easter vacation on Monday, April 18. It is hoped that all new pupils, especially for the lower classes, will be present on that date, as the work in thevarious classes will begin at once, and will not be interfered with for the sake of pupils who come later on in theterm.

MR. BRADBURN'S ENTERPRISE

The Port Hope Times Thinks the Town Should Help Him

Mr. T. E. Bradburn who has spent thousands of dollars on the St. Lawrence Hall, transforming it from a public eyesore into a palatial and beautiful hotel property, says that unless he can find a hotel-man willing to lease and furnish the new hotel, he will have to close it up.

Without any encouragement, financial or moral, so far as Port Hopeis concerned, Mr. Bradburn has modestly and without any blast of trumpets, stepped in and given Port Hope that which the citizens have been desirous of having for years past — a modern hotel.

It is now time that Port Hope should show her enterprise and at the same time due appreciation for Mr. Bradburn's courage by stepping into the breech and assist him in getting a good hotel manager to take hold of the new hostelry.

A recent visit to Cobourg was the means of elicitiing the information that already this early in the season, the hotel accommodation of our sister town, as well as numerous private houses, have been taken. There is no reason, with the magnificient new hotel which Port Hope can now boast of, why a sufficient number of these tourist visitors could not be imduced to come here, to ensure to whoever takes the hotel management, financial success.

It will be a great pity and show a lamentable lack of public enterprise on the part of our citizens if the new hotel is allowed to remain closed.

There are several ways in which Port Hope can assist in this matter. The Times suggest sthat the town council and the Board of Trade take the question up and that deputations from each body be appointed to meet Mr. Bradburn fo rthe purpose of promulgating a plan of action. If such a meet- Mr. Bradburn for the purpose of promulgating a plan of action. If such a meeting resulted in nothing but talk; it would at least be an evidence to Mr. Bradburn that the citizens have some interest in his hotel and its future.

Death of Miss Flavelle

Miss Minnie C. Flavelle, who died at her home in Lindsay on Wednesday of last week, was well known in Peterborough, where she spent her girlhood days. She was a sister of Messrs. John and William Flavelle, of Lindsay, and Mr. J. W. Flavelle, of Toronto. Miss Flavelle was for many years identified with the Lindsay dry goods business, conducted by her brother, Mr. Wm. Flavelle, and possessed ability for business of a very high order. Some months ago she submitted to a surgical operation for the removal of a goitire on the neck, and although successfully performed, it subsequently developed cancerous symptoms, and although everything that skill could do to save or prolong her life was done, it was without avail. She passed quietly away on Wednesday of last week, after sufferings which were borne with Christian fortitude and resignation. She was universally respected and beloved by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. The funeral services took place on Friday, and were conducted by Rev. Thos. Manning, who was assisted by Rev. S. J. Shorey, Peterborough, and Rev. T. M. Campbell, Campbellford. Every place of business on Kent street was closed while the funeral cortege was passing down.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

We regret to learn that Mr. John Craig, M.P.P. for Centre Wellington, is dangerously ill. Mr. Craig has many friends in Peterborough, where he spent his youthful days.

—Port Hope Guide: Mrs. J.W. Martin, Canton, who has been out to Peterborough for a couple of weeks, called there on account of the death of her father, returned home to-day.

Lindsay Post: Mr. Jackson Reid, hotelkeeper, Huntsville, was a guest at the Simpson house yesterday and this morning Jackson is the owner of a fast bit of horseflesh, and won a place at most of the district ice meetings during this winter.

Queen Regent Appeals To Queen Victoria.

Spain Shipping Soldiers to Canarys and Philippines.

SPAIN'S GENERALS FIRM.

They Protest to the Queen Regent Against Surrendering Rights In Cuba.

President McKinley Denounced as a Traitor New York Journals Claim that he and Certain Cabinet Ministers Have Been Intriguing With Spain.

(Special to the Times.)

Havana, via Key West, Fla., April 7.—Over two hundred reconcentrados, who left Havana to renew their labors in the country, have been massacred by Spanish troops near Guines. The details, which arrived only a few minutes before I left on the steamer for Key West, are terrible.

HE A TRAITOR?

The Journal asserts that President McKinley has deceived Congress and the country as to his policy. While pretending to be working for the freedom of Cuba he and all his agents including Minister Woodford, at Madrid, have been all the time trying to coerce the patriots to accept Spanish autonomy. There has always been a secret understanding with Spain that the independence of Cuba was not involved in the controversy here, and it has never been the slightest intention at Washington to call Spain to account for the murder of American sailors on the battleship Maine. The President did not send the message to Congress yesterday, but said he would hold it until next Monday, giving as a reason that the message was warlike, and that if promulgated at once the news would cause a massacre of Americans in Havana. At the same time agents of the Administration spread reports in Washington that riots had already broken out in Havana. These reports are absolutely false, and Wall street houses knew two hours in advance of all others that the message was not to go in.

WIDOW APPEALS TO WIDOW.

London, April 7.—It is reported that the Queen Regent of Spain has again appealed to Queen Victoria direct, asking the latter to exert her influence to avert war, and, it is added the Queen touchingly recalls that both Victoria and herself are widows and thus deprived of advisers.

ROTHSCHILD TO THE RESCUE.

Madrid, April 7.—A Paris correspondent telegraphs that he had an interview with Baron Rothschild yesterday, and that the latter informed him that he was purchasing a cruiser to present to Spain, that country having "his warmest sympathy and love."

SPAIN REFUSES TO YIELD.

Madrid, April 7, 2.30 p.m.—It is asserted here that the communication from Rome which the Papal Nuncio and the Minister for Foreign Affairs placed before the Cabinet after the regular meeting had adjourned last night, asked what concessions Spain would make? The Cabinet, it is further stated, decided to reply that the Government "simply reaffirmed its former decisions, already known to President McKinley."

There is no truth in the rumor current last night in Madrid that the United States Government had presented an ultimatum to the Government of Spain demanding that the latter modify within six hours the note presented after the last conference.

SPAIN'S GENERAL FIRM.

New York, April 7.—A special from Madrid says: Distinguished Spanish generals and some members of the Cabinet waited upon the Queen Regent to protest against the surrendering of Spanish rights in Cuba. Among the generals were Lopez, Dominguez, Segura and Dabon.

There is visible agitation in military and naval circles. The feeling is so strong that it is rumored that at the next council of Ministers, the heads of the War and Marine Departments General Correa and Admiral Bermejo, will join Count Xiquena and Senor Gullon in making strong objections to granting further concessions to the United States.

SHIPPING TROOPS.

New York, April 7.—A special from Barcelona, Spain, says: Battalions from the Luchana and other regiments of the line, 1,196 strong, have embarked for the Canary Islands. Transports are getting ready to take two battalions of line artillery to reinforce the troops in the Philippine Islands.

It is reported in shipping circles that the Government has taken forty fast new trans-Atlantic vessels for the auxiliary fleet. The Barcelona bourse, which is even more important than the one in Madrid, has been much agitated.

Impressions here are pessimistic. This city being the chief center of Spanish industry and the most important part of the Kingdom, its 600,000 inhabitants take more interest even than the rest of Spain in the Cuban question. The prosperity of Barcelona's extensive banking, shipping, mercantile and manufacturing interests is involved.

The Catalan provinces have long depended upon the West Indian markets to which they used to send $30,000,000 worth of goods annually before the present insurrection in Cuba.

READY FOR SEA.

New York, April 7—A special from St. Vincent, Cape Verd Islands, says the Spanish torpedo flotilla under command of Commodore Villamil is still here, but expecting to sail for Porto Rico. Each vessel cleared April 2. The whole squadron is ready to go to sea at a moment's notice.

A FUTILE SESSION.

Madrid, April 7.—Great disappointment is experienced at the United States legation at the hitch, now pronounced to be serious, which occurred yesterday. The Spanish Cabinet met at five o'clock last evening and was in session for several hours, but the meeting ended without an announcement that the Cuban armistice proclamation would be issued today. It is still hoped here, now that President McKinley's message to Congress has been postponed, that the original program will be carried out.

LEE LEAVES LAST.

Key West, April 7.—Contrary to the advices received by steamship officials here, Consul General Lee did not arrive here last night. The steamer Mascotte was placed at his disposal, but the arrangements were changed, and General Lee decided that he would come on the Bache after all Americans are out of Havana.

The Mascotte brought about 90 passengers including some of the most prominent Spanish and Cuban families, who are bound for the north. Many of them left without baggage, which will be forwarded to-day. All were in a state of semi-panic.

NINETY DEATHS

Bear Silent Witness to the Ravages of Kidney Disease.

An alarming fact—but statistics show that in post mortem examinations as to death from all causes, that in over 90 per cent. of such cases kidney disease is present. This almost incredible statement is borne out by years of comparison by most eminent medical men. A warning to humanity that the percentage of those not cursed with kidney taint is very small. South American Kidney Cure relieves in six hours—is nature's preventive—clears the clogged parts—heals and permanently cures.

VOLCANO IN ERUPTION

HAWAIIAN ISLANDERS GREATLY EXCITED AT THE TURN OF EVENTS.

(Special to the Times)

San Francisco, April 7—Great excitement prevails in Hawaiian Islands, according to passengers who arrived on the steamer Alameda. Two weeks ago the lava in Manua Loa, from the observations taken at the signal station on the mountain, dropped 1,650 feet, and shortly afterwards smoke was seen issuing from the crater, sometimes in great volumes and then again in short jets. The natives were terribly excited over the occurrence, and prophesied when the Alameda left that in twelve days there would be a great eruption. For two weeks previous to the falling in of the lava there had been constant earthquakes, and it is also stated that there had never been so heavy and so continuous a rain in the island.

TIRED LIVING.

Ten Years of Rheumatic Torture Had Sapped all Joy from Life, but South American Rheumatic Cure Proved the Life Nectar.

"For over ten years I was a great sufferer from rheumatism. I tried many remedies and was under treatment of best medical men, but nothing gave me any hope of a cure. I procured a bottle of South American Rheumatic Cure; its effects on me were truly wonderful, for when I had taken but one bottle every pain and symptom of rheumatism had left me. I heartily recommend it."—W. H. Sherman, Morrisburg, Ont.

C. P. R.'S BIG YEAR

EARNINGS INCREASE DESPITE THE RATE WAR—PROOF OF PROSPERITY.

(Special to the Times.)

MONTREAL, April 6.

The annual meeting of the Canadian Pacific Railway was held to-day and was harmonious.

The only statement of importance made by Sir William Van Horne in his speech was to the effect that the rate war had not interfered with their earnings; in fact, the increase of earnings during March was $541,300. He announced that there was no doubt the prosperity shown by the directors' ability to distribute 4 p.c. dividend, and carry forward a surplus of $897,088 to the reserve after provision for all working expenses will increase.

SHE DESPAIRED

Because Doctors Couldn't Help Her—South American Nervine Cured Her.

Mrs. Geo. Schlee, wife of a well-known contractor, of Berlin, Ont., was for about eight years unable to attend here household duties—at times confined to her bed—suffered great weakness and nervousness. She was wasted to a skeleton; doctors diagnosed her case, womb trouble. She despaired of ever being well again. She was induced to try South American Nervine; a few doses gave great relief. She took in all eight bottles and was completely cured, and every day she sings the praises of this wonderful remedy.

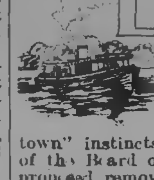
THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL OBJECTED TO

Council of Toronto Board of Trade Kick

AND SUBMIT A MEMORIAL

To the Dominion Government, Praying that the Work be Stopped

They Express the Opinion that as to Local Traffic There is Nothing to Warrant the Expenditure From a Commercial Stand-Point It Does not Seem Feasible



Toronto, April 7.

LN has this city worked in a selfish way to the injury of its neighbors. The recent effort to prejudice the prospects of the Trent Valley Canal is only on a par with other matters where "Hogtown" instincts prevail. The Council of the Board of Trade discussed the proposed removal of the Grand Trunk offices from Montreal to Toronto and question as to whether it is advisable to proceed with the construction of the Trent Valley Canal.

The first business taken up was the report of the Railway and Transportation Committee, regarding the removal of the Grand Trunk offices to this city. The report advised the appointment of a special committee to wait on the general manager of the Grand Trunk and consult with him, with the view of having located in Toronto the offices which it is proposed to move from Point St. Charles. The report goes on to state that, so far as the committee can judge, this proposal is favored by all the conditions such as the mileage of the railway being chiefly in Ontario the centre of which is Toronto whose tonnage is the largest of any point on the G.T.R. not excepting Montreal, with its advantage of ocean traffic. During January the freight on the Grand Trunk system for Toronto was given as 103,751 tons, against 58,091 tons for Montreal. In September, 1897, freight handled at Toronto totalled 105,000 tons, against 96,000 tons in Montreal while Toronto passenger receipts are much larger than those of Montreal.

WESTERN MILEAGE.

The report goes on to give statistics of the increasing receipts from the west, along with the mileage, showing that 1-5 per cent. is west of Kingston there being 3,262 miles there, against 961 miles east. From the Dominion the Grand Trunk has received bonuses of $2,009,832, and from Ontario, exclusive of municipal bonuses, $2,645,333.

The report concludes as follows: "Your committee would further submit, in view of the foregoing, that any proposition to remove the G.T.R. head offices from Point St. Charles to any other place than this city would be strongly resented by their patrons here and throughout this Province, the evidence being overwhelming that this is the most suitable place and the real centre of the system."

A resolution was unanimously passed by the Council adopting the report of the committee as the report of the Council and appointing Messrs. Elias Rogers A. E. Kemp, F. Gurney, H.N. Baird, J. D. Allan, Hugh Blain, J.W. Flavelle, and the mover and seconder, Messrs. A.E. Ames and M. C. Ames, a committee acting either on its own behalf or with a committee of the City Council or other bodies, as may be appointed, for the purpose of having the head offices of the Grand Trunk Railway moved to this city.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Next the report regarding the Trent Valley Canal was taken up. This report defined the Trent Canal as applied to a series of stretches of water which do not form a connected system of navigation, and which at present are sufficient only for local use.

The claims of the advocates of the canal were stated to be that by connecting these water stretches by canals and deepening rivers and lakes at different points, Georgian Bay and Lake Ontario may be connected, the distance being claimed to be about 200 miles. If the canal should be completed it is not expected boats of more than five or six feet draught could go through. The Government have already expended upon this work on capital account up to June 30th, 1897, $2,026,355.67. On the 8th of November, 1897, there was an available appropriation still unused of $527,200.39.

During the last fiscal year there were 21,145 tons of freight moved that passed through the part of this canal that has been completed, mostly products of the forest. The total traffic paying tolls was 16,487 tons. The total amount of tolls and revenue from all sources amounted to $952.52 for the fiscal year ending 1897. The cost of operation and maintenance, including repairs but so far as the committee know, not salaries of Government officials for superintending, etc., was $17,370.27.

The committee expressed the opinion that as to local traffic, there is nothing to warrant expenditure. As only small boats could use it the connection between Georgian Bay and Lake Ontario would be impracticable Government to grant no further sums towards the work.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 9, 1898

CUBA MIGHT HAVE BEEN BRITISH

It is interesting to recall, now that there is so much to talk of a war between the United States and Spain over Cuba, that that rich island was captured by the British in the war with Spain in 1762. The seige of Havana commenced on June 7 and closed on Aug. 13. It was conducted both by land and water. The land forces were led by Lord Albemarle and the navy by Admiral Sir Geo. Pocock. The taking of Fort Morro was a tedious and dangerous operation in which the Royal American militia greatly distinguished themselves. The fort was finally taken on the 30th July, a sufficient breach having been made in the walls by the British sappers and miners to admit a small storming party, which took the Spaniards by surprise. They made a desperate but brief defence. The Spanish Governor of Havana held out for some days longer, but after the town had been stormed a few times by the heavy guns of the British he surrendered.

Spain's land and sea forces available for the defence of the city amounted to about 30,000 men, as against 16,000 British.

The triumph was one of the most complete ever achieved by British arms. The value of captured property amounted to $14,000,000. Philip II. had given to Havana a coat of arms, in which was blasoned a golden key, to signify that it was "the key of the West Indies." England now held that key, and had she known what was in store for her in the future she would have kept it. But, a few months after its surrender, peace was declared, and England gave up Havana for Florida. She lost Florida in the American Revolution; she might have held Havana, and with it she would have held the main gate to the Gulf of Mexico and the Isthmus.

COMRADES, TOUCH THE ELBOW.

Soldiers who compose the ranks of an army are drilled to act together. This discipline gives greater courage and efficiency, as every man knows that in battle he will not be left to act alone—he will be supported by his comrades.

In civilised society the same principle is supposed to prevail to a certain extent. The weak must be assisted by those who are stronger—the very poor by those who are richer, the sick by those who are well. Otherwise what would become of us in times of trouble and failure?

We cannot always help our neighbors by gifts of money, yet it is often in our power to help them in a better way—namely, by means of knowledge which we possess and they do not.

Every day's post brings to the writer illustrations of this, which go to show how useful the weakest and the poorest of us might be to others if we were only thoughtful to ask ourselves, "Now what do I know that might be of use to my friend?"

And many do so, thank mercy, and render service which no money can pay for.

For example, Mrs. Redpath, whose letter I am about to introduce, probably owes the recovery of her health to the intervention and advice of a friend who acted on this theory of duty.

"In the spring of 1892," says Mrs. Redpath, "my health began to fail me. Before this I was strong and hearty. I now felt low and weak, and had no energy or strength left in me. My appetite was gone, and I often sat down at meal-time without being ably to touch anything. After eating (when I did eat) I had pain at the chest and between the shoulders, also a gnawing pain in the stomach.

"I got no proper sleep at night, and felt no better for going to bed, being worse tired in the morning. As time passed by I got extremely weak, and although able to get about the house it was with difficulty that I did so.

"For over a year I continued like this, now better and agian worse, but always in pain. I took different kinds of medicines and tonics to strengthen me—still I gained no strength. In June, 1893, a friend told me of the benefit he had received by taking Mother Seigel's Syrup, and urged me to try it. I got a bottle from Mr. Lawrence, the chemist at Peel, and after taking it a few days I found benefit. I could eat and enjoy my food without pain. I continued with it and gradually my strength returned, and I have since kept well. You can publish this statement as you like. (Signed) (Mrs.) Ann Jane Redpath, 60, Glenfaba Road, Peel, Isle of Man, July 22nd, 1896."

A similar case is that of another lady, who says: "In the autumn of 1894 I began to feel ill and out of sorts. I was weak and easily exhausted. After eating I felt great weight at my stomach. I could take no food of any kind without pain. I had great pain around the heart—often so bad I was drawn two double with it. There was, too, a dull weary aching across the kidneys, which made me feel stiff when I moved about.

"In this way I continued month after month, getting weaker all the time. I lost over a stone weight and was reduced almost to a skeleton. From a stout, healthy woman I was brought low as I well could be, and people began to think I would never get

"In October of last year my daughter persuaded me to try a medicine that had done her so much good—Mother Seigel's Syrup. We got a bottle from a chemist at Wisbech, and after taking it three days I felt much better. My food caused me no pain and I gained strength; I continued with the Syrup and in a short time I was well as ever, and got back the flesh I had lost. Since then I have kept in good health. I tell everyone what Mother Seigel's Syrup did for me, and you are welcome to publish this letter and refer anyone to me. (Signed) (Mrs.) S. Butcher, Farrow's Farm, Nordelph, near Downham, Norfolk, July 8th, 1896."

In the one case a friend, in the other a daughter were the providential advisers to these suffering women. If the first bringer of unwelcome news hath but a losing office, as Shakespeare affirms, what shall we say of the bringers of good news? Of those whose knowledge, drawn upon in time of need, proved so full of help and blessing? How much good it did and how little it cost? Now, the fact that Mother Seigel's Syrup cures when other medicines are of no avail is known to thousands. Let them, then, sound it forth and earn the thanks of those who are ready to perish.

A WOMAN THE STAKE.

SHE WAS PLAYED AGAINST $50,000 IN A GAME OF ECARTE.

Though the Kentuckian Won at the Game, He Was Beaten In Another Way—Strange Story of an Old, Grewsome Looking House In San Francisco.

In 1867 there stood an old fashioned shanty east of the locality now occupied by the Presentation convent, in front of the graveyard, and the people in the neighborhood used to tell strange stories about this grewsome looking dwelling. For several years its occupancy was apparently confined to a decrepit old man, who used to crawl in and out about once a day, his arms filled with packages from the market.

He was known in the neighborhood as the old dago, though in reality he was a native of Alsace. For several years he lived a hermit's life, and the neighbors got so accustomed to his comings and goings that even the small boys forgot to molest him. But one morning all the gossips found food for conversation by the appearance of a remarkably lovely young woman who went out to and returned from the butcher's stall and the grocer's. She spoke English imperfectly and with a very pronounced French accent. This little cabin was destined to be the scene of a very dramatic incident in the history of California gambling.

It was natural that a girl as pretty as Irene should not be long without admirers, so it came to pass that the windows of the old house were lighted up every evening, and the Frenchman developed the natural hospitality of his race and gave little dinners and suppers to his exiled countrymen. But among those, as was only natural, there were some who existed not by honest industry, but by the gaming table. Among them was a young man of striking appearance who had served in France as sous officier in a hussar regiment, had gone the pace, ruined himself, and finally drifted out to San Francisco, where he became the hanger on of the gambling table.

Louis Le Marronais was a strikingly handsome specimen of the Parisian of his class. It did not take him very long to gain the confidence of the old Frenchman, and to him he confided the story of his life. It was not a very eventful one. He was a member of an old French family and could use if he pleased a title which dated back to Charles the Bold. He had been ruined by the extravagance of his younger brother and was then living on the income of a little property in Brittany, which he had saved from the wreck. Irene was his only child, and he idolized her. For her sake alone he wanted to be rich. He wanted to take her back to France and reinstate her in the position to which her rank entitled her.

The ex-hussar won the old man into the belief that his only chance of getting rich was through gambling. So night after night old Lescant was found at the El Dorado or some other gaming hell losing his money under the direction of the arch mentor. One night Irene followed him there to bring him back, and her first visit was a fateful one. Tom Monroe, a Kentuckian, one of the wildest and most reckless characters of that period, saw her, admired her and swore that she should become his property.

It is not necessary to recite the incidents that led up to the scene, which were related to me by an eyewitness. It is sufficient to say that Le Marronais had convinced the old Frenchman that Monroe would stake $50,000 against the hand of Irene. If he won, she was to become his wife, but if he lost the money was to become the Frenchman's property and Irene was free to bestow her affections wherever she pleased. Irene was informed of this proposition, and she looked resigned and rather amused at the transaction.

The eventful night arrived. Monroe, the old man, Louis, Irene and a friend and countryman of the host were the only inmates of the little room. The game was ecarte, and the cards, which Louis had marked, lay upon the table. The old man got the deal. Monroe's certified check for $50,000 was placed in the custody of the hussar. The old man marked the king in the first deal, and when the pack changed hands he had the best of the game. The play went on, and in the last hand Monroe scored every point.

"Irene is mine!" shouted the Kentuckian, reaching for his check.

At this moment the lights were dashed out, and Monroe fell to the floor from the stroke of some heavy instrument. The only disinterested spectator of the scene fled from the room. The next morning there was no sign of life in the old house, and in the evening when the milkman knocked he heard a groaning from the inside. He forced his way into the house and discovered the wretched Kentuckian bound hand and foot. Monroe, avowing murder, rushed the next morning to the banking house. The check had been cashed by an individual who answered the description of the hussar. The other actors in this startling scene were never heard of. Nothing in the house was disturbed, not even the girl's wearing apparel, and the incident became a portion of this strange history of old time gambling in San Francisco.—San Francisco News Letter.

One More Idiot.

Tobacconist—If you'll keep quiet about it, I'll tell you how I manage to make money out of cigars. When a man comes in and asks me for a good cigar, I invariably recommend that brand that costs me the least. It is a great scheme.

Customer—That's so. What idiots they must all be! By the way, I want you to recommend a good cigar to me.

Tobacconist—Well, confidentially I advise you to take one of these. (Customer goes out.) Only one more idiot; that's all.—Boston Transcript.

"Answering" a Letter.

The average person does not "answer" a letter at all. He simply waits until the spirit moves and then "writes" to the one to whom a letter is due, saying everything and telling everything, presumably, except that which the correspondent has asked about. The letter to be answered is probably mislaid, or is not near at hand, and so the questions therein are unheeded and when the friend or relative who asked for information receives the long-looked-for letter, it is a means of disappointment rather than satisfaction, and is, in reality, anything but an "answer." Bear this fact in mind, when next you write to any of your correspondents and write with their last letter at hand, read it through carefully and reply to each question as you go along and you will thus prove yourself "one correspondent in a thousand." When you stop to think of it, why does not a query on paper require an answer quite as much as one pronounced verbally, and why should we not feel that it is as much of an impoliteness to neglect the one as the other? To be sure, your friends cannot expect you always to answer a letter by return mail, nor the same day; such a correspondence would often prove a burden to them as well as yourself—but they certainly have the right to expect a reasonably prompt reply to their epistles and an "answer" in the full meaning of the word. There are correspondents, of course, who deserve to be ignored. The person who writes for information, or to ask a favor for his own accommodation, failing to enclose a stamp for reply, is more impolite in so doing than you would be in failing to respond. It is not the value of the stamp nor the trouble of replying that justifies you in so acting, it is the lack of courtesy on the part of one person that precludes the possibility of discourtesy on the part of the other. For there is courtesy and lack of courtesy in letter writing, indeed there is, and alas, it is to be feared that the majority of us are guilty of a lack of it.

Why Called Tumblers.

Every day we drink out of a tumbler. Why is the large glass that holds our milk and water so-called? Years ago Prof. Max Muller was giving a luncheon at All Souls' College, Oxford, to the Princess Alice, the wife of the Grand Duke of Hesse-Darmstadt and the second daughter of Queen Victoria. There were not a dozen guests besides the Princess and her husband, and a very agreeable luncheon we had, with talk on all kinds of interesting subjects.

But what excited the curiosity of all strangers present was a set of little round bowls of silver, about the size of a large orange. They were brought round filled to the brim with the famous ale brewed in the college. These, we are told, were tumblers, and we were speedily shown how they came by their names—a fitting lesson for the guests of a philologist. When one of these little bowls was empty it was placed upon the table mouth downward. Instantly, so perfect was the balance, it flew back to its proper position as if asking to be filled again. No matter how it was treated—trundled along the floors, balanced carefully on its side, dropped suddenly upon the soft, thick carpet—up it rolled again and settled itself with a few gentle shakings and swayings into its place, like one of those India rubber tumbling dolls babies delight in.

This, then, was the origin of our word tumbler, at first made of silver, as are all these All Souls' tumblers. Then, when glass became common, the round glasses that stood on a flat base superseded the exquisitely balanced silver spheres, and stole their names so successfully that you have to go to All Souls' to see the real thing.—Philadelphia Times.

When the Earth Was Young.

Some naturalists are of the opinion that the whale was once a land animal, and that it was forced to take to water as a means of protection.

His Reason.

"Why don't you go to work?" asked the housewife.

"It all comes o' bein' too well educated," replied Meandering Mike.

"A proper education does not encourage a man to despise honest toil."

"I don't despise it. I've made up my mind dozens o' times to go to work. But widout fail, jes' ez I'd got it all settled dat I was goin' to ask somebody fur a job in a week er two, I'd run acrost one o' dese articles dat says de sun or one o' the planets is goin' to let loose an' smash the eart' into a bunch of sizzlin' debris, an' den I'd hafter jes lay down an' say, 'What's de use?'"—Washington Star.

250,000 CURED.

Thousands of young men are made nervous wrecks, unfit for business, social pleasures or home duties by evil habits in youth, later excesses, or private diseases. W. C. Andrews, of Akron, O., says: "I read this paper and have seen many reports of remarkable cures made by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan. I decided to treat with them. Indiscretion was the cause of my trouble. I was weak and nervous; no ambition; back weak; pimples on the face; thin and haggard; eyes sunken and cheeks hollow; dreams and drains at night; memory poor; varicocele and weak parts; irritable; sinking spells; specks before the eyes; lack of confidence; no energy; and many other complaints. I had tried fourteen doctors, bought four electric belts took scores of bottles of patent medicines—all failed. I tried the New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, and it cured me. I am a Man Again. I have gained twenty-six pounds and am strong mentally, physically and sexually. It is a wonderful treatment."

EDMUND BURKE.

An Able and Versatile Statesman Who Never Attained High Office.

Though Burke never attained high office his abilities were so versatile as to qualify him for any post which a cabinet minister could fill. His practical wisdom was as conspicuous as his power of generalization. No one had a clearer comprehension or a firmer grasp of great principles of universal application; at the same time his policy in every department of English politics rested on a wide and solid basis of information and experience. He was steeped in the history of the past, yet penetrated through and through with the reality of the present and ever and always mindful of that future in which the speculations and measures of the day were to be tested and finally approved or condemned. His prodigious activity in public affairs sprang not from an intellectual source alone, nor from his imperial patriotism. It was constantly fed from an inexhaustible store of moral energy. He was animated by a detestation of all forms of oppression, whether by kings or governors, parliaments or peoples, which was in him a consuming passion, from which his noble nature could only obtain relief by denunciation of the oppressor and the destruction of his power.

I cannot help thinking that Burke must have been stimulated, too, and sustained by delight in his studies and his work. It is impossible, without counting this as an additional incentive, to understand the amazing industry which he devoted to the elucidation of all the great questions dealt with in his speeches and writings. How his method reproves the habit, too common in our day, as in other days, of debating subjects affecting the fate of millions of our fellow creatures as if they could be disposed of by echoing the chatter of ignorance, or prejudice, or vanity, or self interest! When we read Burke's speech on Fox's East India bill, we say, "What a great proconsul he would have made!" When we read his speech on conciliation with America, we feel that the greatest of colonial ministers was lost in him, and when we read his speech on economical reform we exclaim, "Here is an ideal chancellor of the exchequer!"—J. O'Connor Power in North American Review.

SMOKED CANARY BIRDS.

Do Clouds From a Pipe Develop a Rich Color In Their Plumage?

A little old shoemaker who has a busy, old style cobbling shop on the east side is a bird fancier, and he has peculiar ideas about canaries. One night he was sitting on his leather covered bench, smoking an extremely odorous quality of tobacco in a black pipe. A customer was waiting for him to finish straightening up a worn heel, and he made several remarks concerning the birds which hung about the cobbler's shop. They were fancy birds, and he could not help noticing it. Finally he asked the shoemaker how he got such richly colored birds.

"It's part in the breeding and part in the atmosphere," said the cobbler. "You raise birds in a shop where two or three men are constantly smoking, and in time you will get the darkest orange color if you use a little judgment in mating and they don't run to green."

"I should think that tobacco smoke would be unwholesome for the birds," said the visitor.

"On the contrary, it makes them hardy and seems to be good for them every way. Women who have canaries would do well to put them where they can get a little tobacco smoke once in awhile, although I don't think cigarette smoke would do them much good. What they need is strong tobacco smoke from an old pipe like this or the smoke from a black cigar. I've raised my best birds when I had two jours working in this little shop with me and all of us smoking pretty nearly all the time."

Then the old man sighed and said: "That was before they half soled and heeled shoes while you wait—before machines were used for cobbling. No two or three jours and an apprentice for me now. I sit here alone, with my birds, pegging away and keeping them well smoked."—New York Sun.

Road and River.

The brave Pierre Stuppa, the Swiss general, having been deputed by the 13 cantons to solicit the arrears of pay which had been owing for a long time to the Swiss officers in the French service, M. de Louvois, the war minister, who was present, said to the king, Louis XIV:

"Sire, those Swiss are very importunate. If your majesty had all the money that your royal predecessors have given to that people, it would form a road from Paris to Basel."

"That may be," observed Stuppa with an air of firmness, "but at the same time if your majesty had all the blood that the Swiss have shed in the service of France it would form a river from Paris to Basel."

The king was so struck with the observation that he ordered M. de Louvois to pay the whole of the money without delay.—Nuggets.

He Was Cruel.

Mrs. Nubbons—My husband is a perfect brute.

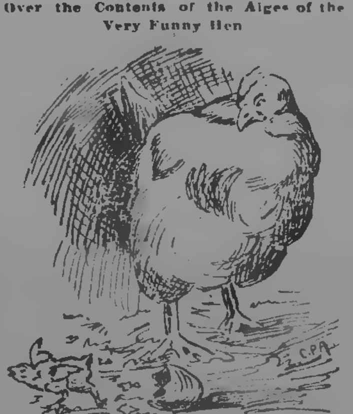
CACKLES.

Over the Contents of the Alges of the Very Funny Hen



"Go boldly forth, my simple lay."—Sir William Jay.

The bicycle stopped suddenly. The old man went over the handle-bar and turned a complete somerset in the air. Then he sat down on the pavement—hard.

"Now, you know how it feels to be whacked there," said the boy.

And with a merry laugh he disappeared around the corner.—Chicago Post.

Farther Back.—Benning—Does your wife ever go through your pockets? Gotham—I should say not. She draws my salary.—Cleveland Leader.

Soxey—Why are those things what widows wear called "weeds"?

Knoxey—Because they spring up and choke the grief.—Pittsburg News.

Penelope—What did he send you for a wedding present?

Pauline—Cut glass.

Penelope—Ah, tableware, I suppose?

Pauline—No; a necklace.—Truth.

Mother—Edith, go and see whether the clock is going!

Edith (coming back)—No, mamma, it is standing quite still, only its tail is wagging a little.—Enquire Within.

Brown (reading program)—Ten years are supposed to elapse between the third and fourth acts.

Jones—Come out and have something. I can't imagine ten years having elapsed during which I haven't had a drink!—Puck.

Young Housekeeper—My good man, can't you find a more useful life than that of a tramp?

Tramp—We are useful, madam. Just think of the number of divorces we prevent by eating young housekeepers' pies.—Judge.

Mrs. Mashem—My dog and I have been sitting for our photographs as "Beauty and the Beast."

Lord Loreus (a bit of a fancier)—Yes; he certainly is a beauty, isn't he?—Punch.

A Base Description.—Grace—They say that Siamese Prince proposed to Mildred.

Carmelita—Yes, but he insulted her.

Grace—How?

Carmelita—He told her she was worth her weight in silver.—New York Press.

Too Forcible.—"They say Dumley's wife rules him with a rod of iron."

"Oh, no; that's an exaggeration. Why, she can make him jump by merely crooking her little finger at him."—Cleveland Leader.

A Sober Request.

"Well," remarked the gentleman to whom Tired Teddy had applied for enough coin to secure a drink, "you are the most perfect specimen of the genus hobo I have ever seen."

"Yes, dat's right," returned Teddy, "an' it's fer dis reason I'm tryin' to preserve meself in alcohol. Can't you help me out?"

He got the dime.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

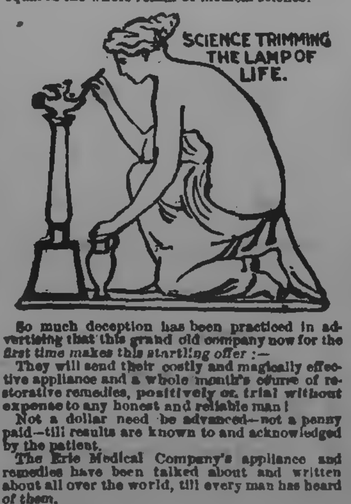
Fractions.

"Suppose," suggested the teacher, "that you take a piece of beefsteak and cut it into halves, then cut the halves into quarters, the quarters into eighths, and the eighths into sixteenths, into what could the sixteenth be cut?"

"Hash," responded Tommy, whose mother kept a boarding house.

And the class in fractions was dismissed.—London Tid-Bits.

Free Trial To Any Honest Man
The Foremost Medical Company in the World in the Cure of Weak Men Makes this Offer.
HEALTH AND ENERGY ASSURED. HAPPY MARRIAGE, GOOD TEMPER, LONG LIFE.
In all the world to-day—in all the history of the world—no doctor nor institution has treated and restored so many men as has the famed ERIE MEDICAL CO. of Buffalo, N. Y.
This is due to the fact that the company controls some inventions and discoveries which have no equal in the whole realm of medical science.



SCIENCE TRIMMING THE LAMP OF LIFE.

So much deception has been practiced in advertising that this grand old company now for the first time makes this startling offer:—
They will send their costly and magically effective appliance and a whole month's course of restorative remedies, positively on trial without expense to any honest and reliable man!
Not a dollar need be advanced—not a penny paid—till results are known to and acknowledged by the patient.
The Erie Medical Company's appliance and remedies have been talked about and written about all over the world, till every man has heard of them.
They restore or create strength, vigor, healthy tissue and new life.
They quickly stop drains on the system that sap the energy.
They cure nervousness, despondency and all the effects of evil habits, excesses, overwork, etc.
They give full strength, development and tone to every portion and organ of the body.
Failure is impossible and age is no barrier.
This "Trial without Expense" offer is limited by the company to a short time, and application must be made at once.
No C. O. D. scheme, no bogus philanthropy nor deception, no exposure—a clean business proposition by a company of high financial and professional standing.
Write to the ERIE MEDICAL COMPANY, BUFFALO, N.Y., and refer to seeing the account of their offer in this paper.

SCHOOL BOARD

hburn n School Trustees in Conclave—Miss Coveney Appointed on the staff of Teachers

At the regular meeting of the ove Board there were present Mr. . A. Peck, chairman, and Messrs. Ag- w, Pollock, Maniece, Sherdan and ams. The members of the pre- ing meeting were read and con- med.

A communication was received from e Canadian Bank of Commerce stat- g that the balance at the credit of e Board on April 1st, 1898, was 3.38.

ATTENDANCE.

The report of attendance for the nth of March was as follows:

Mr. Adams moved, seconded by Mr. heridan, that the sum of $5 be voted wards pictures framed for the school oms.—Carried.

ISS STEVENSON'S RESIGNATION.

Miss Stevenson's resignation was ad and on motion of Mr. Agnew, conded by Mr. Pollock, the resignation was accepted.—Carried.

In accepting the above resignation veral of the members expressed ep regret at her departure and heir appreciation of her services. Stevenson has taught six years a Ashburnham, during which time she has given thorough satisfaction.

The following applications for the position were received: Miss E. Courtney, Miss Lillie Pratt, Miss Lillian Primeau, Miss Annie Pakenham, Miss Annie Erskine, Miss Emily coombs, Miss Florence Coveney and Miss Annie Wood.

Mr. Pollock moved, seconded by Mr. Maniece, that Miss Dawson be appointed to the room recently taught by Miss Stevenson, at a salary of $260 a year, Miss Coveney being appointed to Miss Dawson's room.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

King's Chances for the Vice-Presidency

The latest edition of Yesterday's Toronto News contains the following in reference to the candidates for 1st vice-presidency of the Canadian Lacrosse Association: "The first vice-presidency brings three splendid candidates tto the post, Messrs. Lionel King, of Peterborough, W. H. Hall, of Markham, and T. R. Glanville, of Mount Forest. Mr. King is deservingly popular with the younger set and his manly and sportsmanlike stand, while acting on the O.H.A. executive, will give him many votes. Both other gentlemen would make excellent officers."

IMPURE BLOOD IN SPRING.

This is the almost universal experience. Diminished perspiration during winter, rich foods and close confinement indoors are some of the causes. A good Spring Medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla is absolutely necessary to purify the blood and put the system in a healthy condition at this season.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best family cathartic and liver tonic. Gentle, reliable, sure.

Eastertide

The observance of Easter dates back to about the year A.D. 68, at which time there was much contention among the Eastern and Western churches as to what day the festival should be observed. It was finally ordained at the Council of Nice in the year 325 that it must be observed throughout the Christian world on the same day. This decision settled that Easter should be kept upon the Sunday first after the fourteenth day of the first Jewish month, but no general conclusion was arrived at as to the cycle by which the festival was to be regulated and some churches adopted one rule and some another. This diversity of usage was put an end to, and the Roman rule making Easter the first Sunday after the fourteenth day of the calendar moon established in England in 669. After nine centuries a discrepancy in the keeping of Easter was caused by the authorities of the English Church declining to adopt the reformation of the Gregorian Calendar in 1582. This difference was settled in 1752 by the adoption of the rule which makes Easter Day always the first Sunday after the full moon which appears on or next after the twenty-first day of March. If the full moon happens upon a Sunday, Easter is the Sunday next following.

Of Interest to Cyclists

Lady riders should never wear a skirt with braid round the bottom.

A very slack chain is in danger of mounting the teeth of the sprocket and causing an accident.

All riders, especially ladies, should begin their season's riding by very moderate indulgence, gradually increasing to harder and longer rides.

The highest geared machine in the world is claimed to be ridden by a man named Harry Hollands, of Detroit. This gear registers 187.

In reply to our enquiry, a novice informed us that he considered he was making progress in learning to ride, as it did not hurt him much to fall off.

Do not ride a high gear just because somebody else does. Eighty should be a man's limit and sixty-eight a woman's. To go above these is an unnecessary waste of strength.

Peterborough Will Get the Meet

Yesterday evening's edition of the Toronto News has the following to say of Peterborough's chances of securing the meet: "Peterborough cyclists are saying little, but it is said that they are cutting a lot of wood, and at the meeting will, without doubt, be "some pumpkins." The bicyclists of that town are chuck full of confidence. Peterborough will, doubtless, get many sympathy votes, and from present indications it would appear as if their chances for tthe meet were much better than Ottawa's. A delegation of Peterborough cyclists will attend the meeting and ttry their oratorical powers on the assembled wheelmen.

PAID OFF!

Tommy Shackelford's Revenge on the Perfidious Katie Benderly

CHAPTER I.

"Katie, may I see you home?"

"No."

"You stuck-up little thing!" said little Tommy Shackelford, "I'll pay you up for that some day! See if I dont!"

He pulled his cap down over his eyes and slunk home from the children's party by the loneliest and most unfrequented route, muttering to himself and shaking his head as he slunk.

CHAPTER II.

"Katie, will you go skating with me to-morrow night?"

"No."

"Too proud to go with me, are you? I'll get even with you some day! See if I don't."

This is why 16-year-old Tom Shackelford went to the skating pond the next evening with the homeliest girl in town.

CHAPTER III.

"Katie will you go riding with me this afternoon?"

"No."

"My turnout isn't stylish enough for you, perhaps. Vain, girl, I'll gett even with you some day! See if I don't."

Young Shackelford did not put his horse back in the stable and sulk. He went riding with a large, cross-eyed girl who had freckles and red hair.

CHAPTER IV.

"Katie will you mary me?"

"No."

Thomas Shackelford turned pale, but his eyes flashed fire.

"Be it so, haughty girl!" he said. "I know why you refuse me. I am not rich or distinguished enough. I am only a common citizen. Miss Benderby, I shall persecute you no more with my attentions. But, mark my words, the day will come when you will bitterly repent this scornful rejection. Farewell!"

CHAPTER V.

Years passed.

A justice of the peace sat in his office in a little town far removed from the scene of the incidents recorded in the preceding chapters of his narrative.

His hair was tinged with gray. He had a slight stoop in his shoulders. He was no longer young.

His docket lay open before him, but he was not looking at it. His thoughts were far away. A deep sigh burst from his lips.

Suddenly the door of the office opened and a couple came in.

A man past the middle age, accompanied by a woman of mature years, but still retaining traces of youthful beauty, approached him.

"You are a magistrate?" asked the man.

"I may as well come to the point at once," rejoined the other. "This lady and I have come to be married. Her relatives are opposed to the match and this is practically an elopement, but we are both of age——"

"I see,' muttered his honor.

"——And able to choose for ourselves. Here is the mariage license."

CHAPTER VI.

"No, sir," said the justice. "There is no charge."

"No charge!" echoed the astonished bridegroom. "Do you perform marriage ceremonies for nothing?"

"Not usually. My customary fee is $2.50. Butt here are reasons why I prefer not to accept any compensation for having solemnized this marriage. Madam," he asked turning to the bride, "do you recognize me?"

She scrutinized his face.

"Gracious heaven!" she exclaimed. "Thomas Shackelford!"

"Thomas Shackelford, J.P."—and he handed her his card—"office hours, 9 to 4. Katherine Benderby, we are even at last! I have married you to a man who dyes his whiskers."

THE END.

POND'S EXTRACT

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29, 1894.

I have used "Pond's Extract" for many years and always insist upon my patients getting "Pond's," not the ordinary Extract, which is often a very poor article. W. K. BROWN, M. D.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9, 1895.

I use Pond's Extract a great deal in my practice. I think it very valuable in all venous enlargements.

J. L. BRADFORD, M. D.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., Nov. 27, 1894.

I have been using Pond's Extract in my practice for twenty years. I frequently have the experience you mention of druggists insisting they can put up as good as yours. I don't believe it. I use Pond's Extract a great deal as an antiseptic in combination with glycerine and carbolic acid. I think it far superior to any antiseptic known.

F. G. FLOURNOY, M. D.

COLUMBIA, PA., Jan. 18, 1895.

I have been a constant user of Pond's Extract since 1852, and do not expect to discontinue it while I live. S. ARMOR, M. D.

CHELSEA, MASS., Nov. 8, 1894.

I have made diseases of the skin a specialty for thirty years, and am free to say I know of no remedy that has given me such perfect satisfaction as Pond's Extract in cases for which it is recommended.

G. W. BABCOCK, M. D.

ASTHMATICS' INSTITUTE, Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 8, 1894.

I know Pond's Extract to be a valuable remedy, and shall continue its use whenever the opportunity offers.

GEO. H. CALKINS, M. D.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 13, 1894.

I am pleased with the purity and strength of Pond's Extract.

A Token of Esteem

The teachers and scholars of Ashburnham Public School assembled yesterday afternoon to present a token of esteem and bid good-bye to Miss Lucy Stevenson, who has severed her connection with this institution, with which she has been connected for several years. The presentation, consisting of a handsome oak secretary, was made by Clara Craig, the address being read by Miss Courtney.

How to Cure All Skin Diseases

Simply apply "Swayne's Ointment." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c.., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for Swayne's Ointment. Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Avoid substitutes.

Killed on the Track

Yesterday evening about 5 o'clock, as a C.P.R. freight was going west, and while crossing a roadway known as "Wexter crossing," near Toronto, a young man naved Henry Jones was instantly killed. Jones was mounted on a fiery horse and on approaching the crossing and seeing his danger, appeared to be unable to restrain his steed, which rushed headlong into the middle of the swiftly moving train. Both horse and rider were instantly killed.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia., Lyman Sons, & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Positively refuse all substitutes.

The Norwood Burglar

Detective Day, of the Grand Trunk, telephoned from Toronto yesterday morning toChief Roszel to make inquiries regarding James McDonald, the suspected burglar who was arrested in Havelock. By the description given of the prisoner Day, it is thought that he is a noted crack by the name of Irwin for whom he has been looking for some time. The Hamilton police have also asked for a description of the man.

McDonald will be given a hearing before Police Magistrate Edmison tomorrow.

Miss Melville's New Premises

Miss Melville has removed her fancy fancy goods' business to handsome new premises on Hunter street., next door to Clark and Gibson's jewellery establishment. The new store is a model of neatness and helps very materially to enhance the appearance of the large and well-selected stock on view. The superior class of goods carried by Miss Melville and the exceedingly reasonable prices charged should substantially increase her already large trade. The reader when in search of anything in the fancy goods' line, should certainly inspect Miss Melville's stock.

Conscience Money

Mr. Parker, acting manager of the Ontario Bank, yesterday morning received the following unsigned letter, which explains itself:

Dear Sir,—Enclosed you will find $5 which was found just inside the door of your bank some years ago. If you can, restore it to its owner, or, if not, give it to some deserving charity, you will greatly oblige the person who feels that they should have made an effort to find the owner at the time.

Mr. Parker handed the money over to the Childrens' Aid Society, having no hope of finding the original loser.

BEFORE JUDGE WELLER

Queen vs. Cronk—T. Hurley & Co. vs. W. H. Moore

Yesterday morning the work of the County Court was concluded; the following cases being dealt with as described:—

Queen vs. Cronk—This case was tried before His Honor Judge Weller in the County Judge's Criminal Court this morning. The charge was that Chas. G. Cronk appropriated to his own use the sum of $63, the property of James Yourex and was therby guilty of theft as defined by the criminal code. The evidence showed that Cronk claimed to be a tenant of the saw mill and grist mill at Keene, while Yourex claimed that he was an employee only, paid by the day for work and labor done. A dispute having arisen each party attempted to obtain possession of the mills Yourex having obtained entry when Cronk wa sabsent, was in turn lispossessed by Cronk, and thereupon Cronk, acting on advices of his solicitor, retained the sum of $63, then in hispossession, which otherwise would have been paid to Yourex, claiming that damage had been sustained by him amounting to more than the sum of money to which Yourex was entitled. Criminal proceedings were then taken as above stated. The County Judge held, after taking evidence of Yourex only, that he could not possibly find Mr. Cronk guilty of any criminal intent in the matter; that Cronk had never concealed anything from Yourex so far as the evidence disclosed, but had openly taken the stand that he was not indebted by reason of the conduct of the complainant. The charge was therefore dismissed and Mr. Cronk was congratulated by his friends on having vindicated his character.

Mr. R. E. Wood, County Crown Attorney, for the Crown; Mr. R. M. Dennistoun for the defendant.

T. Hurley & Co. vs. W. H. Moore—In this case, which wa ssettled yesterday afternoon, the plaintiff seeks to recover from the defendant the sum of $200 as damages, alleging breach of contract in a certain land deal. Judge Weller, after hearing the case, reserved decision, intimating however, that the plaintiff could not succeed in his suit. D. O'Connell for plaintiff, Dennistoun, Peck & Stevenson for defendant.

TO PUT UP A BIG FIGHT

Peterborough Cyclists Will Fight to a Finish in Toronto To-Day

Although feeling handicapped through not having received a grant from the town the provincial meet committee, at a meeting held yesterday morning, decided to manfully fight the matter to a finish. Their pluck and determination is commendable, and, as they have received favorable assurances from all over the province, the prospects for the Meet coming our way are certainly very bright. Large deputations went up on the 1.18 and 4.10 C.P.R. trains yesterday afternoon, and the trains this morning will largely reinforce yesterday's contingents. The boys are determined to win or die in the breach.

A large and influential lacrosse contingent are in the city with a view to pressing Lionel King's candidature for the vice-presidency of the C.L.A. Lionel should get there if merit and ability go for anything.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Interesting Items of Local and District Happenings in Brief

—Good Friday.

—The watering carts are doing duty again

—The higher temperature of yesterday was appreciated.

—The public schools closed yesterday for the Easter vacation.

—The 4.10 C.P.R. express going west yesterday afternoon was an hour and a half late. Cause—a hot journal.

—Stirling sports are arraging for a monster celebration on May 24th. Horse racing will form one of the principal attractions.

—Rev Mr. Patterson gave an address in St. Paul's church last night where the evangelistic services are being continued.

—Yesterday morning at 10.30, Holy Communion was celebrated at St. John's church in commemoration of the establishment of the Holy Communion.

—Fall wheat looked healthy when the snow went away, but it has been injured since then by the frequency of warm sunshine and cold frosty nights.

—It may be some time yet before it is safe to enter extensively into gardening, as there is frost lingering near, and the labour of seeding may be in vain.

—Two "weary Willies" occupied quarters at the Hotel de Roszel last night. It is expected the approaching warm wave will lessen the strain on the entertaining facilities of the hotel.

—The Driving Park Association of Campbellford held a meeting on Saturday night, and decided to have a celebration on the 24th of May. The program will consist of horse races, balloon ascensions, games etc., for which one thousand dollars will be given in prizes.

—An exchange informs us that a printing office in a small town in Indiana is always opened with prayer This seems to be a rare exception to the rule, as it has always been customary for the office to be opened by the "devil" and closed by the sheriff.

—Sir William Van Horne at the annual meeting of the C.P.R. shareholders remarked in connection with the double tracking of the Montreal-Toronto line, that it is ultimately intended to double tract from Port Arthur to Winnipeg, and from Montreal to Farnham, and steps had already been taken in that direction, but the Montreal-Toronto section was regarded as the most urgent.

Advertising Pointers

"Business," a monthly journal published in Toronto says, "The old advertising saw reflects the true spirit of advertising. If you would be successful, don't go at this business spasmodically. Keep everlastingly at it. Don't spread your advertising. If you can only spend a thousand dollars a year, concentrate it mainly in one direction — in one newspaper. Where your business will permit the addition of another thousand dollars they you may commence to spread a little. But a small sum spread over all the newspapers in Toronto, and taking in every fake scheme that it presented, becomes very thin advertising in the end. And once having started advertising don't let go. Advertising gains momentium as it goes along."

"New Life"

Is the name of a medicine that we have never known a case of failure to cure.

Rheumatism of any form, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, or Gout. It has cured more people since it was put on the market one year ago than the thousands of remedies put together in twenty years.

Cure guaranteed.

What Was the Trouble?

Health Broken Down, Heart Troubles, Torpid Liver, Consumption, Rheumatism

Whatever It Was, Hood's Sarsaparilla Cured by Its Power as The One True Blood Purifier.

Discouraged people are numerous now—some because of lost business, others because of lost health. All may find fresh inspiration and valuable suggestions in the following:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen: For 12 years I have been a commercial traveller, and owing to the hardships of my life, long railroad jumps, all kinds of exposure, and sudden changes of climate, etc., my health gave way. Physicians did not help me and I was given up to die. My illness developed a Complication of Diseases.

I was without ambition or appetite. All strength had left me. One doctor said I had heart disease, another torpid liver, a third said it was lung trouble and another consumption, and so on. I have no doubt, symptoms of all these complaints and even that of rheumatism, judging from the stiffness and pains in my joints and legs at times, were manifest. I was unable to attend to business, was confined to my room and frequently lay in a comatose state for hours. I was so feeble, and so little encouragement was offered, that I began to wonder

Where I Would be Buried.

Finally, as a last effort to help myself, I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The effects of a few doses of the medicine seemed almost magical. The depressed feeling left me, and when one bottle had been taken, I had regained an appetite, and strength was coming back. After finishing the third bottle I was able to go about my commercial duties. I continued to improve, and to satisfy my mind that I had fully regained health, I submitted myself to a doctor for examination. He pronounced me 'sound as a dollar.' Three months later, I passed a rigid examination for insurance. I have since been in the best of health, notwithstanding my travels, and I give

All the Credit to Hood's

Sarsaparilla, as each season since I have taken several bottles. It keeps my blood in good circulation, gives me a keen appetite and leaves no room for that tired feeling which naturally finds easy prey among those of my calling in the summer months after an early spring hustle. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla the means of saving my life, and I gladly speak in its favor." A. J. LEITCH, home address, Cass House, Saginaw, Michigan.

To say that we've started to be busy in Millinery hardly expresses the idea of the big rush of past days—so far trade is doubling up on last year, and though our staff of trimmers and saleswomen has been increased, we think it necessary to warn those who intend to order an Easter Hat or Bonnet here, that it will be the part of wisdom to see to the matter at once—this week if possible.

WAR CLOUD DARKENS

Active Hostilities Will Probably Begin To-day.

NO ARMISTICE POSSIBLE

United States will Endeavor to Starve the Spanish Troops now in Cuba

The Fateful Day at Last Arrives When the President's Message Will be Submitted to Congress—The War Virtually Begins.

(Special to the Times.)

New York, April 11.—A press extra just out has a Washington special as follows: "War between the United States and Spain has been declared, so far as the executive branch of this Government can declare war. All that remains is for Congress to exercise its constitutional right of putting the army and navy in motion against the enemy.

Washington, April 10.—There is no change in the attitude of the Administration. The Maine incident is growing in proportions here, and that is why negotiations about Cuba must at last fail.

Ships will not attack land forts while the Spanish navy is afloat.

Havana is safe, with its mined harbor, from American attack, until the Viscaya and Oquendo, now at Porto Rico, have been settled with, and when the fleet at Cape Verde Islands comes over the sea the Spaniards in Havana will have a little of the medicine they have been giving to the reconcentrados.

They will starve.

Cuba will be blocaded. An offer of armistice is discounted. It will not stay the President's message, and he has said so.

The Cubans would not consent, anyhow.

Christina cannot abandon Cuba if she would.

The only other chance that remains is that of the proposition from the powers for a joint intervention in Cuba with the view of setting up a free Government there, and against that the Cortes would rebel.

Washington sees no other way out than through war.

TIGHT MONEY IF WAR BREAKS OUT.

New York, April 10.—The bank statement is a surprise. It shows timidity of capital and liquidation during the week and is indicative of tight money in event of trouble.

Torpedo boats Topeka and Somers, purchased abroad, sailed from Weymouth England, to-day for the United States.

ALL HOPE ABANDONED

SENTIMENT IN THE SPANISH ARMY WILL PREVENT AN ARMISTICE.

Rome, April 10.—Despatches received at the Vatican from Madrid represent the situation as hopeless. The Government has been obliged to abandon the idea of decreeing an armistice in Cuba on account of opposing sentiment in the army which would resent such action.

MAKING READY FOR WAR

SPAIN CONCENTRATING TROOPS AND NAVAL FORCES SO AS TO BE PREPARED.

London, April 10.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Biarritz says: According to news from Madrid, the Queen Regent and Senor Sagasta have had conferences with leading men, including Senor Castelar, General Azcarraga and General Polavieja, as to the strongest Goverment for Spain if war should be declared.

It is announced that 20,000 troops are going to Porto Rico. A second torpedo flotilla is expected to leave Cadiz on Sunday for St. Vincent and Porto Rico. Another naval squadron is being formed with the newly bought warships and some fast liners of the Spanish Trans-Atlantic Company.

WOMEN OFFER TO FIGHT

A FEMALE "REFORMER" SAYS SHE CAN OBTAIN THE SERVICES OF 2,000.

Washington, April 10.—A woman well known as a "reformer" called on Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt to-day and offered the services of 2,000 women sailors to "man" part of the navy. Mr. Roosevelt turned and fled.

Then the woman reformer visited Assistant Secretary of War Meiklejohn and wanted to know if there would be any objection to mustering in several regiments of women. She said the women would be fully armed, uniformed and equipped. Mr. Meiklejohn told her that in his opinion women were not desired as soldiers by the Government, and referred her to Congress.

CONSULS LEAVING

RECALLED BY ORDERS FROM THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

Havana, April 9.—10 a.m.—Walter B. Barker, the United States consul at Sagua la Grande, has arrived here from his post. He was sent for by a private message.

Alex. C. Brýce, United States consul at Matanzas, is supposed to have left that place on a schooner.

Pulaski F. Hyatt, the United States consul at Santiago de Cuba, has already left that port and is now in Jamaica.

The American newspaper correspondents with Consul-General Lee are ready to leave here on the Fern about five o'clock this afternoon.

Alexander Gollan the British consul here, is ready to take charge of American interests so far as allowed. Mr. Gollan is likely to rise to the occasion and may be an important factor in future events.

A diplomat here told this correspondent that he did not believe there would be war between the United States and Spain.

SPAIN CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS

BELIEF THAT THE FORCES COULD EASILY WIN ON LAND AND SEA.

London, Eng., April 9.—The Madrid correspondent of The Standard says: "The most curious feature throughout the crisis has been the fact that during the past six months the Spanish people and their rulers have not seemed to realize that the American people and President were in earnest, though reluctant to go to war. In the United States diplomacy and the executive seem hardly to have realized how difficult it would be to induce proud little Spain to relinquish her hold upon Cuba and Porto Rico. To understand the present temper of the Spanish poeple it must be borne in mind that their press and Government have encouraged them to believe that their navy, with a little vigor in preparation, could compete easily on the first brush with the American navy.

THEIR LAND FORCES.

"Then again, they had been led to suppose that their military organization in colonies like Cuba Porto Rico and the Philippines could undertake to punish severely any aggression on land from the very small regular forces and poorly organized militia of America. At home they are persuaded that their coasts and forts have nothing to fear, as the reserves can be called out and the coast guarded without difficulty. They put much confidence in the idea of sending privateers to raid upon the American merchant and coasting fleets. These optimistic views are not shared in high political and professional circles, where grave apprehension exists regarding trade and communication with the colonies and the despatch of reliefs and provisions especially for the Spanish forces in Cuba that used to get most of their supplies from the United States.

MR. HOLMES IS MISSING

Member for Haldimand Cannot be Served With Papers of Protest

Fifty Seven Petitions Now Filed—The Latest Against J. H. Douglas, the Opponent of Dr. Willoughby.

(Special to the Times.)

Toronto, April 10.—The fifty-seventh election protest was filed at Osgoode Hall this morning and is against the return of J. H. Douglas, the Liberal who defeated Dr. W. A. Willoughby, the Conservative whip, in East Northumberland.

The Liberal member for Haldimand, J. W. Holmes, against whom a petition has been filed, cannot be found for service of the papers, and it has been made necessary to serve them by posting a notice upon the door of the office of the Registrar of the Court of Appeal.

AN ELECTION MOTION.

Before the Master-in-Chambers at Osgoode Hall yesterday morning T. M. Higgins, who represents Abner Summerfeldt, the deputy returning officer in the East York election, who is being sued for a penalty on account of irregularities, moved to strike out certain paragraphs in the statement of claim as embarrassing and for an order for particulars as to the manner in which the ballot alleged to have been placed by the defendant in the ballot box was spoiled. T. L. Church opposed the motion on behalf of Edward Hastings, the elector, who is moving in the matter. Both motions were refused.

MAIL ROBBERY

PRISONER AT PEMBROKE CONFESSES TO ROBBING THE MAIL.

(Special to the Times)

Ottawa, April 9.—A robbery of the mails took place a few days ago between Combermere and Killaloe on the O.A. and P.S. Railway. Dominion Policeman Groulex was put on the job and he arrested a man named McEachren and took him to Pembroke. The sum of $273 cash was recovered and the man made a confession of guilt to the constable. He has been committed for trial. Most of the money lost was recovered.

Lord Beresford Tells a Very Interesting Story

THE NAVY OF TO-DAY

To Dam the River Nile and Transform the Land of the Pharoahs

A Great Engineering Feat—Australian Federation Will be Submitted to Popular Vote—All the World's News.

(Special to the Times)

London, April 10.—Lord Charles Beresford is nowadays as much the idol of the jack tars who man the British navy as Horatio Nelson was that of the pig-tailed sailors who worked the long 32-pounders which blazed upon the French from the portholes of the ancient three-deckers. And it is precisely for the qualities that made Nelson loved that Beresford is now so ardently admired. In pluck, audacity, lack of fear and even disobedience of orders when he considers them foolish, he is almost a prototype of the seaman who died at Trafalgar, and should England at any time during his life be again engaged in naval warfare it is a foregone conclusion that the pugnacious and erstwhile captain of the Condor would be in the forefront laying his ship alongside that of an enemy in true Nelsonian fashion.

SOME REMINISCENCES.

Lord Charles has recently given some exceedingly interesting reminiscences tending to show changes that have taken place in the British navy since, in his midshipman days, he joined the Marlborough three-decker. In those times it was a common thing for 25 men to come aboard during the night helplessly drunk, and there was flogging for the slightest offense, as many as seven seamen being whipped in one morning. Moreover, ignorance was so rank that out of 1,200 men 500 could neither read nor write. Then the fashion was for a sailor never to return from shore sober; now he makes it a point never to climb the sides of his ship in a drunken state. The member for York also points out that, although under modern conditions the sentiment of the sea is largely disappearing, yet more nerve and determination, more quickness and resource are required than under the old regime. Since he joined the navy the proportion of non-combatants has risen from 7 to 57 per cent., owing to the employment of complicated machinery. Lord Charles draws attention to the fact that whereas in the army there are 578 officers who have risen from the ranks, there are in the navy only two similar cases out of 60,000 men, and desires that a change may be brought about.

A NOTABLE FEAT.

Engineers of this country are regarding with interest the commencement of one of the greatest feats in their own particular line which has ever been attempted. The land of the Pharoahs will in a few weeks become the scene of operations only equalled in magnitude by the building of the pyramids themselves, or the digging of the Suez canal. English engineers are undertaking the construction of two immense dams in the valley of the Nile, the one at Assuan, the other at Assiut, which, when completed, will, at flood time, hold in the waters of Nilus and double the acreage of land under cultimation, thus enriching Egypt one half more. The tract of country between the dams is 250 miles in extent. The bulwarks themselves will be a mile and a quarter long, 60 feet thick and a force of 15,000 men will be required to construct them. A ship containing the necessary machinery has already sailed out of the Thames for Alexandria.

TROUBLES IN THE BALKANS.

Disquieting news of a warlike nature has been received from the Balkan peninsula, where it appears likely that hostilities may at any time commence between Turkey and Bulgaria. The Turkish atrocities in Macedonia are said to have excited the utmost indignation in the Bulgarian kingdom, especially among the Macedonian residents, who are forming committees and working silently but feverishly towards an uprising of Macedonians and the intervention of Bulgaria. Large supplies of arms, it is stated, have been imported into the latter country and have afterwards found their way into the hands of the oppressed peasants of Macedonia. Turkey evidently fears an embroglio with Bulgaria, for her military authorities are concentrating troops along the Bulgarian frontier and otherwise making strenuous preparations for an outbreak. In the event of war Turkey would also have to reckon with Servia and Roumania. Representations have been made to Sofia by Russia and the other powers with the object of smoothing over the difficulties but with what success is not known.

AUSTRALIAN FEDERATION.

The question of Australian federation is exciting some interest among public men and parliamentarians who recognize the immense value to the empire of a chain of confederated colonies in the Pacific similar to the chain now stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific in the form of the Dominion of Canada. An important stage has been reached in Australia by the adoption of the Commonwealth Bill at the federal convention which has been sitting for two months at Melbourne. The effect of this is that all the colonies, except Queensland, have consented to the proposal for a plebiscite, which will shortly be taken. Should the vote result satisfactorily for confederation it is believed that efforts will be made to remove the difficulties which prevent the inclusion of Queensland. Says The Times: "Remembering the advance in everything which constitutes the dignity of national life that was made by Canada when she became a confederation, we can only look forward to the result of the plebiscite which may create a new British power in the Pacific."

SEADOG DIES.

Despatches from St. Petersburg state that an old and brave foe of the British has been removed by death in the person of Admiral Popoff, at the age of 77. The old sailor was the inventor of the famous circular ironclads Novgorod and Vice-Admiral Popoff. He was well-known for his participation in the Crimean war, during which he sank no less than seven vessels of the allied fleets, and earned a reputation as a bold naval fighter.

LIBERALS AND CUBA.

The advanced Liberals of England have made a move in regard to the importance. At a meeting of their Spanish-American question of some executive the other day they passed the following resolution for transmission to the Foreign Offices of Great Britain and the United States: "That this committee heartily sympathizes with the American people in their humane efforts to deliver Cuba from the horrors they have so long endured and appeals to her Majesty's Ministers to put moral pressure to bear on the Spanish Government to recognize the justice of Cuban claims."

DERVISHES WERE DEFEATED

British Troops Killed 2,000 and Secured 4,000 Prisoners

Brilliant Engagement—Mahmoud's Army is Practically Wiped Out and He Himself is Among Those Captured.

(Special to the Times.)

Atbara, Camp Nubii, April 10.—The British and Egyptian troops cheered each other until late last night over the capture of the Dervish position. The river bed and the thick bush down to the river are full of Dervish dead. Late Thursday night the Sirdar issued orders saying that he was sure every man of the force would do his duty, but he hoped they would all remember God.

ENEMY WAS BRAVE.

The Dervish fire was very heavy, but too high, and the British loss was mostly before reaching the zareba. Colonel Murray had his horse shot under him and was wounded in the arm. The enemy certainly behaved with the greatest bravery. The prisoners say they lost heavily by the bombardment before the advance. Some of the enemy tried to break across the river at an early stage, but were beaten back by the Dervish horsemen.

The rockets under Captain Beatty set the enemy's camp afire in many places. The enemy were in deep trenches in rows behind the zareba. Cashtir Redi fell at the head of his men. Ten guns were captured. The prisoners say Osman Digna fled early during the bombardment.

A BRILLIANT VICTORY.

The authorities call yesterday's battle the most brilliant ever fought in the Soudan, everything having been carried straight through without a hitch or check. While the position was shelled by the Maxim, Nordenfelts and shrapnels, the Dervishes hardly attempted a reply. Nothing was visible in front of the position except a solitary wabbling camel, but in the trenches the large number of mangled donkeys and camels proved the terrible effect of the British fire. Inside the zareba there was an astonishing labyrinth of earthworks, every goat seemingly having had its own shelter and trench.

OVER 2,000 KILLED.

Says a correspondent: "I have been all over the Dervish position and estimate their dead at more than two thousand. The night march was as weird as that of Tel-El-Kebir. Our troops observed a funeral silence on nearing the enemy's zareba at Makhiba. No smoking was permitted. Egyptians, Soudanese and British strove to be the first in the glorious race and to be first in the attack. As usual several brigades claim the honor.

"The enemy opened with such a terific fire that our men were dropping on all sides. It was as tremendous a fusilade as troops were ever called upon to face. Mahmoud's army is practically wiped out. Four thousand of his followers have been taken prisoners and he himself has been caught hiding in a hole under a bed. He is a tall, dignified, sensuous-looking black baggara, about 35 years old, with a shaved head. When taken he was dressed in a richly embroidered robe."

LOSS OF THE BRITISH FORCES

THE DEAD OF THE ALLIED TROOPS NUMBER ABOUT 01 ALL TOLD.

Cairo, Egypt, April 10.—The British brigade in the defeat of the Dervishes yesterday at Atbara, and the capture of Mahmoud, the Dervish commander, and four thousand of his followers, lost, in addition to the officers killed, ten rank and file killed and had 80 men wounded. The Egyptians lost 51 men killed and had 14 officers and 319 men wounded. The Dervishes lost about two thousand men killed.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 11, 1898

PROPOSED POSTAL CHANGES.

The changes embodied in Hon. Mr. Mulock's postal bill are we think, good ones.

First, there is no reason why Canada cannot carry letters as cheaply as any other country. The loss of revenue along our borders is enormous owing to the fact that the charge on letters on the other side is only two cents and on this side three. Where border residents have much correspondence, it pays them to do their mailing on the other side of the line, thus saving a third of the expense. In cases of that kind Uncle Sam gets the other two thirds and Canada nothing. The increased revenue from that source will do something to make up the deficiency caused by the reduction, and we have not the least doubt that the balance will come from an increased use of two cent letter postage in place of one cent postal cards.

This great family journal doesn't believe, either, in free transmission of newspapers. A newspaper has no business dead heading itself through the mails at the country's expense. It is a commercial enterprise and if it cannot pay postage it should shut up shop. To be sure some concession is still made to the purely local newspaper. It can be sent free to post-offices within a radius of ten miles, except at the place of publication. That concession, however, is trifling. It will save the rural weekly a little expense and much trouble. But it seems to us that the ten mile limit will be a difficult one to enforce. It would have been better to have specified the county limits as the dead head line for the sake of simplicity.

The other changes granting free transmission for literature for the blind, and regulating the return of dead letters no one can find fault with.

The provincial gathering of the C. W. A. is our meet.

Emerson, the actor, who killed Tuttle at London, is to be tried on the charge of manslaughter, the original charge of murder being changed at the request of the Crown Prosecutor. Evidence given by members of the company goes to show that Tuttle was a violent-tempered man, and that he had been heard to remark that he would "fix Emerson." On the night of the shooting, Tuttle took up a large knife, and said: "The next kick I hear, he gets this." One witness said the words were used in jest, but others took them seriously. Emerson will be tried at the June Assizes.

A Practical Reformer.

He had not been in business very long, or he would assuredly have known better than to open his place of business near a somewhat pretentious neighborhood and place the sign "Gents' Furnishing Store" over the door. He observed that a prim looking lady paused and stared at it whenever she passed, and he was pleased to think that she was struck by its artistic qualities.

"It pays to have things done right," he said to his salesman. "The extra gold leaf in that lettering cost money, but it attracts attention."

One day the prim looking lady came into the shop. The proprietor hastened to wait on her and earnestly endeavored to display the affable courtesy befitting the occasion.

"What can I show you today, madam?" he inquired, after bowing several times in rapid succession.

"I was attracted by your sign," she answered. "I would like to inspect the goods you mention."

"I don't remember having called attention to any special lines in my window."

"I refer to the sign over your door. My sister and I are going to give a series of tableaux vivants. Some of them will depict scenes in the lower elements of society, and we should like to have you furnish us with a few gents for the occasion."

She gazed at his embarrassment with great satisfaction for a moment and departed without further conversation. As she turned the corner the proprietor thoughtfully remarked, "Tom, I guess you'd better hunt up another sign painter and a schoolteacher and have them come and talk this over."—Washington Star.

Large Doings.

On Long Island, a hundred and more years ago, there was fox hunting for three days during the season, and the biography of Catherine Schuyler contains the following apt lines, from the pen of a witty woman whose name, unfortunately, remains unknown:

A fox is killed by twenty men.
That fox perhaps had killed a hen.
A gallant act no doubt is here.
All wicked foxes ought to fear
When twenty dogs and twenty men
Can kill a fox that killed a hen.

—Youth's Companion.

The cravat was originally a large shawl worn around the neck, not for show, but for comfort, by a nation of eastern Europe called Cravates or Croats.

His Wife Won.

A Georgia man, who was unpopular in his community, insured his life for $2,000. He took the policy home to his wife and said:

"Maria, here's a life insurance document for $2,000."

"Thank you, dear," said his wife. "How are you feeling today?"

"Not well," he replied, "and I don't think I am long for this world, and I want to say to you that when I die it is my wish that you devote $1,000 of the money to defraying my funeral expenses."

"Mercy on me," exclaimed the wife, "why do you want such an expensive funeral?"

"I'll explain. I'm perfectly satisfied that nobody will attend my funeral, and I want to hire people to go at so much a head. I'm going out today and see what arrangements I can make for attendants on that forthcoming melancholy occasion. If they won't come gratis, why—I'll just hire 'em an give 'em an order on you for the money."

He went forth and at nightfall returned with a dejected look.

"Maria," he said, "it's no use. You can have the whole $2,000. Just go to my funeral yourself."—Atlanta Constitution.

In His Line.

Miles—I see your friend Hawkins has another "selling out at cost" sign tacked up on the front of his store.

Giles—Yes. Do you know, I think Hawkins missed his vocation. He should have been a political campaign manager.

Miles—Why so?

Giles—He is continually nailing lies.

SHERMAN WAS KIND.

A SOUTHERN POET'S RECOLLECTIONS OF THE GENERAL.

Frank L. Stanton Recalls Some Incidents of the Closing Days of the War—General Sherman's Goodness to the Elder Stanton, Who Was Very Ill In Savannah.

Frank L. Stanton, the popular Georgia poet, always speaks up for General Sherman when he hears any severe criticism of that famous commander's methods.

The story told by Stanton has never found its way into print, but it deserves a place among the minor incidents and reminiscences of the war period.

"When Savannah fell," said Stanton, "I was a little chap about 8 years old. The confusion and tumult in the streets frightened me, and I was afraid to go very far from the house.

"Young as I was, I understood that something very serious had occurred. Instead of seeing Confederate soldiers parading the streets with a few Federal prisoners I saw thousands of Federals swarming through the town, and they had a great many Confederates under guard.

"The situation had been reversed. That was plain, even to a child.

"My father was very ill, in the last stages of consumption, and my mother was worn out with anxiety and the cares of the household. Our neighbors were panic stricken, and everybody seemed to be expecting some awful calamity.

"Penned up there as we had been for a long time, without supplies and without any money except worthless Confederate currency, the outlook was gloomy enough. How was my sick father to get the things he needed? That was the problem with my mother.

"Somebody told General Sherman about my father and mentioned the fact that he was a kinsman of a very distinguished and powerful officer on the Union side.

"One day when I entered my father's room I found three Federal officers sitting there in pleasant conversation with the invalid and my mother.

"I was scared and started to run, but one of the strangers, a middle aged man with a roughly trimmed brown beard, called me back. He asked my name, and before I knew it had me on his knee, and he said so many nice things to me that I took quite a fancy to him.

"He was General Sherman, and he had called with two of his staff officers to see my father. When the visitors left, the general told my mother at the door that he knew all about the inconveniences of a siege and insisted upon sending from the army stores something that would suit a sick man.

"Under the circumstances such an offer could not be declined. It was a picnic for the children of the family, I can tell you.

"After that, while the general was in the city, something was sent to the house every day. Brandy, wine, loaf sugar, lemons, beef, chickens, coffee, vegetables and I don't know what else came in generous quantities. We had plenty for the family and for our nearest nighbors.

"Nor was that all. The general sent one of the best physicians in the hospital service, and the last days of my father were made far more comfortable than we had hoped for under the adverse conditions of those dark days.

"General Sherman came to the house once more before he left Savannah. I cannot remember what he said, but he was sympathetic and he said something about the pleasure it gave him to aid a relative of his distinguished friend at Washington.

"At that time I was very fond of a showy uniform, and it vexed my childish mind to see my friend the general always dressed so shabbily. His staff officers presented a better appearance, and some of them were really gorgeous in their spectacular rig.

"The other boys and the negroes agreed with me that the commander must be in very hard luck or he would certainly dress better. Still, I was then convinced that he was a wonderfully wise man. With my pockets full of his loaf sugar, which I had surreptitiously abstracted from the pantry, I would have been ungrateful if I had formed any other opinion.

"Sherman left the city and marched onward through the Carolinas, and that ended the war.

"No, I never saw him again. My father died, and I lived in different places, my work keeping me so busy that I had no time to think of the general or anybody else not connected with my immediate business. I wish now that I had seen him before he passed away. As it is, I can only recall him as he appeared to my boyish and wondering eyes, under circumstances which did not give me an opportunity to study him. No matter what may be said of his conduct in war, I cannot help liking him. He was a good friend just when we most needed one."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Doubtful Compliments.

The compliments paid by the poor are often put in an amusing way. One old woman who was very fond of the rector said to Mr. Bernays: "You know, sir, us likes the rector; 'is ears are so clean." Surely an odd reason for parochial affection. Another admirer once declared with regard to the whole staff of clergy, "You are all so plain" (a word of high commendation), "but as for the vicar, 'e's beautiful." The greatest compliment, though at the same time the most curious Mr. Bernays ever heard, was paid by a workingman to a certain bishop, famous for his simple kindliness, "What I likes 'bout the bishop is 'e's not a gentleman."—Westminster Gazette.

Ethnologists, apropos of the statement that the original inhabitants of America were Asiatics, tell of a Chinook Indian woman found in the last century by Father Huk wandering in the far interior of Asia.

LITTLE SISTER.

Little sister's prim and sly,
With a keen and knowing eye,
With a bright and roguish glance,
Sharper than a soldier's lance.
At that glance my faint heart goes
Down and hobnobs with my toes.
Can she know the boon I seek—
Why I call three times a week?
How she watches all my moves—
Ah, I hope she quite approves!
And she treats me to such airs,
While my darling is up stairs.

She's discovered why I call!
Little sister knows it all!

—Harry Romaine in Ladies' Home Journal.

SHE THOUGHT IT STRANGE.

Naggley Went Out For His Little Walk Anyway.

Naggley threw down the evening paper he had been reading, yawned and stretched and said he guessed he'd go out for a little while, whereupon Mrs. Naggley said:

"Where are you going?"

"Oh, no place in particular."

"No, I s'pose not. It's anything or any place to get away from home with you. It's mighty strange that you can't content yourself for any length of time in your own home—mighty strange. I was reading this from Goethe today, 'He is happiest, be he king or peasant, who finds peace in his home.' I said to myself when I read it, 'I wish to the Lord Joe Naggley felt more like that.'

"Mrs. Goethe must have been a happy woman to have a husband who could say that. I'll bet a dime she did not have to sit alone evening after evening while Mr. Goethe ripped and paced around anywhere and everywhere, just so he needn't have to be at home with the wife he'd promised to love and honor and cherish, and who had done all she could to make home pleasant for him, and I'll bet Mr. Goethe didn't belong to three or four lodges and clubs that ought to be wiped out of existence, so the members of them would stay at home with their wives, where they belong.

"It's mighty strange that a man can talk so sweet and nice about a home of his own when he's trying to delude some girl into marrying him, and then when he gets her and a home he wants to be on the gad all the time. I say it's mighty strange.

"How many times before we were married did you make me sing 'Home, Sweet Home,' for you, and now if I try to sing it you look as if you'd taken a dose of ipecac. And look at that motto, 'There's no place like home,' that you made me work before we were married so as to have it all ready for our own home. It doesn't appeal to you any more than it appeals to that lamppost out there across the street. I'd like to know why.

"The land knows I do all I can to make home peaceful and pleasant for you. You couldn't scrape up a tablespoonful of dirt in this whole house, and I'll put my cooking against that of any other woman I know of—yes, I'd put it against Mrs. Goethe's even.

"I'll bet that her husband appreciated her a good deal more than you appreciate me, and I'll bet her home wasn't a bit cleaner than mine, nor her— What's that? What did you say about her tongue? I pity the poor woman if she didn't have a tongue.

"There never was a married woman yet who didn't need all the tongue the Lord gave her, and I don't know what I'd do if it wasn't for my tongue, and—Oh, yes; rush off as usual right when your wife is speaking! It shows just how much you respect her. It's mighty strange how soon men change after they are married—mighty strange!"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

During the reign of Elizabeth English dudes wore shoes three feet long, the toe pointed and fastened up to the garter with golden chains, to which little bel were attached.

Free Trial To Any Honest Man

The Foremost Medical Company in the World in the Cure of Weak Men Makes this Offer.

HEALTH AND ENERGY ASSURED. HAPPY MARRIAGE, GOOD TEMPER, LONG LIFE.

In all the world to-day—in all the history of the world—no doctor nor institution has treated and restored so many men as has the famed ERIE MEDICAL CO. of Buffalo, N. Y.

This is due to the fact that the company controls some inventions and discoveries which have no equal in the whole realm of medical science.

SCIENCE TRIMMING THE LAMP OF LIFE.

So much deception has been practiced in advertising that this grand old company now for the first time makes this startling offer:—

They will send their costly and magically effective appliance and a whole month's course of restorative remedies, positively on trial without expense to any honest and reliable man!

Not a dollar need be advanced—not a penny paid—till results are known to and acknowledged by the patient.

The Erie Medical Company's appliance and remedies have been talked about and written about all over the world, till every man has heard of them.

They restore or create strength, vigor, healthy tissue and new life.

They quickly stop drains on the system that sap the energy.

They cure nervousness, despondency and all the effects of evil habits, excesses, overwork, etc.

They give full strength, development and tone to every portion and organ of the body.

Failure is impossible and age is no barrier.

This "Trial without Expense" offer is limited by the company to a short time, and application must be made at once.

No C. O. D. scheme, no bogus philanthropy nor deception, no exposure—a clean business proposition by a company of high financial and professional standing.

Write to the ERIE MEDICAL COMPANY, BUFFALO, N. Y., and refer to seeing the account of their offer in this paper.

THE EMPEROR WORSTED.

A Plucky Little Hungarian Girl Got Revenge For Sadowa.

The present kaiser would probably not admit that he had often been thwarted in any of his plans, but an anecdote has recently become known which shows that he at least once "got the worst of it," and it is all the more piquant from the fact that he was defeated by a girl.

When the kaiser, who was then Prince Wilhelm, was about 10 years old, he and Prince Heinrich spent some time at Cassel with their tutors, who sometimes allowed the little princes to play with other children. One day when several of them were gathered together it chanced that a little French girl was among the number, and the young Germans conceived the brilliant idea of making her a representative of the country they all so cordially hated. The delightful plan was immediately put into execution, and the poor child was tied to a tree. Then began a fusillade of pine cones, sticks, etc., and whenever anything struck her there was a cry of "Here's for Sedan!" This went on for a few minutes, when a little Hungarian girl, Helena von D——, who was watching, could bear the injustice no longer, and, singling out Prince Wilhelm as chief offender, she threw herself on him. The attack being unexpected, he was completely taken by surprise and fell down, whereupon she began to pound him, crying out at each blow, "Here's for Sadowa!"

The prince was fast getting the worst of it, for his little adversary was thoroughly in earnest, when the imperial tutors, hearing the noise, rushed up and separated the combatants. After that the princes were more carefully watched, and Wilhelm had no opportunity to "get even" with the little champion of justice. Some days afterward, hearing that the princes were leaving, Helena went down to the gate to see them go by. As they passed Wilhelm spied his foe, and leaning out behind his tutor he stuck out his tongue.

Helena was the daughter of titled parents, and later she was married to an Englishman. When the kaiser was in London, she told this story to one of his gentlemen in waiting, who in turn repeated it to his majesty. The latter exclaimed: "Is that devil of a girl here now? I would like to see her." A meeting was arranged, but Helena became ill, and so they never met after that one encounter to make friends or renew hostilities.—New York Tribune.

A SAVAGE CRITICISM.

The Teacher's Artistic Cleverness Received a Hard and Cruel Blow.

In one of the Cleveland public schoolrooms of the primary grade the teacher has been reading Longfellow's "Hiawatha" to her pupils. Of course this is a rather ambitious work for the little ones, says The Plain Dealer, but they enjoy it, and the rhythm seems particularly pleasing to them. When they come to a hard word, the teacher goes to the blackboard and draws a picture to illustrate its meaning. This the pupils find highly entertaining, and it helps in quite a remarkable way to fix the text in their minds.

A few days ago they came to this line in the early part of the poem:

At the door on summer evenings sat the little Hiawatha.

"At—th' door on sum-mer eve-nings sat th' lit-tle"—read the children.

"Go on," said the teacher.

But they couldn't go on. The name of Hiawatha was too much for them. They knew who Hiawatha was, but they didn't recognize his name. So the teacher went to the board and took considerable pains in drawing:

First.—A wigwam with poles sticking up above it, and a rude aboriginal drawing above it, and a rude aboriginal painting on the side.

Second.—Little Hiawatha, with feathers in his hair, squatted at the wigwam door.

Third.—A fine harvest moon.

Then she pointed at Hiawatha and asked what it was.

There was a general craning of necks and shaking of heads.

"Come, come," said the teacher, "you know what that is."

Then one little girl spoke up:

"I guess it's a mud turtle."

And instantly, with one accord, the class glibly repeated:

"At th' door on sum-mer eve-nings sat th' lit-tle mud-dy tur tle."

And the teacher feels that her artistic cleverness received a hard and cruel blow.

Stylish Evening Bodice.

The simplest and perhaps the most fashionable bodice for evening wear, says a New York fashion authority, is the full blouse shape of chiffon, drooping over a fitted silk lining, the top cut out in square or rounding fashion, with a full tulle ruche, a narrow band of fur, a fall of lace or beaded revers to finish the edge. The sleeves consist of short, full puffs similarly trimmed. This is a basis for any kind of flower trimming that taste suggests. Rows of shaded pink roses devoid of foliage are in great use on evening gowns this winter, as are maidenhair fern and lilac sprays, laid upon strands of pink or orange satin ribbon not more than an inch and a half wide.

In a Chicago Art Gallery.

"It seems to me the perspective in this picture is faulty."

"The—er—what?"

"The perspective."

"Oh, yes, that part of it is very ugly. It's laid on too thick, and you can buy better frames than that one for $6 a dozen."—Chicago Tribune.

A Bad Bargain.

"Jane, did you break the china plate?"

"Yes'm. You got fooled on that plate, mum. It's a weak un. It broke the fourth time I dropped it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

NEWS IN THE OLD DAYS.

How the Wreck of a Steamship In 1859 Was Reported.

The ocean passenger steamer Franklin ran ashore on the south side of Long Island, opposite Center Moriches, at 8 o'clock on the morning of July 8, 1859. There was a dense fog prevailing at the time, and the officers of the vessel lost their bearings completely and did not know exactly where they were when the steamer stranded.

Surfmen and boats were not as plentiful along the coast line in those days as they are now. Several hours elapsed before boats were secured equal to the task of making their way through the surf to the steamer. Until communication was had with the vessel nothing was known about her. Finally a boat's crew came ashore, and the vessel's name and destination were made known. Her commander made arrangements with Sidney B. Topping to go to New York and report the stranding of the steamer to the board of underwriters, whose office at that time was in Wall street.

Mr. Topping at once crossed the bay to the mainland and harnessed up his horse to a light wagon and started for Patchogue, 14 miles away. It was just noontime when he stepped into the wagon. At Patchogue he changed horses and continued his journey to Babylon. Another change of horses was made at that place, and Mr. Topping started for Jamaica. His horse was pretty well winded when that place was reached, and he changed animals and continued on to Brooklyn, and crossing the ferry drove to the underwriters' office in Wall street. It was just 6 o'clock in the evening when he ascended the office steps. He had made the journey of a little more than 70 miles in exactly six hours.

Having reported the full details of the wreck to the underwriters, Mr. Topping drove around to the office of a leading newspaper and furnished the information for publication. He received a check for $50 from the paper and was told that had he brought a copy of a foreign newspaper from the Franklin they would have given him $100.

Mr. Topping was postmaster in Westhampton during the war and was a prominent figure on the east end of Long Island. He died in West Hampton at the age of 77.—New York Herald.

IS IT PREJUDICE?

Marriage Is Happiest, It Is Claimed, if the Wife Be Senior.

Every one has his own idea as to what will constitute a happy marriage, but there is one point on which nearly all agree—the wife must not be older than the husband.

People who look complacently on the spectacle of a girl of 16 or 18 marrying a man twice her age are ready to declare it a profanation of the marriage altar if the bride is a few years older than the bridegroom. It would be a curious study in sociology to trace this prejudice to its source. A prejudice it undoubtedly is, for some of the happiest marriages known to the world have been those in which the wife was the older of the two.

Every one who knows his Boswell knows the extraordinary devotion of Johnson to the fat, ugly widow whose manners were execrable and who was nearly twice his age, so the spiteful biographers say. He knows, too, how happy Tetty made Johnson and what a grief her death was to the great man.

The marriage of Margaret Fuller and the Count d'Ossoli was a brilliant success in point of happiness, though sadly brief. Margaret was seven years older than her husband and refused him several times on this ground, but his devotion and persistency overcame her reluctance, and the result of the marriage fulfilled her dream of such happiness. It is said that all who saw them together were struck by the loverlike fondness and exquisite deference of D'Ossoli's manner toward the plain New England woman, seven years his senior, whose only attraction apparently was her great intellect. Mrs. Story says of him: "No service was too trivial, no sacrifice too great. When she was ill, he nursed her and watched over her with the tenderness of a woman. Such tender, unselfish love I have rarely seen. It made green her days and gave her an expression of peace and serenity which before was a stranger to her."

Disraeli's wife was his senior, yet the marriage was a notably happy one.—Philadelphia Press.

REPROACH.

Sweetheart, sweetheart, what do ye want o' me?
Low the crying gulls are flying, skirls the yeasty sea.

Little lips, soft lips,
I hear them crying far;
I hear their voice go calling me
Where'er the shadows are.

Sweetheart, dear heart, what do ye want o' me?
Sunlight and starlight are over all the lea,
But dusty lies my heart, dear; rusty lies its key.
Sweetheart, sweetheart, what do ye want o' me?

Sweetheart, sweetheart, why do ye long for me?
Cold the palling snow was falling; skies no more were blue.

Little hands, soft hands,
Laid away to rest.
I feel their fingers seeking out
The old wound in my breast.

Sweetheart, dear heart, what do ye want o' me?
Bare and empty were my arms; lonely was my knee.
Where my heart is laid, dear, can't ye let me be?
Sweetheart, sweetheart, what do ye want o' me?

—Post Wheeler in New York Press.

A TUG ELOPEMENT.

It is only after much consideration and weighing of the matter that I am able to force myself to the point of telling the truth about the marriage and attempt at elopement which preceded the ceremony. And the determination to explain the matter briefly but fully is made simply in justice to Patience and her father, Samuel F. Yelnik, Esq., president of the Mogul mines and half a dozen other great financial concerns, for now I can afford both to pity him and laugh at him.

Furthermore, the newspapers published ridiculous stories at the time that they really made us all ashamed, telling, as they did, how I chartered a steam yacht and snatched Patience from her father's arms and carried her away to sea on the palatial craft on which a clergyman was awaiting us, and of the demands Mr. Yelnik made upon the navy department to send a warship after us, and how he nearly succeeded because of immense contributions to the presidential campaign fund.

Of course only the antiadministration papers printed this last stuff, for it was pure stuff and nonsense. Nevertheless the wild stories were sent all over the country, and I have even seen cabled dispatches which were printed about them in one or two journals of London and Paris. And naturally, as you can understand, all this was very disagreeable.

Well, to begin with, I did think a great deal of Patience—there's no use denying facts—and I had been half in love with her from boyhood. During the last year I had been with her more than usual, seeing her at home or on the links of the Country club and at various teas and club fetes.

And by sheer accident, I assure you, I spent the summer on the shores of Lake Champlain, making studies for two or three rather ambitious paintings, to be finished when cold weather came, and Patience was there, too, with her deep brown eyes and wavy hair and superb presence. I know this sounds like extravagant description, but it is accurate, for Patience is one of the finest specimens of young womanhood I have ever seen, thanks to inheritance and wheeling and tennis and golf and boating. She was visiting a cousin at Port Kent—a brunette with red lips and white teeth and the very mischief dancing in her eyes—and naturally Miss Elaim was interested in helping along a love affair—for where is the girl who wouldn't be?

I don't know how it happened, but in some way old Moneybags Yelnik heard of the situation and appeared suddenly one evening at the residence of Miss Elaim's parents. At the time his train from New York arrived Patience and I were strolling along the shore of Champlain in the moonlight, I'll confess, and when we returned to the Elaim home, some time after 10 o'clock, we found the callous hearted old fellow tramping up and down the veranda, smoking furiously and stroking his white whiskers in a manner that boded no good for us.

He never spoke to me, never acknowledged my presence by so much as a stare. Fact is, he utterly ignored me, and I'll admit that hurt my pride, confound him! He simply took Patience by the arm and marched her indoors, and next morning they went to New York before I had a chance to say farewell. But I was at the station, and as the train pulled out the dear girl called:

"Goodby, Fred! Don't worry. It's all right."

And then her father slammed the window and scowled as if he would like to bite me in half.

During the ensuing six months I worked as hard as I could, but never did I write to Patience, although I sent messages to her in Marion Elaim's letters and heard from her now and then through the same medium, so I wasn't really cut off, you see. I came back to town about the middle of September, and a week later Miss Elaim arrived at the Yelnik home in New Jersey to make a visit. But of course old Moneybags wouldn't allow me to see Patience, and naturally I had too much sense to call, but the deprivation was hard in more ways than one, as you will understand presently.

A month dragged by, and the time was approaching for Marion's visit to be concluded, when one Saturday afternoon I went aboard a ferryboat bound for Jersey City, whither I was to take a train for the town where Patience lived, and on the boat, for the first time in three months, I met Mr. Yelnik. He was feeling particularly amiable, probably because he had managed to "freeze out" some business rival in one of his great schemes, and he approached me, saying with a grim smile:

"How do you do, sir?"

"I'm well."

"Haven't seen you lately out at the [illegible]," he continued sarcastically.

"No, and you're not likely to," I replied, with emphasis. How long this con[illegible] might have continued I don't know, but at that moment we passed in mid stream close by a ferryboat [illegible] from Jersey City to New York [illegible] of the passengers on it, a [illegible] knew, waved her hand to [illegible] called out:

"Wait [illegible]! I'll be over at once."

The [illegible] boats had swept by each other [illegible] I turned to look at Mr. Yelnik. [illegible] almost livid with rage, [illegible] as with a chill.

"[illegible]," he said threateningly. "[illegible] you see each other. By [illegible] I'll make you pay for this. I [illegible] you had arranged an elopement," [illegible] claimed, getting more and more [illegible]. And he didn't become al[illegible] when [illegible] told him his surmise was true.

There were [illegible] few passengers aboard, and Patience's father had the sense to speak in low tones to avoid a scene, but it was awful the way he swore he would put me in prison for life and shoot me dead if I ever so much as dared to look at his daughter again. Of course he didn't get off the boat at Jersey City. He [illegible] close to me, and of course I came back to New York to meet the dear girl. But alas and alack! When we reached the middle of the river again and [illegible] the other boat, bound this time for Jersey City, old Yelnik fairly [illegible] for joy and shouted:

"There she is! I could recognize that hat [illegible] anywhere. So, you see, she [illegible] with you, you miserable, [illegible] confound you young villain, you [illegible]!"

My heart sank within me as he spoke, for, [illegible] quickly at the passing craft, [illegible] saw her frightened half to death [illegible] who realized our plot had been discovered, but in desperation I shouted:

"Wait for me in Jersey City!"

[illegible] ...led, and then we were gone again. Fifteen minutes elapsed before our [illegible] left the New York ferry slip, and [illegible] that time Mr. Yelnik chuckled and slapped his knees and acted like a wild lunatic, he was so overjoyed.

"Yes, 'wait for me in Jersey City!'" he [illegible] cackled. "Oh, she'll wait, don't you be afraid; she'll wait, but for me and not for you, and let me tell you something, sir—as soon as I can get a warrant you'll be locked up, and, by heavens, I'll see you in Sing Sing before I'm done with you!"

I went on in this fashion till we crossed the North river again and had come to a dead stop about 100 feet from the Jersey City ferry slip, blocked by a fleet of canalboats that were lazily crawling up the stream against the tide. I looked across them to the boat she had come over on. It was blocked inside of the slip, and, horror of horrors, there she stood on the deck ready to cross the river once more, having totally misunderstood the message I shouted.

A tugboat, awaiting to get down stream, slowly approached our craft and came to a dead stop so close that I could have stepped aboard her. Mr. Yelnik had walked to the other side of our deck, feeling safe so long as I was there and afloat. Like a flash I saw a chance to escape and called to the pilot of the tug:

"Want a job?"

"That's my watermelon," he replied.

Instantly I cleared our rail and leaped to the towboat, shouting:

"Sheer off, quick! Sheer off!"

The pilot rang his bells, the propeller whirled viciously, and we shot backward from the ferryboat as Mr. Yelnik rushed to its rail and swore at us.

"Skim around that fleet, quick," I called, hurrying up to the pilot house and pulling a $20 bill out of my pocket. "Now make for that boat in the slip and stand by till I get the young lady there, waiting for me."

"You bet I will," the pilot responded heartily. "Bully for you, young feller. I ain't been married long myself."

In less time almost than it takes to tell it we had come alongside the other ferryboat, and the dear girl was aboard with me, and we were speeding down toward the bay. When we were quite out of reach, the pilot asked:

"Now where do you want to go?"

"Oh, anywhere in New Jersey, so we can be married without stopping for a license—say to Atlantic Highlands or Long Branch or anywhere."

"You dear old goose!" exclaimed my betrothed. "Why, we can't get there under two hours, and by that time he will have telegraphed all over the coast to arrest us on sight."

"Good Lord!" I groaned. "What'll we do? I haven't thought of that"—

"Why, just let's sail up the Kill von Kull here to Bayonne and land in 15 minutes," she replied in a businesslike way. "He never would dream of our going ashore so close, but it's all New Jersey, and in ten minutes more we can find a minister and be m-m-married," she concluded, whispering and blushing.

And we did so and took the first train back to New York and telegraphed from our hotel to Mr. Yelnik that we would be glad to have him call on us with his wife that evening.

Since then we have been told that when the old gentleman reached home that afternoon he almost had an attack of apoplexy, for when he went up the veranda steps the front door was opened by his daughter Patience, who confessed everything—how she and I had never been really in love, but how Marion had become engaged to me that summer, and we simply had to be married clandestinely because Mr. Yelnik finally succeeded in prejudicing Mr. and Mrs. Elaim against me so that they refused to sanction a wedding.—Coffyn Moody in Chicago Record.

The Kidneys

are the seat or the starting point of many maladies, all of them serious, all more or less painful, and all of them tending, unless cured, to a fatal end. No organs of the body are more delicate or more sensitive than the kidneys. When symptoms of disease appear in them not a moment is to be lost if health is to be restored. The best way to treat the kidneys is through the blood, cleansing it from the poisonous matter which is usually at the bottom of kidney complaints. For this purpose there is no remedy equal to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For many years I have been a constant sufferer from kidney trouble, and have tried a number of largely advertised kidney cures without benefit. At last a friend advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The use of eight bottles of this remedy entirely cured my malady."—MARY MILLER, 1285 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Shaving a Pursued Bandit.

"I shaved Jesse James, the once noted outlaw, down in southern Kentucky a long time ago," said an old gray haired fellow on the train the other day, "when the man's life wasn't worth a penny. Jesse rushed into my little country place, down in the Red river country, one day in the latter part of December and asked me if I wouldn't shave him while he looked after his colt's revolvers and watched the door. I was not a barber by trade, but those persuaders Jesse had induced me to try my hand with a new Wade & Butcher razor I took out of my showcase. As I shaved, the man of iron nerve sat with a cocked pistol in each hand and told me in a few hurried words that a posse was pursuing him, bent on capturing him, dead or alive, on the charge of robbing a bank at Russellville, a crime, he averred, of which he was not guilty. He wanted his beard shaved off that he might fool his pursuers if they should happen to catch up with him. I finished the job of scraping. The much wanted individual thanked me, and, mounting a horse, which had been hitched in the rear of my store, bade me good evening and rode away. I didn't know for certain who my visitor was, although I suspected it, until the next day, when I heard that a man in the neighborhood was telling that he had seen the elder James the afternoon before. I suppose that was the last shave Jesse James got in Kentucky, and I have never seen him after that day."—Louisville Post.

POND'S EXTRACT

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29, 1894.

I have used "Pond's Extract" for many years and always insist upon my patients getting "Pond's," not the ordinary Extract, which is often a very poor article. W. K. BROWN, M. D.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9, 1895.

I use Pond's Extract a great deal in my practice. I think it very valuable in all venous enlargements.
J. L. BRADFORD, M. D.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., Nov. 27, 1894.

I have been using Pond's Extract in my practice for twenty years. I frequently have the experience you mention of druggists insisting they can put up as good as yours. I don't believe it. I use Pond's Extract a great deal as an antiseptic in combination with glycerine and carbolic acid. I think it far superior to any antiseptic known.
F. G. FLOURNOY, M. D.

COLUMBIA, PA., Jan. 18, 1895.

I have been a constant user of Pond's Extract since 1852, and do not expect to discontinue it while I live. S. ARMOR, M. D.

CHELSEA, MASS., Nov. 8, 1894.

I have made diseases of the skin a specialty for thirty years, and am free to say I know of no remedy that has given me such perfect satisfaction as Pond's Extract in cases for which it is recommended.
G. W. BABCOCK, M. D.

ASTHMATICS' INSTITUTE, Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 8, 1894.

I know Pond's Extract to be a valuable remedy, and shall continue its use whenever the opportunity offers.

How to Cure All Skin Diseases

Simply apply "Swayne's Ointment." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for Swayne's Ointment. Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Avoid substitutes.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia., Lyman Sons, & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Positively refuse all substitutes.

Miss Melville's New Premises

Miss Melville has removed her fancy fancy goods' business to handsome new premises on Hunter street., next door to Clark and Gibson's jewellery establishment. The new store is a model of neatness and helps very materially to enhance the appearance of the large and well-selected stock on view. The superior class of goods carried by Miss Melville and the exceedingly reasonable prices charged should substantially increase her already large trade. The reader when in search of anything in the fancy goods' line, should certainly inspect Miss Melville's stock.

A Coming Event

There will be a unique and pleasing entertainment given in Bradburn's Opera House on Thursday evening, 21st inst., under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of St. Luke's church, Ashburnham. One of the features of the entertainment will be a spectacular scene, entitled "Legions of Spring," in which 40 little girls will take part. Miss Calcutt, who has this portion of the programme in charge, will make it a huge success, as she always does. Further particulars later on.

Remanded Till Friday.

James McDonald, who is accused of having robbed the Norwood post office, was brought before County Magistrate Edmison for his preliminary hearing Saturday morning. He elected to be tried by a jury. Mr. Pearce gave evidence describing the robbery and capture of the prisoner, which was practically the same as the Times' report of the occurrence. This was the only evidence submitted. A revolver, a bottle of chemicals, and the valise and small bag found on the prisoner were also produced in Court. The Crown asked for a remand till next Friday, which was granted. The Magistrate refused to grant bail. Mr. D. O'Connell defended the accused.

FIRE IN CAVAN

The Residence of Reeve Hooten Destroyed Yesterday Morning.

Yesterday morning the residence of Mr. Robert Hooten, reeve of Cavan, was totally destroyed by fire. The cause of the blaze was a defective flue and although noticed in its incipiency and manfully fought for fully an hour all efforts to subdue the flames proved unavailing. The building was valued at $1,000 and was insured for $400. There was also $200 insurance on the contents. The greater part of the furniture was saved.

PETERBORO' GETS THE MEET

Ottawa was Beaten in the Voting by Over 2,000 of a Majority.

The telegram of Mr. T. E. Bradburn, Good Friday evening, announcing that Peterborough had secured the provincial meet by over 2,000 majority, caused much enthusiasm in town. Peterborough had a strong contingent in attendance at the meeting of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association at Toronto on Friday and went into the fight to win—and won with unexpected ease.

The representatives of the two rivals had been mustering their forces all morning in preparation for the vote and when this matter was taken up both towns had their supporters in readiness to cast their ballots. The votes numbering in all, 4,124 were quickly collected. The half thousand delegates present evinced a keen interest in the balloting and much speculation was indulged in as to the respective chances of the two towns. The meeting was adjourned, however, until three o'clock and three scrutineers were deputed to count the ballots. The result was not known until after the meeting had been called to order at three o'clock, when the following was given out:

Peterborough 3 045

Total 4 124

The Peterborough delegation gave vent to their feelings in prolonged cheers. The Ottawa delegates did not, of course, feel at all elated over their defeat, but they took it in sportsmanlike manner, which has characterized their conduct all through the campaign. "Though we have been defeated we will all be at Peterborough on July 1," was the way in which one of the visitors from the Capital expressed fully the sentiments of his fellow delegates.

A GOOD FRIDAY BLAZE

Mr G. W. Green's Pump Factory Goes Up In Smoke

About six o'clock, Good Friday morning fire was discovered in the large frame building on the Dickson race occupied by Mr. G. W. Green, pump manufacturer. The building, which was formerly occupied by Lindsay and Seldon furniture manufacturers, was entirely of wood, and this, together with the inflamable nature of the stock carried, rendered it utterly impossible to get the fire under control.

The firemen responded to the alarm and the steamer was brought over, while a stream was also secured through 1300 feet of hose from the hydrant on the Hunter-st. end of the bridge. Water, however, was powerless to stay the flames, for the wind that was blowing carried the fire all through the building, which in an incredibly short time was a mass of seething flames. The firemen gave their attention to the lumber and surrounding property and succeeded in preventing any spread of the fire.

The building was valued at about $4,500 and was insured for $3,000 in six companies. The Western, North British and Mercantile, Lancashire, Manchester, British American and the Phoenix of Brooklyn, each had $500 of the insurance. The Dickson Co. had a considerable quantity of furniture stored in the top storeys of the factory. Mr. Walter Green is a heavy loser. His machinery and stock, the latter included a large quantity of manufactured goods ready for shipment, was valued at $4,500, while he only carried an insurance of $1,000 in the Economical of Berlin. Mr. Chas. Moore had a number of cheese vats in the factory which had been made by Mr. Green, but left there by Mr. Moore in store. There was $200 insurance on these.

EASTER SERVICES YESTERDAY

At St. John's, All Saints, St. Luke's and St. Peters

AT ST. JOHN'S.

There were three communion services held in St. John's yesterday morning—at 7 o'clock, 8 and 12.15—all of which were largely attended. At 11 o'clock morning prayer the church was, as usual on this festive occasion, thronged with worshippers. The altar and church were beautifully decorated with floral tributes from members of the congregation, while the service was of a befittingly joyous and impressive nature. The Benedictus and the Te Deum Laudamus were set to special music, the former being by Martin and the latter by Dykes in G, both of which were very creditably rendered by the choir, as also the anthem, "As it began to Dawn," by Vincent. At the evening service, which was also very largely attended, the singing was in keeping with that of the morning. The Magnificat was set to music by Tozer, while the Nunc Dimittis was from the pen of Vaughan. Special collections were taken up at both morning and evening prayers in aid of the Sunday School Building Fund, which were liberally responded to. That of the morning amounted to about $300. The sum total of the contributions for this praiseworthy purpose will be fully announced to-morrow. Exceedingly appropriate and interesting sermons were delivered on both occasions, the rector, Rev. J. C. Davidson, preaching in the morning and the curate, Rev. Mr. Stevenson in the evening.

In the afternoon a special service was held in the church for the benefit of the Sunday school children who attended in a body. Rev. Mr. Stevenson read prayers and delivered a very instructive sermon to the little folks.

AT ALL SAINTS'.

Two celebrations of Holy Communion were held at All Saints' yesterday morning. The altar and church were prettily decorated with flowers and the singing at both morning and evening services had been specially prepared for the occasion and was very creditably rendered by the excellent choir which has been secured since the dedication of this building. Rev. Mr. Armitage preached at both events. The appeal in aid of the debt incurred by the construction of the chancel and other necessary improvements was munificently responded to that of the morning amounting to $103.

AT ST. LUKE'S.

There were two celebrations of the Holy Communion in St. Luke's church yesterday, the first at 8 o'clock a.m., and the second at the close of morning prayer. The rector, Rev. H. Symonds preached both morning and evening. The collections were very liberal.

AT ST. PETER'S.

Large congregations assembled at the different services held at St. Peter's cathedral. Mass was celebrated at 8.30, 9.15 and 10.30; and vespers at 7 p.m.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES

Mr Henry Varley in St. Paul's Church last Night.

Mr. Henry Varley, the celebrated English evangelist, opened a series of meetings in St. Paul's church yesterday evening. The services were most impressive and the congregation the largest that has assembled at St. Paul's in years.

Mr. Varley has been wonderfully successful in England, Australia and different parts of Canada. In Brantford, where he labored some years ago, a great religious upheaval followed and hundreds were added to the membership of the different churches. He was an intimate friend of Rev. Charles Spurgeon.

The speaker took for the subject matter of his remarks, "the atonement," and his eloquent and fervent address made a marked impression on his hearers.

The choir, with Mr. John Crane as conductor, rendered an exceptionally fine programme. Their phrasing was admirable and the beneficial results of careful training was in evidence in every number.

The solo of Miss Hansen, of Oshawa, is specially deserving of mention. Her distinct enunciation and deep and mellow voice created a very favorable impression.

Mr. Varley addresses a meeting at the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon at three o'clock.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Spring Medicine

Is made a necessity by the impure condition of the blood after winter's hearty foods, and breathing vitiated air in home, office, schoolroom or shop. When weak, thin or impure, the blood cannot nourish the body as it should. The demand for cleansing and invigorating is grandly met by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives the blood just the quality and vitality needed to maintain health, properly digest food, build up and steady the nerves and overcome that tired feeling. It is the ideal Spring Medicine. Get only

McKINLEY'S MESSAGE

He Advocates Intervention by The United States.

AN ARMISTICE GRANTED

The Spanish Government Takes The Advice of the Great Powers

War Still Probable, Although the Pressure Is Somewhat Relieved Latest News from the Seats of Both Governments

(Special to the Times.)

Washington, April 11.—The President's message asks Congress to authorize the President to take measures to secure a termination of hostilities in Cuba, and to secure the establishment of a stable government there, and to use the military and naval forces of the United States as he may think necessary for those purposes. The President says the only hope of relief from a condition which can no longer be endured is the enforced pacification of the island. The issue is now with Congress, and he awaits its action, standing prepared to carry out every obligation imposed on him by the constitution.

Spain's decree for a suspension of hostilities is submitted to Congress for just and careful attention, with the observation that if the measure attains a successful result, "then our aspirations as a peace-loving people will be realized. If it fails, it will be only another justification for our contemplated action."

The Maine incident figures prominently in the message. The President argues that the wreck of the Maine in Havna harbor shows that Spain is not able to guarantee security to foreign vessels. Spain has disavowed any connection with that disaster, and has offered to submit to arbitration all the differences which may arise from that affair.

BOTH HOUSES ADJOURN

NO COMMENT ON THE MESSAGE BY EITHER SENATORS OR REPRESENTATIVE.

Washington, April 11.—When the reading of the President's message had been concluded in the Senate, it was at once referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and the Senate adjourned until to-morrow.

In the House the message was sent to the Foreign Affairs Committee without comment, and other business at once taken up.

Washington, April 11.—The only features worthy of note to-day in the general situation at Washington and Madrid, outside of the President's Message, were the suspense in both Capitals pending the publication of that message, and the disappointment manifested in Spain that the Spanish Government had, as the Madrid papers put it, backed down.

Pressure seems to have been successfully put upon Mr. McKinley to prevent his altering his message to delay the crisis.

General Blanco is in a dilemma; the insurgents have a standing threat to massacre any peace messenger from the Spanish forces, and as they have already murdered several, Blanco cannot see how he can deliver the offer of an armistice and negotiate for its acceptance.

New York, April 11.—The Herald's Washington reports say that McKinley's message will go to Congress today, recommending intervention, but with the word "immediate" stricken out, and indicating that Spain should be allowed an opportunity to prove her sincerity and ability to establish the new form of self-government which she now contemplates. Thus it would appear that Spain has gained at least delay by the new card which she has played. Mr. McKinley's wish may, however, not affect Congress.

DISTRUST OF SPAIN.

Another New York paper's Washington news says McKinley will not accept the latest proposal from Madrid, not regarding it as important enough to justify further postponement by the United States. The proffer of a truce by the Spanish Government does not concern the United States. It will have no effect upon our program, except the Cuban Republic and the Spanish Government in Cuba combine to guarantee peace and order and the protection of "American" interests in Cuba and on the high seas.

The contention of the President is that the offer to abandon hostilities is not a sufficient guarantee that there will no be another occurrence like the destruction of the Maine. This crime, to his mind, is absolute evidence of the chaotic condition of governmental affairs existing in Cuba.

LITTLE HOPE OF PEACE.

The President also believes the Cuban insurgents will reject the armistice.

The President depends on the Senate to take the next step; and he believes that step will imply war, as originally contemplated.

PRESSURE FROM THE JINGOES.

Mr. McKinley, however, has not been of the same mind since receiving the message. He called his Cabinet together, and they discussed Spain's latest offer. After a session lasting for several hours, the peace policy bid fair to carry the day, and the President and a majority of his constitutional advisers had almost made up their minds that it was worth while to give Spain more time. But then came strong pressure. A delegation of Senators, headed by Vice-President Hobart, called. In plain terms it was stated that Congress would not stand any delay. It was made so clear and apparent, that it was decided to adhere to the original idea. This was after another long Cabinet session. Therefore the message will go in at once. Only an abject backdown from Spain will prevent it.

THE ARMISTICE

TEXT OF GEN. BLANCO'S PROCLAMATIONS ORDERING CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES.

Washington, April 11.—The State Department to-day receiving Gen. Blanco's proclamation ordering a cessation of hostilities in Cuba. It was cabled to the Spanish Minister here, and by him delivered to the Department. The proclamation is as follows:

His Majesty's Government yielding to the reiterated wish expressed by His Holiness the Pope, has been pleased to decree a suspension of hostilities, with the object of preparing and facilitating the restoration of peace on the island, in virtue whereof I believe it convenient to order. Article 1—From the day following the receipt in each locality of the present proclamation hostilities are ordered to be suspended in all the territory of the Island of Cuba.

The details for the execution of the above article will be the object of special instructions, that will be communicated to the several commanders-in-chief of the army corps for the easy and prompt execution, according to the situation and circumstances of the case. (Signed) Blanco.

CUBA'S FUTURE

UNABLE TO GOVERN ITSELF IT WILL BECOME A BURDEN ON THE UNITED STATES.

London, April 11.—An aspect of the Cuban question which now excites discussion here is whether if freed from Spanish domination, the last condition of Cuba will be better than the first. The action of the Cuban Junta in publishing a defiant warning to the Washington authorities has undoubtedly exercised an immense influence on European opinion, giving "American" intervention to outside observers of other nations, an amazingly Quixotic completion.

The London Observer, an independent organ on foreign affairs, says: "The difficulties of the United States regarding the independence of Cuba are more keenly appreciated every day. Nobody feels much confidence in the Cuban Junta's ability to govern the Island, and the prospect of 'American' intervention may lead eventually to annexation. This is not tempting to the Republicans, who suspect that Cuba would be a new source of strength to the Democrats."

WOKE THE POPE UP

HIS PLEASURE AT THE ARMISTICE—POWERS MAY GIVE SPAIN SUPPORT.

London, April 11.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily News says htat the Pope, being awakened and furnished with the news of the granting of the armistice declared that it was one of the greatest pleasures of his latter years, and expressed a confident hope of warding off war. At hte Vatican it was pointed out that since the Queen Regent's personal letter to Queen Victoria all the powers including Great Britain, support Spain.

A NERVOUS WOMAN

"I was completely run down and had a bad cough due to bronchitis. I was very nervous, but since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I have more appetite and feel a great deal better. I have also used Hoods Pills and find them very excellent." Mrs. M. Garland, 675 Crawford street, Toronto, Ont.

HOOD'S PILLS are easy to take, easy to operate. Cure indigestion, headache.

A Fine Legal Point

A local merchant was in the Police Court yesterday morning, charged with selling tobacco to minors. Mr. D. O'Connell appeared for the defence, and after the evidence had been taken raised the point that a case could not be tried on a legal holiday. The Magistrate reserved judgment.

Removing the Tower

Workmen began to remove the clock tower from the Bradburn Opera House building yesterday. When the building was erected the tower was placed on it to accommodate the town clock, but as the clock was removed to the new town buildings six years ago, the usefulness of the tower departed and as its weight was something considerable on the building, it was decided to remove it.

His Life in Great Danger

Mr. Thos. Robinson, a farmer living in the vicinity of Omemee, whilst opening a gate on Saturday morning to allow a team of horses to pass through, was almost trampled to death. Mr. Robinson's injuries are of such a serious nature from being trampled upon by the team, that his life is in great danger. Drs. Cameron and McAlpine are in attendance.

THE ELECTRIC RAILWAY

The Deal With The Local Company at a Standstill

NO MORE WILL BE DONE

Until the Deadlock Is Removed by Mr. Bradburn's Company

The Canadian General Electric Company Blamed for Causing The Delay—It Is Said That The Electric Company Refused to Give up Its Stock

It was thought when Mr. Starr made his latest proposal to the Council, which was, as nearly everybody knows, accepted by them, we at last were about to secure the long looked for extension of our electric railway to the river below the locks, to Jackson Park, to Ashburnham, and to Lakefield and Chemong. The deal was a very favorable one for the town, and if it should now fall through there may never be such another offering so many advantages to the people. Mr. Starr proposed to accept a bonus of $1000 per year for 20 years instead of the guarantee which he asked in his first offer to the Council. The first payment was to be made after the line was completed, as above, and was to forever cease should the road at any time cease to be operated for a specified number of days in any one year.

The negotiations were progressing satisfactorily when a huge boulder was discovered in the track in the shape of the transfer of the charter of the present railway company to Mr. Starr and his friends. All the large shareholders agreed to surrender their stock with the exception of the Canadian General Electric Company, who refused unless paid $3000. There the matter rests. Mr. Starr cannot go on until he gets the charter, and this cannot be obtained without the surrender of all the stock. President Bradburn has done his best in the interests of his company and of the town, but positively refuses to pay the Electric Company a bonus in order to secure their stock.

The Times deems it expedient to make the above explanations in view of the erroneous statements made by our local contemporaries.

THE RULES OF THE ROAD.

The Act Passed by the Legislature in 1898 Governing Traffic by Bicycle or Vehicle—Rules Which Cyclists and Drivers Would Do Well to Study Carefully.

1a. In case a person travelling or being upon a highway in charge of a vehicle meets a person travelling upon a bicycle or tricycle, he shall where practicable allow the person travelling upon a bicycle or tricycle sufficient room on the travelled portion of the highway to pass to the right.

1b. In case a person travelling upon a highway on a bicycle or tricycle overtakes any vehicle or horseman travelling at less speed, or a person traveling on foot, the person travelling on a bicycle shall give to the other person audible warning of his approach before attempting to pass.

1c. In case a person travelling or being upon a street or highway on a bicycle or tricycle is overtaken by any vehicle as aforesaid, or horseman travelling at a greater speed, the person so overtaken shall quietly turn out to the right, and allow the said vehicle or horseman to pass, and the person so overtaking the bicycle or tricycle shall turn out to the left, so far as may be necessary to avoid the collision.

1d. In case a person travelling upon a bicycle or tricycle in cities of over 100,000 inhabitants in a northerly or westerly direction upon a central strip between the double tracks of a surface railway meets another person on a bicycle or tricycle travelling in an opposite direction, he shall turn out to the right, allowing to the bicycle or tricycle so travelling south or east the whole of such central strip.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 12, 1898

A PROSPEROUS COMPANY

Elsewhere will be found the report of the forty-first annual general meeting of the Shareholders of the Canada Life Assurance Company. It was the jubilee year of this great Canadian Company, half a century having elapsed since the company began to do business in 1847. The shareholders are always pleased when an annual statement is presented, because it shows a record of increased revenue, increased profits, increased assets and increased surplus of assets over liabilities. The magnitude of the business transacted during the year speaks for itself. It indicates that the affairs of the company are in capable hands. With new business of over five millions accepted during the year 1897, with total insurance of more than 72 millions in force, with the year's income very close to three million dollars, with assets of over 18 millions and a half, after paying more than one million and a quarter on policy-holders' account, the Canada Life shows a net surplus of more than a million and a half dollars over all liabilities, including the necessary reserve for all the company policies. Results like these are not due to accident or luck. They betoken as much care in the rejection of all unsuitable risks on lives as is exercised in connection with the investment of the company's funds.

To Mr. E. W. Cox, Manager for Eastern Ontario, is due in a large measure the results above indicated.

BAD POLICY AND BAD MORALS

There is always two sides to a story, and let us for a moment look at the other side of this Cuban business.

The Times would like to know what the Americans propose to fight for. Is it on behalf of the Cuban? That country has vast business interests in the island, to be sure. But so has England. Every other civilized power has the same humane interest. Why should the United States intervene alone? Why not purchase a joint interference, such as the Great Powers made in the affairs of Crete and Armenia? It would be no infringement of the Monroe Doctrine, if our neighbors took the initiative in proposing the interference. Does the United States owe any duty to Cuba which the rest of the world does not owe as well?

Is the fight to be on behalf of the Maine? The verdict of the United States court was, "Not Proven." The verdict of the Spanish court acquitted Spain. There is room for an honest difference of opinion. The obvious course would be to submit the dispute to international arbitration. If decision happened to be in favor of the United States, and Spain refused reparation honor and policy alike would compel that country to fight.

As it stands, it is, in the opinion of this journal, bad policy and bad morlas for our neighbors to seek a quarrel unless there are sound grounds for the same, both in law and equity.

The wheelmen of Peterborough should decorate J. R. Stratton with the Order of Gratitude.

If the Times had been in Uncle Sam's place it would have taken that joint note presented to him by the powers a few days ago, and had it discounted at the nearest bank.

• • •

Ottawa cyclists got the start on the Peterborough people in their arrival in Toronto after the C. W. A. meet but in this case the early bird did not get the worm.

• • •

When the Spanish Minister of War talks about it being better to fight foreigners than Spaniards, he overlooks the important fact that it is wiser to fight some one you can lick than some one you can't.

• • •

Temperance reform grows. The Massachusetts House has passed a bill to reduce the number of liquor licenses in Boston from one for every 500 people to one for every 1,000 people, that being the proportion elsewhere in the state.

• • •

One hundred million dollars per month is the estimated cash cost to the United States of war against Spain. And even with the result certain the price is high for the crop of glory which the United States can reap in the fields of battle against Spain.

• • •

This is how the Bobcaygeon Independent figures it out. The expenditure by the Dominion Government last year was nearly $45,000,000, there are about 5,000,000 people in Canada, about 1,000,000 of these are heads of families, this means $45 a year of taxes for each family, or about $1 per week. Then that journal asks the pertinent question, "Do we get value for the forty-five millions which the Ottawa circus costs us? Is admission to the performance worth a dollar a week?"

Brief and Decisive Opinions
About Diamond Dyes.

Mrs. J. H. Coulter, Neepawa, Man., says:
"I always have much pleasure in using Diamond Eyes; I think they are grand agents for making old things look like new."
Mary A. Raycraft, Leeds, P. Q., gives her experience in seven words: "I am delighted with your Diamond Dyes"
Mrs. Chas. Hutchings, Jones' Falls, Ont., writes:
Have used several packages of your Diamond Dyes and find them better than any other make; they never fade or crock, and are entirely satisfactory."
Mrs. John Meritt, Sandy Cove, N. S., says:
"Have used Diamond Dyes for over seven years, and have found them great successes."
Mrs. David Grant, Mountain Station, Ont., says:
"Diamond Dyes far surpass all other dyes that I have tried."

A Croup Cure

is what many a mother is looking for; something absolutely safe and reliable, that will disarm her terror of that dread rattling, strangling cough, so fearful to the mother, so fatal to the child. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a croup cure that can be relied on. Thousands say so.

MRS. W. J. DICKSON ("Stanford Eveleth") writes from Truro, N. S.:—
"That terror of mothers, the startling, croupy cough, never alarmed me so long as I had a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house."
"We have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in our family for years. Once when our boy had a severe attack of croup, we thought that he would die. But we broke up the attack by using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."

Peterboro' Always Leads

Lindsay Post: The depravity of the present day is astounding. Our town contains a few samples of the tough element, but for pure unvarnished ruffianism one must go to Peterborough. Word comes that the office of the Daily Times was robbed yesterday morning. The thieves had the unblushing hardihood to enter the editorial sanctum in search of lucre, and rifled some secret compartment of a quantity of silver and stamps. They next entered the press room adjoining and by cutting out the bottom of a slot machine for supplying gas when fed with money they obtained some eight or ten dollars in small coins. Editor Robertson thinks the deed was perpetrated by some one familiar with the premises, and has entrusted the matter to the police.

CORNWALL CANAL AND RIVER REACHES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvements at Upper Entrance of Cornwall Canal and River Reaches" will be received at this Office until 16 o'clock on Saturday the 30th day of April, 1898, for the works connected with the widening, straightening and deepening of the Upper Entrance of the Cornwall Canal and the River Reaches between Cornwall and Coteau Landing.

Plans and Specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 15th day of April, 1898 at the Office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Cornwall. Printed forms of Tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $17,000 must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the condition requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of November, A. D., 1897, will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

THE ISOLATION OF A CHILD.

I once knew a dear little mother,
  With a beautiful blue eyed boy.
She constantly bathed and brushed him,
  And when he had tired of a toy
She would take it and scald it and scrape it
  And lay it away in the sun,
And that is the way she took care of
  His playthings, every one.

Pent up in his own little playhouse
  The baby grew peaked and pale,
And there were the neighbors' children,
  All dirty and happy and hale.
If the baby went out for an airing,
  The nurse was to understand
That none of the neighbors' children
  Was ever to touch his hand.

But they did, and the injured mother
  Brought the dear baby inside
And shut him up in his playhouse,
  Where the little one fretted and died.
Then the torn heart turned to the Virgin,
  And this was the weight of her prayer:
"O mother, dear, don't let him play with
  The other angels up there!"
—Cy Warman in New York Sun.

MR. JORDAN'S MONEY.

The Former United States Treasurer Once Narrowly Escaped Arrest.

Ex-Treasurer Jordan frequently amuses his friends by telling of an exciting experience he had while treasurer of the United States. Mr. Jordan occasionally indulges in joking remarks uttered with a serious countenance. It was the indulgence of this proclivity while connected with the treasury department that came near resulting in his introduction to a pair of handcuffs and incarceration in a dingy cell. Mr. Jordan had occasion to make a trip to New York just at a time when a new $5 bill was issued by the bureau of engraving and printing. It happened that the treasurer on the day of starting on his trip drew a portion of his salary, and the cashier handed him a bunch of the new $5 bills, which had reached the office within an hour. When he arrived in New York, Mr. Jordan proceeded to purchase some needed articles and handed the clerk one of the new bills. The clerk had never seen money that looked like that bill, which was spotless and uncrumpled by handling. He examined the alleged money and the man who gave it to him with equal care. Mr. Jordan watched him with suppressed amusement and remarked in a matter of fact way:

"It's good money. I made it myself."

That was enough for the clerk, who went to the cashier's desk with the bill. There was a hurried conference and a message was sent to police headquarters over the telephone. In a short time a couple of detectives in citizens' attire were standing on either side of the treasurer of the United States. They waited there to watch developments, fumbling their handcuffs in their pockets. In the meantime the cashier studied the new bill further, looked carefully over his counterfeit detector and rummaged through treasury circulars relating to the issuance of money. Finally he came across a description of the new $5 bill which was to be issued by the treasury department. His message had not yet reached the clerk, who was exchanging significant glances with the detectives and watching Mr. Jordan, when the latter, getting tired of waiting for his change and realizing that his new money was probably puzzling the cashier, produced his card. At the same moment the cashier's message that the money was not counterfeit reached the clerk, the detectives wandered off with crestfallen countenances and the treasurer proceeded to the nearest bank, where he exchanged his new bills for money that had passed through a thousand hands and was far from being sanitary.—Washington Star.

An Unpleasant Rencounter.

A shabby man with morose, intellectual features and a well dressed man whose countenance bespoke refinement coupled with a genial disposition rather than with mental power found themselves side by side in a Columbus avenue car.

"Why, Ned!" shouted the prosperous looking man as his kindly eye fell upon his neighbor.

"That's my name," the other grumbled, with anything but welcome in his look.

"How are you, old boy? I have not see you—let me see—since we left college. It's nearly six years, by George!"

The seedy passenger grunted and looked nonplused.

"Well, how is the world treating you, Ned?" the demonstrative man pursued, more intimately than ever.

"Worse than you anyhow," his classmate snarled, jumping to his feet and abruptly disappearing from the car.

The successful man looked sheepish, and as if by way of setting himself right before the other passengers he proceeded quite audibly:

"I pity him, poor fellow. He was one of the brightest in our class, but he never had system in his work or any tact in his dealings with the other students. He always knew any lesson but the one he was called upon to recite, and he would read a lot, but not the books he wanted for his college work, and he always managed to be out of sorts with some classmate or other, if not with the whole class. Still, he is the most honest and good natured fellow you ever came across. I don't know what he is doing, but I have heard he is in pretty hard luck."—New York Commercial.

Where He Worked.

The prisoner was making his appearance before the magistrate for the hundredth time.

"Well," said the magistrate, "you here again?"

"Yes, your worship," responded the prisoner.

"What's the charge?"

"Vagrancy—same as before, your worship."

"It seems to me you are here about half your time."

"Rather more than less, your worship."

"Well, what do you do it for? Why don't you work?"

"I do, your worship, more than half my time."

"Ah, now," said the magistrate, surprised, "if you can tell me where you have ever worked I'll let you off."

"In prison, your worship," smiled the prisoner, and the court kept its word.—Rival.

Making It Plain.

He—Yes, darling. Did you think I wanted to marry your whole family?—New York World.

Peaches, called Persian apples, were known in Europe before the Christian era.

Tennyson's Praise of Burns.

Mr. Aubrey de Vere contributes to the biography of Lord Tennyson a report of some conversations with the poet, in which was disclosed his singular freedom from the spirit of rivalry.

In those conversations he never uttered a word that was disparaging or tainted with the spirit of rivalship. The only poet I heard him criticise roughly or unfairly was himself. "Compare," he once said to me, "compare the heavy handling of my workmanship with the exquisite lightness of touch in Keats."

Another time he read aloud a song by one of the chivalrous poets of Charles I's time, perhaps Lovelace's "Althea," which Wordsworth also used to croon in the woods, and said, "There, I would give all my poetry to have made one song like that."

Not less ardent was his enthusiasm for Burns. And here an incident with no small significance recurs to me. "Read the exquisite songs of Burns!" he exclaimed. "In shape each of them has the perfection of the berry, in light the radiance of the dewdrop. You forget for its sake those stupid things, his serious pieces."

The same day I met Wordsworth and named Burns to him. Wordsworth praised him even more vehemently than Tennyson had done as the great genius who had brought poetry back to nature, but ended: "Of course I refer to his serious efforts, such as the 'Cotter's Saturday Night.' Those foolish little amatory songs of his one has to forget."

I told the tale to Henry Taylor that evening, and his answer was, "Burns' exquisite songs and Burns' serious efforts are to me alike tedious and disagreeable reading."

So much for the infallibility of poets in their own art.

Toads In Rock.

Stories of toads inclosed in solid rock are not at all uncommon, but of all the reported cases not one has ever been substantiated. When investigated, it is found that they are made up stories or that there was no toad or no rock or that there was a way for him to get in or get out. People who find toads in solid rock must understand that it is an important matter. If ever there is one single case verified beyond dispute of finding a toad or any other living animal in an absolutely solid rock, the science of geology will be swept from the realms of belief. The doctrine of evolution will crumble to airy nothings. Half of the exact sciences will have to be reorganized on an entirely new basis. Accumulated human knowledge will have to be revised from the bottom, and most of what is so called rejected entirely. So the man that finds the toad had better be pretty sure that it is a toad in a solid rock, and while he is about it he had better have witnesses and photographs and everything possible to be had in proof of his assertion, for it will be doubted. If he proves his case, no man ever known will have such enduring fame. Just find the toad, gentlemen.—Milwaukee Journal.

It Couldn't Be Worse.

Mrs. Millem is one of those inoffensive persons who are continually dreading that they may by some mischance hurt the feelings of others. Added to this she has had considerable trouble in getting a suitable cook and does not wish to offend her.

"John," she said to the manservant on the morning following the party, "do you happen to know whether—that is—I mean, can you find out, without asking the cook, whether the tinned salmon was all eaten last night? You see, I don't wish to ask her because she may have eaten it, and then she would feel uncomfortable," added the good soul.

"If you please, ma'am,' replied the man, "the new cook has eaten the tinned salmon, and if you was to say anything to her you couldn't make her more uncomfortable than she is." — Pearson's Weekly.

Judging by Appearances.

"Those neighbors of yours seem. to be pretty well fixed."

LAW OF THE SEA.

BY CHARLES B. LEWIS.

All writers of sea stories devote chapters to what is called "the sentiment of the sea," and all readers of the same feel their pulses thrill as they read of heroic rescues. This "sentiment" may have been observable 50 years ago, and now and then you read of a rescue worthy of heroes, but as a matter of fact shipowners and sea captains are anything but sentimental in these days of money making. Of ten ships who sight a signal of distress at sea eight will sneak past it if possible, and the other two will be more interested in the salvage question than in the saving of life. Shippers want their goods shipped as soon as possible. Shipowners overload and underman their vessels and yet want them to make quick voyages. Sea captains must "crack on" and do their best, and so it comes about that aid is seldom extended when there is reasonable excuse for dodging it.

In the year 1880 the brig Welcome left the port of Liverpool for the West Indies, having on board 180 men, women and children, who were going to settle on one of the islands. She had a crew of 15 men, a supercargo and two cabin passengers, thus bringing the total up to almost 200. Fine weather accompanied the craft until she had accomplished two thirds of the voyage. Then a gale sprang up which dismasted her and sent her drifting back over her wake. The gale had scarcely abated when a fire broke out, and though it was extinguished after a hard fight a great quantity of provisions was consumed and much of the fresh water was sacrificed. Not a spar was left aboard for jury masts, and as the rudder had been carried away and there was four feet of water in the hold the people realized that the wreck could not be abandoned too soon.

Soon after we of the ship Evening Star sighted the wreck. We were sailing under the Holland flag, commanded by a Holland captain and mate, and I believe the craft was of that nationality. She was bound from Demerara to New York, loaded mostly with sugar, I believe, and had been detained in Demerara a couple of weeks to ship a crew. It so happened that an American man-of-war to which I belonged as an enlisted man put into that port for some slight repairs, and 12 of us deserted in a body to go aboard of the Star. We were all sailors. It does not excuse our action to say that the Hollander brought this desertion about by the promise of high wages. He wanted a crew and did not care how the men came to him. We had a close shave from being captured by our captain, but got to sea all right, and as the weather was good and the wind favorable the Hollander "cracked on" to make up for lost time. One morning just after sunrise we found the drifting brig square in our path and only two or three miles away. After a brief look at her through the glass captain and mate fell to cursing at their ill luck. As a matter of fact we had neither water nor provisions to spare, and the ship was loaded down to the mark with cargo, but when we heard our officers propose to pass the wreck without notice every man of the ten was ready for mutiny.

We demanded that communication be opened with the unfortunate people, and after a good deal of growling the Star ran down to them and sent a boat aboard. The report of the mate when he returned was to the effect that the people were on quarter allowance, with much sickness among the women and children, and that they desired to abandon the wreck and be taken aboard of the ship. We had spare spars aboard, and the Hollander offered to sell three or four sticks for about three times their value, the payment to be made in gold on delivery. The captain of the brig declined buying, as he was satisfied that the shattered hulk could never be worked into port, even if fully provisioned. The Hollander then agreed to sell one cask of water and about 80 pounds of bread, but just as we were ready to transfer the goods a squall came up, and that gave him an excuse for sailing away. His firm intention was to abandon the wreck to her fate, and as soon as we realized it the ten of us went aft in a body and assured him that unless he bore up and furnished relief we should refuse duty and take the consequences. He blustered and threatened and brought out his pistols, but we were firm, and at length he gave orders to put the ship about.

We had to beat up to the wreck, and by the time we reached her there was half a gale blowing and the sea was so heavy that we could not transfer the provisions. At the end of an hour the Hollander was for making sail again, but we refused to touch a rope. He and his mate, both armed with belaying pins, sought to drive us aloft, but we disarmed them and locked them in their staterooms. Among us was a man who had made several voyages as mate and was competent to handle a ship, and he was installed as captain and given an able seaman as mate. We had hoped to get the provisions to the wreck before night, but the gale continued, and we had to stand by her for 30 hours before it was safe to launch a boat. We had mutinied and taken possession of the ship, but we felt that circumstances justified it. Neither harm nor insult was offered our officers. After a few hours they were allowed full liberty, and not one of us entered the cabin. There were many threats as to the punishment we should receive when the ship arrived in port, but we stood firm and kept clear of any further quarrels.

When wind and sea finally subsided, we boarded the wreck, to find that one woman and four children had died in the last 24 hours and that the living were entirely out of food and water. There was no doctor aboard, the leak was hardly to be kept under, and it was plain that another 24 hours would send the wreck to the bottom of the sea. It was therefore resolved to transfer everybody to the ship. Our captain and mate raved like madmen when they heard of this decision, and the last named became so violent that we had to bind him hand and foot. The wreck had lost all her boats, but the ship had three, and when the work of transferring began it was not interrupted until every person had been brought safely off. Then we secured most of the personal baggage of crew and passengers, and by the time the last boatload was alongside the Star the wreck rolled heavily to starboard and port and went to the bottom of the sea.

The ship had no accommodation whatever for passengers, and you can imagine the muss we were in when that crowd of people were taken aboard. The Hollander flatly refused to act as captain or to have anything to do with the castaways. He said we had deposed him by mutiny and must now run things to suit ourselves and take the consequences. Everybody had to be put on quarter allowance at once, and a shift was made up whereby the women and children were at least sheltered. After consultation it was decided to make for the Bermudas, and on the third day after taking the people off the wreck we sighted the American ship Ocean Queen and secured from her several hundred gallons of water and a quantity of flour and biscuit. It was a run of seven days to the islands, and during the last four days no adult had food enough to keep down the pangs of hunger. The mate proved so obstinate and dangerous that his bonds were not released, but he shared the food and water with the rest and was treated as kindly as circumstances would permit.

None of us believed that we could be punished for taking the ship out of the captain's hands to save human life, and I am sure we should not have been meddled with but for the presence of a British man-of-war in port. We had informed the Hollander of our readiness to work the ship to her port of destination, and he seemed to think favorably of the matter, but no sooner did he learn of the presence of the man-of-war than he appealed to her commander. As a result the ten of us were at once arrested and flung into prison to await the action of the law. I never found out just where they intended to send us for trial, but presume it was Holland. For some reason or other there was a long delay, and at length matters were complicated by our being claimed as deserters from an American man-of-war. The people whom we had saved were grateful enough, God knows, but all others looked upon us as a lot of pirates who ought to have been hung as soon as captured.

When we had been in jail for five months, we got word from an American who was pretty thoroughly posted on the case that we should soon be sent away for trial and that we might expect at least five years' imprisonment apiece. This news decided us to make an attempt to break jail, and one night, a week later, using tools which a guard had been bribed to pass in to us, we sawed away the bars of a window and gained our liberty. Proceeding to the harbor, we found an American schooner ready to sail and awaiting our coming, and before our escape was discovered we were miles at sea. Five of us surrendered to the naval authorities and took our punishment and served out the remainder of our enlistment, but what became of the others I do not know. But for our action 200 people would have been left to go down with a wreck on which they had drifted and suffered for days and weeks, and yet that action was rank mutiny, and had the ship been English instead of Dutch our two leaders would probably have been hung and the rest of us got long terms in prison.

Canada Life Assurance Company

The annual meeting of the Canada Life Assurance Company was held on Wednesday, 30th March. The following is a synopsis of the report and financial statements: In presenting to the shareholders their forty-first annual report, the directors are gratified in announcing that the company has fairly shared in the somewhat improved condition of the business of the country, as will be seen by the statements and accounts now submitted. By these it will be observed that the company has transacted a larger business than during the previous year, and has increased its clear surplus by no less than $497,033.05. The application for new assurances during 1897 numbered 3,066, for the sum of $6,185,996, of which, however, 266 for $521,000 were declined, the lives not appearing up to that standard which it is in the interests of the company's other assurers should be maintained, and as 191 applications for $373,_50 were not carried out, the issue of the year was for $5,291,636, under 2,603 policies, exceeding 1896 by 573 policies for $789,980.

The total business in force at the close of 1897 was $72,719,555.29 of assurances, under $33,407 policies, upon 24,469 lives.

The claims by deaths paid during 1897 amounted to $770,168.45, and endowment policies for $128,816.92 having matured, these sums, as well as $218,481.29 for profits, $145,4 1.18 for surrenders, and an annuity of $400,000, making in all $1,263,307.84 were paid to policyholders during the year.

The income receipts of the year were $2,953,272.83, and deducting therefrom all payments to policyholders for claims by death, for profits and for matured endowment policies, as well as all other outlay, including expenses of management, there was left the sum of $1,272,486.05, which increased the company's assets to $18,-

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The President, Mr. A. G. Ramsay, in moving the adoption of the report, said:

The directors' report and the annual accounts and statements have for some days been in your hands, and have now been taken as read. While the report is brief, it contains, I think, along with the various published accounts, all that is required to enable those interested in the company to judge of its progress and success in the past year. The addition during 1897 of nearly half a million dollars to the surplus or profit fund is a large and satisfactory one, and without individually comparing it with the figures of any other particular company, I may say that it was more than was attained by all other Canadian companies combined. The new business of the year was, you will observe, of satisfactory and gratifying amount, and in excess of the previous year, and you will be pleased to know that it is of that desirable class which will result more to the profit of the company than would a larger amount obtained at heavier expense, or from less desirable regions than the healthful climate of Canada and the four northern States to which we have thus far deemed it judicious to confine the operations of the company. The existing assurances are $72,719,555, or nearly twice as much as they were twelve years ago. The death claims of the year continued of very favorable amount, and being well within what was calculated upon, that fact testifies to the care observed in the selection of the lives and to the judicious limitation of the business to the healthful climates already alluded to.

The recent lamentable failures of some of the companies doing business on the assessment system, and the anxiety left as to the others which are based upon the same fallacious principles, lead me to point out that these occurrences are only the inevitable results which were from the first predicted by those whose knowledge and experience enabled them to judge of what the future of companies of this kind must be. At our meeting in 1887, when concerns of the kind were making strenuous efforts to establish themselves in Canada, I alluded to the miserable failures they had been in England and in America and I said that their "ephemeral existence indicates how useless the assessment system of assurance is as a family provision. It can only offer the uncertain hopes of a cheap assurance for a few years, till the company breaks down. It cannot afford any guarantee that a definite amount of assurance will certainly be paid to a widow or children after an assurer's death, whether that occurrs at an early date or a distant one, and without such a guarantee as that, which our own and other sound companies offer, life assurance must be a fraud and a delusion." I added that "I was aware that agents and managers of the kind pointed to the names of prominent business and professional men who have joined them, or who act as their directors, but as some of them at all events allowed their names to be employed in that way simply because policies have been gratuitously given to them, one can judge how little weight should attach to the names of the gentlemen thus used to decoy others to join such companies." One cannot envy the feelings of the prominent gentlemen alluded to who induced persons to take policies in companies of the kind, from which they are now driven out by their failure, or by the levy of such high payments as they are unable to meet.

As the accounts show the year's income was within a trifle of three million dollars, and the assets of the company were increased to the very considerable amount of nearly nineteen million dollars, and yielding, after deducting liabilities of every kind, a net surplus or profit of $1,564,082 for allocation at the end of next year, along with whatever addition there may be made to it between now and that time; and as the management and other expenses by which the profits of policyholders are very largely influenced continue to be of a more more moderate percentage than that of any other Canadian or American company, the prospects for our assurers are of a favorable character.

It is anticipated that legislation will be introduced by the Government modifying the present 4 1-2 per cent. rate of interest prescribed by law as the basis for life assurance reserves, and adopting the new mortality tables based upon the observations and large experience of the British insurance companies, in course of compilation by the Institute of Acturaries of Great Britain, and I may say on behalf of the board in reference to the amendment to the charter, alluded to in the directors' report of last year, that the directors purpose to avail themselves of the occasion of that legislation to seek such amendments to the law as may meet the board's requirements.

*Exclusive of $97,355.82 bonus additions, included in claims.

Compressed Flour.

The British admiralty and the war department are testing, under various climatic conditions, the new method for preserving flour. One objection to the establishment of national granaries has been the difficulty of storing grain for any length of time. The grain germinates and is ruined, and to keep large quantities in sound condition has been pronounced impracticable. Experiments are being made with a system of compression into bricks by hydraulic pressure. The trials show that the flour so treated is not affected by damp, even under unfavorable conditions, and is free from mold. The compression destroys all forms of larval life and the flour is thus rendered safe from the attacks of the insects. The saving in storage is enormous, as the cubic space occupied by 100 pounds of loose flour will hold more than 800 pounds of the compressed article.—Scientific American.

High Flown.

Mrs. Minnie E. Leo says: "In a Paris cafe I asked the maid whether she did not think the name on the menu, 'demi tasse cafe au lait frappe a la glace,' was very inflated for such a small cup of cold coffee and milk. 'Yes, madame,' she replied, 'it occupies the mind as well as the stomach.'"

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., and Mr. Louis M. Hayes will attend the convention of the Provincial Teachers' Association to-day as delegates from the Peterborough Board of Education.

Paine's Celery Compound Cures

Nervous, Weak, Sick and Broken-down Men and Women.

Has Saved Thousands from Agony, Suffering and the Grave

The Great Spring Medicine that Cures When All Others Fail.

Eminent Professional Men, People of Wealth, and the Ordinary People Declare that Paine's Celery Compound Has No Equal.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO.

DEAR SIRS:—I take this opportunity to express my gratitude for the good that I and my friends have received from your valuable discovery, Paine's Celery Compound.

For years I have suffered from constant sick headaches, at times I have been so bad that I have been unable to sleep two hours a night for weeks.

I have tried many medicines and doctored a great deal, but never received a hundredth part of value from them that I have obtained from Paine's Celery Compound. After using three bottles I can sleep well, my headaches have ceased, and I feel healthier and fresher than I have done for years.

Being one of the earliest settlers in this place, I am known to all the surrounding country. I feel it a duty to let others know about the medicine that has done me so much good. I send this testimonial without any solicitation.

Yours with gratitude.
MRS E. WILCOX, Creemore, Ont.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO.

DEAR SIRS:—It is with great pleasure that I testify to the value of your great medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. For nearly two years I suffered from indigestion, kidney and liver troubles. After trying several medicines that did not effect a cure I decided to try your Compound. Before using it I was so low in health that I could not eat or sleep. I could not lie in bed owing to pain in my back; it was only by resting on elbows and knees I was enabled to obtain a slight degree of ease. Before I had fully taken one bottle of your medicine I began to improve. I have now taken in all fourteen bottles with grand results. I am a farmer and am now working every day. Anyone may refer to me in regard to these statements, or to any of my neighbors around Sheffield, where I am well known. I am a living witness to the worth of Paine's Celery Compound.

Yours very truly,
GEORGE J. SMYE, Sheffield, Ont.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO,

GENTLEMEN:—No living mortal can imagine the terrible sufferings that I endured for four years, owing to liver trouble headache and sore back. I may say that in addition to the dangerous ailments just mentioned, I was continually sick at my stomach, with a sour taste and mouth all furred and coated. I tried many patent medicines and was under the treatment of doctors but received no benefit. I thank God for having heard of your wonderful Paine's Celery Compound. I procured a supply and used it, and experienced a great change. No other remedy ever gave such wonderful results in so short a time. I now find myself a new woman, and can sleep well and enjoy my food. No soul should despair when they can procure Paine's Celery Compound, the surest and best of all medicines.

Yours trvly,

ENGLAND'S GREATEST BAND

Dan Godfrey's Celebrated Organization to Visit Peterboro'

A letter received from the management of the celebrated band of the British Grenadier Guards by the Times, conveys the pleasing information that this organization is likely to appear in Peterborough at an early date.

When the announcement that Lieutenant Dan Godfrey, for forty-one years bandmaster of the Grenadier Guards, with his famous military band, was to visit Canada was cabled out the news was received with the utmost enthusiasm all over Canada. Following close on the announcement a letter from the director of the tour, Mr. Charles A. E. Parriss was read at the banquet of the Queen's Own Rifles in Toronto, when 800 men in rifle green sat down together and the ovation it received was remarkable. Arrangements for the band's tour in Canada are now being completed and it is expected that among the cities to be included in the tour Peterborough will have a date. The tour of the band which includes in its ranks many of the best skilled musicians who have served in the British army is bound to arouse that patriotic interest and loyal enthusiasm which Canadians are wont to evince towards the Mother Land on suitable occasion. To Godfrey's stirring music have marched all the great military heroes of the day, such as Lord Raglan the Duke of Cambridge, Lord Wolseley, Lord Roberts and Colonel Burnaby, himself of the Grenadier Guards. The band arrives in Halifax 40 strong about the middle of May, and will be in Ontario during the first two weeks in June.

Lieutenant Dan Godfrey comes of a family noted in the annals of military music. His father before him was eminent as a band leader; his brother, Charles Godfrey, is bandmaster of the "Blues," his two sons, Fred Godfrey and Dan Godfrey, Jr., are both leaders of famous military bands whilst Dan Godfrey himself has for forty years conducted the band of Her Majesty's Grenadier Guards.

At the state drawing-rooms at Buckingham, the levees at Marlborough House, at royal weddings, the Lord Mayor's processions, and at the great historic events happening throughout the greater part of the Queen's reign Godfrey's music has been a prominent feature. For his services to military music in the British army Dan Godfrey was raised to the rank of Lieutenant of the Guards a distinction never before or since conferred upon any other bandmaster. At Earl's Court, the Imperial Institute, the Inventories Exhibition, the Fisheries Exhibition, the Crystal Palace fetes and the round of yearly festivities continually going on in London Dan Godfrey and his band are certain fixtures. His fame is wide, and his reputation first amongst bandsmen in all portions of the globe.

Upon one occasion only since the War of Independence has a British military band visited America, and that fell to the lot of Dan Godfrey when the War Officer permitted him and his band to proceed to Boston and take part in the Peace Jubilee demonstration. Godfrey opened the proceedings by conducting the National Anthem, in which the picked bands of the United States together with a chorus of twenty thousand voices, joined in making the rafters fairly rattle in their outburst of "God Save the Queen which was sung in the presence of 75,000 people.

The marked favor with which our own soldiers were received in England at the time of the Queen's Jubilee is still fresh in the memory of us all; the kindness then shown to us will be fully reciprocated in the near future when our visitors land here and are made welcome in a way worthy of the name of Canada.

Rats in Siam.

The writer was astonished on visiting the house of the inhabitants of Siam (says a traveler) to see a huge rat walking quietly around the room and crawling up the master's legs in a cool, familiar manner. Instead of repulsing it or giving an alarm he took it up in his hand and caressed it and then we learned for the first time, to our utter astonishment, that it was a custom in Bangkok to keep pet rats. These are taken very young and carefully reared until they attain a monstrous size from good and plentiful feeding.

Duty.

To do the duty nearest, simple and natural as it may seem, is really the most difficult thing in life. To see it even is difficult. I do not know what it is in man that always makes him enamored of the distant thing. It is always tomorrow and tomorrow. Today we will dream and plan and postpone; tomorrow we will act, and so life gets to be a snarl of neglected yesterdays, a deceiving show of promised tomorrows, nothing really accomplished.—J. F. W. POND'S EXTRACT

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29, 1894.

I have used "Pond's Extract" for many years and always insist upon my patients getting "Pond's," not the ordinary Extract, which is often a very poor article. W. K. BROWN, M. D.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9, 1895.

I use Pond's Extract a great deal in my practice. I think it very valuable in all venous enlargements.

J. L. BRADFORD, M. D.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., Nov. 27, 1894.

I have been using Pond's Extract in my practice for twenty years. I frequently have the experience you mention of druggists insisting they can put up as good as yours. I don't believe it. I use Pond's Extract a great deal as an antiseptic in combination with glycerine and carbolic acid. I think it far superior to any antiseptic known.

F. G. FLOURNOY, M. D.

A VERY JOLLY DANCE

The Iron Moulders' Union Do the Grand

All Arrangements Were Perfect and the Merry Party Spent a Pleasant Evening—The Costumes Worn by the Ladies Were Beautiful

The annual ball of the Iron Moulders' Union, given by the members in the Opera House last night, was a most delightful affair—a perfect night, coupled with a perfect floor and music, made it not an evening soon to be forgotten by the merry dancers.

The hall and stage were beautifully decorated and the music by Butcher's orchestra was excellent. The Executive Committee, comprised of Messrs. F. Turner, C. Theobald, Jos. Chrowe, Jas. Hatcher, John Wilson, Jas. E. Johnston and E. R. Ward; with Robt. Scott, Chairman; Robert Mulligan, Secretary; and John Robertson, Treasurer, did their utmost to make the affair a memorable one in the annals of social events in Peterborough and succeeded beyond their most sanguine expectations. A host of fair maidens and gallant youths came flocking to the dance, not only from Peterborough, but from adjacent towns. The floor was in splendid condition, and with the brilliant light, the handsome dresses of the ladies and the irresistable charm of good music, everyone had a good time. At least all appeared to have a good time, but mortals always have shadows in the midst of their sunshine. The wrong man asks for a dance and the right man does not, or the most unhappy man has his card filled up in the early part of the evening, only to find that there is a new star whom he is not able to dance with, owing to his precipitancy at the start. The blushing debutante, however, smiles, pleased and happy at her first ball. It seems a rosy dream of grace and beauty. The eighteen and twenty-year-olders among the men are as gay as birds, and dance and hop in a perfect outburst of exuberant youthfulness.

Peterborough has always been noted for the success of its dances, and, as usual, the gay people from a distance expressed their great satisfaction with the arrangements made, and also the supper, which was put on the tables in excellent style by Mr. White, of the National, who was unremitting in his efforts to entertain the numerous guests and in the carrying out of the heavy duties which his position imposed upon him.

The programme was comprised as follows:

1.—Grand March.
2.—Circassian Circle.
3.—Waltz.
4.—Lancers, Saratoga.
5.—Quadrille, Basket.
6.—Jersey.
7.—Quadrille, Ontario.
8.—Bon-Ton.
9.—Quadrille, Knickerbocker.
10.—Theorickpy.
11.—Schottische.
12.—Moulders' Joy.
13.—Lancers.
14.—Two Step.
15.—Quadrille, Caledonia.
16.—Quadrille, Lively.
17.—Rye.
18.—Cotillion.
19.—Ladies' Joy.
20.—Schottische, Military.
21.—Theorickpy.
22.—Jersey.
23.—Lancers.
24.—Waltz.
25.—Moulders' Quadrille.

The committees, to whom every credit is due for the perfect success of the ball in all its details, was composed of the following gentlemen: E. Turner, C. Theobald, J. Crowe, Jas. Hatcher, John Wilson, Jas. E. Johnston, E. R. Ward; Robt. Scott, Chairman; John Robinson, Treasurer, Robt. Mulligan, Secretary; Arch. Moore, Director of Ceremonies.

Mr. A. Moore filled the position of Director of Ceremonies with great acceptance.

Altogether the Moulders are to be congratulated on the complete success of their ball.

The Caterpillar Pest

One of our local boiler plate contemporaries in speaking of the town's attack on caterpillars this year, says that it is a great success. The Times is not by any means sure that this is true. While no doubt there was a considerable number of nests destroyed, we do not believe that it will make any appreciable difference. It will be like taking a bowl of water from the Otonabee. The work should have been performed in a more thorough manner.

The Mud Lake Bridge

A meeting of sub-committees of the Town and County Councils, consisting of Councillors Langford and McWilliams for the town, and Warden Pearce and Councillors Anderson and Casement of the county, was held Saturday afternoon to discuss matters of common interest. The chief business before the meting was that of the Mud Lake bridge. Mr. Innes, C. E., showed a plan which he had been engaged by the people of the township of Ennismore to prepare. This plan showed the feasibility of the idea of scraping away the earth on the hill between Fobert's hotel and the bridge and filling in the lake for a considerable distance, thus leaving only 1,800 feet of a floating bridge to be laid. County engineer Belcher also had two plans for partial filling in and the construction of a new bridge, which would be comparatively inexpensive as there is now over 700 feet of new bridge on the lake which could be used. No conclusion was come to in the matter, the plans being yet under consideration.

ST. JOHN'S VESTRY MEETING

$3,500 Appropriated for Sunday School Building Purposes—Officers Elected

St. John's annual vestry meeting, held in the school house last night, was largely attended. The minutes of the several previous meetings were read and confirmed and the financial statement for the year showing a balance on hand of $1,097.83 was adopted as read. This is the first time in several years that the receipts have been in excess of the disbursements and the retiring wardens, Messrs. Long and Belcher, are to be congratulated upon their careful and economical management of the church's financial affairs during their joint term of office.

The Easter collections in aid of the Sunday school building fund were announced to have been $351.26, which statement was received with much applause. The amount is not included in the financial statement.

Mr. Harry Long's resignation as people's warden was received with deep regret, and a vote of thanks was tendered him for his energetic and faithful services during a term of office extending over four years. The following officers were then elected:

Rector's Warden—Mr. Jno. E. Belcher.

People's Warden—Mr. Peter Campbell.

Sidemen—Messrs. Hinchcliffe, Freeman, Foot, McFarlane Wilson, G. H. Smith and Mills.

Auditors—Messrs. Edge Pearce and R. M. Dennistoun.

Mr. A. P. Pousette moved, seconded by Mr. Harry Long, that in future the annual vestry meeting elect an Advisory Committee to advise and act with the church wardens.—Carried.

The following gentlemen were appointed to constitute the committee for the current year: Drs. Halliday and Boucher, and Messrs. Foot, Harry Long, Edg Pearce, and Henry Rush.

On motion of Mr. Yokome, seconded by Mr. Jno. E. Belcher, Mr. Clark was re-elected vestry clerk for the coming year.

Miss McCallum here presented a memorial, signed by the scholars and teachers of the Sunday school, requesting that in view of the overcrowded state of the present school house and lack of proper facilities for accomplishing effective work, additional accommodation be provided forthwith.

Mr. R. M. Dennistoun here explained that the Sunday school is in possession of $820, of which they are willing to appropriate $700 for this purpose, and also guarantee the interest of an additional $500. He then moved, seconded by Mr. A.P. Pousette, that this vestry appropriate the sum of $3,500 for Sunday school building improvements and that the question of ways and means be left in the hands of the advisory committee, to report at the adjourned vestry meeting.

This matter was then very carefully discussed by the vestry, and, owing perhaps to the energetic advocacy of Messrs. Dennistoun and Pousette, the resolution was carried.

Mr. Harry Long, the retiring people's warden, was then presented with a handsome silver and glass flower stand, accompanied with an appropriate address signed on behalf of the congregation as a token of the esteem and respect in which he is held by the congregation in general, who are very loth to lose his services in the position he has so long and ably filled.

The meeting then adjourned.

T. V. C. DEPUTATION

To Visit Ottawa and Urge on the Government the Completion of the Canal

Last night a meeting between committees from the Town Council and the Board of Trade was held in the town buildings for the purpose of discussing the advisability of sending a strong deputation to Ottawa to urge on the Government the early completion of the Trent Valley Canal.

This action was practically an answer to the recent action of the Toronto Board of Trade in connection with this important undertaking.

This Board of Trade was represented by the following gentlemen: Messrs. Matthews, Rogers, Neill, J. R. Stratton, Dumble, McDonald, Fair, LeBrun and Mulholland.

Councillors McWilliams, Dawson, Meldrum, Hamilton, Best, W.H. White, Allen and J.M. White were present.

Councillor Langford occupied the chair.

After a lengthy discussion and numerous suggestions as to the best manner of dealing with the situation, it was finally

Moved by Councillor McWilliams, seconded by Councillor Best, and carried, that a strong deputation be appointed to wait on the Government and urge the early completion of the Trent Valley Canal. Mr. J.R. Stratton to arrange the date of the interview and the town clerk to invite the municipalities along the line to participate.

Another Fire

Yesterday afternoon the fire brigade was summoned to the premises in the rear of the stores occupied by Gough Bros and C.B. Routley, when an accumulation of rubbish and old packing boxes had broken into a blaze. The brigade experienced difficulty in locating the fire, but on entering the alley-way from Simcoe St., quickly gained control of the flames. Although untouched by the flames the stocks of both Gough Bros. and C.B. Routley are injured to a considerable extent by the water and smoke. The windows in the rear were all broken by the intense heat created.

Easter Wedding

Lindsay Post: On Wednesday evening, April 6th, the home of Mr. Moore Fanning, 56 Lindsay-st., was tastefully decorated with flowers in honor of the marriage of his daughter, Dell Maude, to John A. White, M.D., of Lindsay. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. W. Macmillan, B.A., pastor of St. Andrew's church, assisted by the Rev. F. W. White, B.A., brother of the groom. The bride was becomingly attired in cream organdie over yellow silk, with trimmings of ribbon and lace, and carried a shower bonnet of roses. Guests were present from Arthur, London, Port Hope, Peterborough, Newcastle, Cannington, Toronto and Lindsay. Dr. and Mrs. White left on the evening train for Montreal.

DARKER GROWS THE WAR CLOUD

The Feeling Grows That War Will Come

THE PRESIDENT THINKS SO

The United States Will Either Recognize the Cuban Republic or Intervene

In Either Case War is Sure to Follow—Spain Cannot or Dare Not Submit or a Revolution Would Break Out in Spain

(Special to the Times.)

Washington, April 12.—The President stated to-day to a Herald representative that he considered war inevitable. The American nation must do away with two things—either recognize the Republic of Cuba, or intervene. If the former war would be sure to follow, as he did not see how Spain could afford to surrender.

IMMEDIATE ACTION.

In the Senate Senator Lindsay offered a resolution directing the President in Cuban military operations to act in concert with Gomez.

MR. MASON FOR WAR.

Great crowds were again to-day attracted by the expected discussion of the Cuban question, especially to the Senate, where Senator "Billy" Mason of Chicago, was expected to explode. He exploded. He worked off a speech declaring for war.

SPEEDY INTERVENTION NOW, INDEPENDENCE LATER.

The Stering Committee of the Republicans met this morning and adjourned until this afternoon, to await the action of the Foreign Affairs Committee. They are generally agreed to yild thee recognition of the alleged existing Government of the insurgents, but favor immediate intervention, and a declaration that whatever Government is ultimately recognized in Cuba shall be Republican in form and free from the sovereignity of Spain.

TO HEAR GENERAL LEE.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs expects to have General Fitzhugh Lee before them this afternoon.

REACHING AN AGREEMENT.

Republicans of the House Foreign Affairs Committee are coming together on the resolution for immediate intervention.

IN THE COMMITTEES

A REPUBLICAN SPLIT—EACH PARTY STRIVING TO GAIN PARTIZAN ADVANTAGE.

Washington, April 12.—The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations took up the task of formulating a resolution defining its idea of the course to be pursued in the present complication with Spain.

Many minor differences were developed. The committee is finding it a very difficult task to reach an agreement on the terms of the resolution. There is by no means the same unanimity that there was when the committee first met and decided to report the Foraker resolutions.

A COMPROMISE.

Many propositions have been made, covering all the lines of possible intervention, but the indications at the beginning of to-day's session were that there would be a return to the compromise proposition, which was made prior to the receipt of the message. Indeed, a sufficient number of pledges had then been secured to render the adoption of this course quite certain.

FORAKER, THE JINGO.

All the Republican members of the committee, with the exception of Senator Foraker are understood to be willing to report on these lines, and it is now belived that for the sake of party harmony he may be induced to join his colleagues. The compromise involved the elimination of the second of his declarations recognizing "the Republic of Cuba as the true and lawful Government of that Island," and the retention of his first promise, declaring "that the people of the island and of right ought to be free and independent."

STRIVING FOR PARTY ADVANTAGE.

Senator Grady is the only Democratic Senator who now appears willing to join with the Republicans in eliminating the recognition of the Cuban Republica, but his vote added to the votes of the five Republicans, would be sufficient to secure the adoption of the resolution, and its report by the committee. It is, however, not certain that the five Republican votes could be secured unless all the Republican votes could be controlled, for the reason that some of the other members of this party in the committee are inclined to make unanimous action by their party in the committee a condition of their co-operation.

A MINORITY REPORT.

For the rest, if this compromise is accepted, the resolution will be a short and sharp declaration for immediate intervention. In case the majority agree upon the compromise here outlined, in all probability a minority report, providing for the recognition of the present Cuban Government will be made by the Democratic members, with the probable exception of Senator Grady. There is a strong effort to prevent this division, but it now seems the most probable result of the committee's deliberations.

A REPUBLICAN SPLIT.

The Republican members of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs held a meeting this morning, but could not agree among themselves. The Democratic members of the committee caucused also, and agreed on a resolution for the independence of Cuba and armed intervention.

The full Foreign Affairs Committee met, but adjourned at noon until 3 o'clock, without making a report.

SPANISH RESENTMENT

THE MADRID LIBERAL SAYS THE COUNTRY WILL RESENT ANY INTERFERENCE WITH CUBA.

Madrid, April 12.—9 a. m.—Complete tranquility prevails this morning at the Spanish capital.

There were patriotic demonstrations yesterday evening at the Barcelona, and Valencia, accompanied by shouts of "Long live Spain!" "Long live the army!" "Long live Cuba!" etc., but there were no disturbances.

The Liberal says of the message: "Although the despatches are extensive, they do not suffice for the formation of definite conclusion. Never the less, it may be said that, in a general sense, it affirms and declares in the name of the nation the right of intervention in Cuba. Whether a definite or indefinite period is meant, and whether it is a simple intimation or a fixed decision regarding coming events. Spain must protest energetically against the principle, prior to protesting violently against the action. No free people can hesitate to reject by all the means in its power a doctrine annulling its personality and reducing it to ignominious tutelage. Consenting to submit to it would be equivalent to Spain's resignation of her place among European nations. 'America' clearly indicates her intention, hitherto veiled with hypocritical ambiguities. 'America' considers Spain incapable of maintaining her sovereignty in Cuba. We have put up with everything, but unless we ignore our history and consider the peninsula on a level with Paraguay, isolated from the rest of the world, we cannot, and will not, submit to this."

IMPRESSION IN GERMANY.

London, April 12.—According to a special despatch from Berlin, the impression created at the German Capital by President McKinley's message to Congress was not very favorable. Its tone, the despatch continues, is considered dilatory, and as not promising peace. The politicians at Berlin, it appears express the opinion that if the President really had peaceable intentions he would have acknowledged Spain's concession of an armistice.

RELIEF IN DEATH

FOR TEN YEARS MISS HIGGINS MOURNED HER AFFIANCED, THEN SUICIDED.

(Special to the Times)

Chicago, April 12.—For ten years Lillian Higgins has mourned for her lover, who died within a few days of the date set for their wedding, and yesterday, unable longer to endure her grief, she arrayed herself in her bridal dress, and with a bouquet of flowers in her hand, she lay down, drank laudanum and died.

ELECTION CHANGES

RESULTS IN WEST ELGIN AND SOUTH PERTH REVERSED—THE PARTIES' STRENGTH UNCHANGED.

Special to the Times.

Toronto, April 12.—Judge McLennan handed out his decision in the two election appeals this morning—West Elgin and South Perth.

Although, in each instance he reverses the dcision of the County Judge, the balance of the parties remains the same.

In West Elgin McNish, the Liberal, is unseated, and McDiarmid, the Conservative, is elected by a majority of one.

In South Perth, Monteith, the Conservative, is unseated, and Moscrip, the Liberal, is elected by a majority of four.

THE SLIP OF THE TYPE.

In the South Perth appeal, His Lordship agrees with the County Judge in every particular except in the fourten ballots where the type had slipped and placed Monteith's name in Frame's division. The County Judge allowed these for Monteith. Judge McLennan disallowed them. A subtraction of 14 from Mr. Monteith's poll leaves him with a minority of four instead of a majority of ten.

SEVERAL CHANGES IN THIS.

In the West Elgin appeal, His Lordship allows four ballots for McDiarmid which were rejected by the County Judge, and disallows onw which was accepted, thus adding three to McDiarmid's poll. He allows two for McNish, which were rejected by the County Judge, thus adding two to his poll.

The result is that McDiarmid, the Conservative, gets the seat by a majority of one.

A Mysterious Death

Toronto, April 12.—County Crown Attorney Dewart has ordered a post-mortem examination of the remains of George Ogle, a well-to-do East Toronto man, who died in the village this morning after an illness which commenced yesterday afternoon. He had had no medical attendance during the attack.

CANADA'S BIG RAILWAY

The Canadian Pacific to be Double Tracked

BIG THING FOR PATEBORO'

It Will Practically Mean the Construction of another Line

The Line to be Double Tracked Between Montreal and Toronto—Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars to be Expended—Additional Bridges to be Built

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company has decided to double track its line between Montreal and Toronto. This will be good news for the people of Peterborough. The company has found that the traffic has practically reached the limit of the capacity of a single track line. Surveying parties are to be organized and sent out at once, for the purpose of making the required surveys, and the work of double-tracking will be proveeded with as rapidly as circumstances will permit.

This means an enormous outlay of money, especially through Peterboro' County, where the cuttings are heavy and many additional bridges will be required. We all remember the "good times' that came with the construction of the C.P.R., when money was comparatively plentiful. The expenditure of so large a sum of money in a community is sure to be felt, and is certain to produce a period of prosperity. While the proposed work may not equal the original outlay, it will be very large. Additional right of way must be obtained—probably 20 or 30 feet—another roadbed made, fences removed and set back, culverts widened, grading and filling in accomplished, additional iron bridges built, etc.

Vice-President Shaughnessy stated to the press that the company had fully decided going on with the work, and what the C.P.R. undertakes it always accomplishes.

THEY FEAR CANADIAN LAW

BUT UNITED STATES OFFICIALS CAN KEEP NO SORT ON THE TRAILS.

(Special to the Times.)

Vancouver, April 12.—Various stories of shooting affrays among gamblers and adventurers come from Skagway and the trails.

"Soapy" Smith and his band continue their hold-ups and depredations, but carefully remain on the United States side of the summit.

All these desperadoes are in terror of the Canadian Mounted Police, but do not care a cent for the United States marshals.

One man who had been shot while a mere spectator of an affray between gamblers and miners complained to the U. S. Chief of Police at Skagway, and was told to "come back next week."

A Youth Drowned Himself

Kingston, April 12.—William Williams, aged 18, a farmer at Battersea, tied a strong rope and a big stone about his neck, and, taking a boat, he went out on Loughboro Lake, threw the stone overboard and went down with it. The youth was despondent.

One on the Teacher

The genial proprietor of the Snowden House has always been a joker. Even when a schoolboy he never let a chance pass without having his fun at the expense of some one else. When he was a public school pupil the boys knew as much about "cribbing" as they do now, and it was nothing new for them to conceal needed information on their cuffs or inside their watches. One day when William was taking an examination the keen-eyed teacher observed him take out his watch every minute or two. The pedagogue grew suspicious. Finally he strode slowly down the isle and stopped in front of William's desk.

"Let me see your watch," he demanded.

"All right, sir," was the meek reply. The teacher opened the front lid. He looked somewhat sheepish when he read this single word, "Fooled."

But he was a shrewd man. He was not to be thrown off the scent so easily. He opened the back lid. Then he was satisfied. There he read:

"Fooled again."

BRITISH AFRICA

The presence of Mr. Cecil Rhodes in London excites much comment as to South African affairs. The policy of Germany, it is said, is to continue the independence of the Transvaal—a policy that will inevitably bring Great Britain and Germany into collision. Mr. Chamberlain has determined to absorb the Boer Republic within the next two years. It is necessary, then, to have Delagoa Bay, and if Portugal will not sell she will be quarreled with and plundered. Mr. Rhodes has been having secret conferences with Mr. Chamberlain, and presently, it is suspected, the educational campaign, favoring this act of aggression towards Portugal, will begin in the newspapers.

IS WAR JUSTIFIABLE?

There could be no idler talk than that of wasting time in attempting to justify a war before neighboring nations on high and holy ground. You only get the reputation of being a sniveling hypocrite for your pains. The other side believe in the justice of their cause just as much as you do, and they have their friends who believe with them. You can justify yourself before the world in this day and generation only by success. If you are whipped, the world will say you were wrong. If you win, most people will say you were right, but in that case you need not greatly care what other people say. Who now bothers about the rights or the wrongs of the wars of the past fifty years? History's verdict is invariably given to the side that won, and the defeated are almost invariably characterised as fools for going into a fight unprepared.

Over fifty elections have gone to protest.

• • •

Many a man would have gone through life unknown to fame were it not for election protests.

• • •

The patriotic American can go to war with a brave heart knowing that when he returns—if he ever does—the spring housecleaning will be over.

• • •

It will now be in order to repair the sidewalks—well it would be invidious to particularize. Prompt action may save several actions against the city.

BLUE LAWS.

Some of the Peculiar Enactments That Obtained In Old Virginia.

Those who fancy that strict laws were peculiar to New England in colonial days should read some of the enactments of the Virginia assembly.

"It was enacted," writes Professor John Fiske in "Old Virginia and Her Neighbors," that any person found drunk was for the first offense to be privately reproved by the minister; the second time this reproof was to be publicly administered; the third time the offender must be put in irons for 12 hours and pay a fine; for any subsequent offenses he must be severely punished at the discretion of the governor and council.

"To guard the community against excessive vanity in dress it was enacted that for all public contributions every unmarried man must be assessed in church 'according to his own apparel,' and every married man must be assessed 'according to his own and his wife's apparel.'

"Not merely extravagance in dress, but such social misdemeanors as flirting, received due legislative condemnation. Pretty maids were known to encourage hopes in more than one suitor, and gay deceivers of the sterner sex would sometimes seek to win the affections of two or more women at the same time. Wherefore it was enacted that 'every minister should give notice in his church that what man or woman soever should use any word or speech tending to a contract of marriage to two several persons at one time as might entangle or breed scruples in their consciences, should for such their offense, either undergo corporal correction (by whipping) or be punished by fine or otherwise, according to the quality of the person so offending."

Men were held to more strict accountability for the spoken or written word than in these shameless modern days. One of the most prominent settlers we find presenting a petition to the assembly to grant him due satisfaction against a neighbor who has addressed to him a letter "wherein he taxeth him both unseemly and amiss of certain things wherein he was never faulty." Speaking against the governor or any member of the council was liable to be punished with the pillory. It was also imprudent to speak too freely about clergymen, who were held in great reverence. No planter could dispose of so much as a pound of tobacco until he had laid aside a certain specified quantity as his assessment toward the minister's salary, which was thus assured even in the worst times, so far as legislation could go.

SPILT HER LUNCH.

Sorry Accident to a Stylish Young Woman In a Train.

The passengers on an early morning train connecting with this city were treated to a thoroughly enjoyable scene the other morning. At one of the small stations a young lady boarded the train.

She was dressed rather stylishly, but a veil covered a rather plain face. She switched down the aisle like a queen. She barely deigned to glance at the other passengers in the car, and when she did her nose rose perceptibly at the tip in a manner that spread the impression of contempt.

She carried a Boston bag and the air of a millionaire. There was but one seat vacant. This was beside a good looking, nicely dressed young man who was reading a paper.

When she came to this seat, she flopped down heavily and tossed her bag to the seat between herself and the young man. Two seconds later the young man leaped from his seat, and a string of earnest words of doubtful origin fell from his lips like vipers from the lips of the young woman in the fable.

The startled passengers looked to see what had caused this outburst. They saw, and then they laughed. The nice looking Boston bag contained an ordinary, everyday working girl's lunch.

One of its features was a jar of coffee, which had broken in the descent and flowed freely over the young man's new fall coat and trousers.

He went into the smoking car, swearing profusely. She murmured a weak apology and spent her time in mopping up the seat.—Brockton Enterprise.

"We'd better look after the bookkeeper, I am sorry to say," said the senior partner. "His clothes are much too fine for his salary. And, besides, I have heard that he plays poker."

"Yes," said the junior partner, with the chastened air of one who knew "that is how he managed to wear such good clothes."—Indianapolis Journal.

The New Journalist—Yes, we're on the jump here all the time. We get out our Fourth of July number in May you know.

"Do you?"

"Yes; and then our Christmas number comes out in August."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"There," said Mr. Younglove, "goes a tramp who will never come near this house again."

"Why?" his visitor asked.

"He has just gulped down a piece of pie that my wife herself baked."—Cleveland Leader.

She—I think you had better send up another rat-trap, John.

He—But I bought one only the other day.

She—I know, but there is a rat in that one.—London Tit-Bits.

"Three from two you can't," says the schoolboy. Right! Three from two you can't, either in dollars or dividends or sarsaparilla. It takes the best sarsaparilla root to make the best sarsaparilla extract. The best sarsaparilla comes from Honduras, C. A., and the Dr. Ayer Co. practically controls the entire product. Yet others claim to be making "best" sarsaparilla. They must be making it out of the remainder left after subtracting three from two. But, "three from two you can't." You can't make the best sarsaparilla without best root. You only get the best when you

A Drunken Tumble

Yesterday evening a man hailing from Douro, seated in a buggy behind a spirited horse, attracted considerable attention. He was in a beastly state of intoxication, and when he got as far north as St. Paul's church, he undertook to give a pull on the reins. The horse gave a sudden turn, throwing the unfortunate man out on his head, and the buggy passed over him. He was picked up by Mr. Lang, the caretaker of the church, and some others, and placed on the boulevard, where he lay for some time in an unconscious state. He finally recovered, and in due course was helped into the rig and started for home. Beyond a few bruises on the scalp, he was uninjured.

CORNWALL CANAL AND RIVER REACHES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvements at Upper Entrance of Cornwall Canal and River Reaches" will be received at this Office until 16 o'clock on Saturday the 30th day of April, 1898, for the works connected with the widening, straightening and deepening of the Upper Entrance of the Cornwall Canal and the River Reaches between Cornwall and Coteau Landing.

Plans and Specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 15th day of April, 1898, at the Office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Cornwall. Printed forms of Tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $17,000 must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the condition requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of November, A. D., 189-, will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

Department of Railways and Canals,

BLACKBIRD'S GRAVE.

LAST RESTING PLACE OF THE FAMOUS INDIAN CHIEF.

On a Bluff That Is Now Inside the City of Omaha—On Its Summit the Chief Watched For His White Friends—Romance of the Omaha-Poncas Feud.

Omaha has within her city limits an unknown and uncared for historic spot which in a few decades will be looked upon with far more interest than it has in the past or is now, for the value of historical places grows with the distance in time from the events which made them historical. This spot, which is in Omaha, and yet has been forgotten and neglected by the city, is the grave of the famous Omaha chief and warrior whom even Washington Irving thought worthy of a place in his writings. This chief lived in the latter part of the last century, dying in 1792. In those days, according to Irving, the Omahas looked upon themselves as the most powerful and perfect of human beings, and considered all created things as made for their peculiar use and benefit. The leader of this tribe, Blackbird, or Wash-ing-guh-sah-ba, was a warrior of the highest class. Early in life he had been taken a prisoner by the Sioux, where he had his metal tested. Under his leadership the Omahas attained a reputation among the other tribes that they never had possessed before. The Pawnees having inflicted an insult upon an Omaha brave, Blackbird led his men against their town and slaughtered many of the inhabitants and burned it to the ground. He also waged a fierce war against the Otoes until peace was effected by the interference of the whites.

Yet, notwithstanding his fiery disposition, he fell a victim to Cupid's dart. The Poncas had raided the Omaha tribe and carried off many of their women and horses. Blackbird took the field with the sworn determination of eating up his enemy. So fiercely did the battle rage that the Poncas began to sue for mercy. A herald was sent out with the pipe of peace, but he was shot down by Blackbird. A second herald shared the same fate. As a last hope the Ponca chief then sent out his daughter, arrayed in all her finery and bearing the calumet of peace. Her charms conquered. A treaty was made, and Blackbird married the herald. She became his favorite wife, yet nevertheless in one of his ungovernable fits of rage he killed her with a single blow of his knife.

No sooner did he see her lying dead at his feet than his anger left him, and for three days he sat by her corpse—silent, motionless and tasting no food. On the third day his people began to fear that he intended to starve himself to death and entreated him to be comforted. He paid no attention to their entreaties, and at last a warrior brought a little child into his presence and placed it beneath the chief's foot. This appeal brought him to himself, and, arising, he made a speech to his followers and seemingly threw off his grief as easily as he had taken it on. In 1792 the smallpox swept over Nebraska, and Blackbird was one of its victims. The following description of his death and burial is quoted from Washington Irving's "Astoria:"

"When the general horror and dismay were at their height, Blackbird himself was struck down with the malady. The poor savages gathered around his bed and forgot their own miseries. His dominant spirit and love for the white men were manifested in his latest breath, with which he designated his place of sepulture. It was to be on a hill or promontory upward of 400 feet high, overlooking a great extent of the Missouri river, from whence he had been accustomed to watch for the barks of the white men. The Missouri washes the base of the promontory, and after winding and doubling in many links and mazes in the plain below returns to within 900 yards of its starting point, so that for 30 miles navigating with sail and oar the voyager finds himself continually near to this singular promontory as if spellbound.

"It was the dying command of Blackbird that his tomb should be on the summit of this hill, in which he should be interred, seated on his favorite horse, that he might overlook his ancient domain and behold the barks of the white men as they came up the river to trade with his people.

"His dying orders were faithfully obeyed. His corpse was placed astride of his war steed and a mound raised over them on the summit of the hill. On the top of the mound was erected a staff from which floated the banner of the chieftain and the scalps that he had taken in battle. When the expedition under Mr. Hunt visited that part of the country (1802), the staff still remained, with the fragments of the banner, and the superstitious rite of placing food from time to time upon the mound for the use of the deceased was still observed by the Omahas."

"That promontory is now within the city limits of Omaha," says Dr. Mercer, "and I located the grave 20 years ago. When I came to Omaha 36 years ago, the river wound around in the shape of an 'S,' and this promontory upon which I found the grave exactly answers to the description given by Irving. It is in the south part of the city, and Williams street would run through it if extended to the river. Just east of it and under the bluff is a brickyard, the roofs of which reach nearly up to the top of the hill.

"The Omaha camp was located in the bottom beneath the bluff and a little to the north. This point was Blackbird's favorite place for sitting to watch for the coming of the traders, with whom he was very friendly. No doubt you have heard the story. When the traders came up, he greeted them most friendly, made them open up their goods and selected what he wanted himself. Then he called in his tribe and compelled them to trade. The whites made up for their gifts to him by the extra charge they put upon the goods sold, and not an Indian dared kick. The chief had got his bribe and his people had to pay for it.

"There is another story about the old fellow. He was great on superstition, and when pursuing the enemy would fire into their tracks, claiming that would kill them. He posed as a kind of god, but after awhile some of his people grew skeptical of his superhuman power and refused to obey him. In this difficulty he consulted his friends, the white traders, and they told him to prophesy the death of all who disobeyed him. He did so, announcing according to instructions that all who were disobedient would die a mysterious death upon a certain day. When that day came, he invited the whole tribe in to dine with him, and put a dose of arsenic in the bowl of each man whom he wished to serve as an example of his godlike power. Of course they died. From that time on his power was never questioned, and the traders who put him up to the trick and furnished the arsenic stood higher than ever with him."—Omaha World-Herald.

IN NARROW WAYS.

Blow, thou strong western wind,
  Blow far and fleet
Thy forest coolness here
  Through the dark city street.

Blow o'er the crowded roofs
  From wall to wall,
Through fevered alleys swift
  In boundless blessing fall.

Where weary mothers wait
  Blow thy fresh breath,
Where men have lain them down
  Woeful in love with death.

Bring country pleasantness
  Across their dreams,
Shade of great tossing boughs
  And thought of flowing streams.

Bring wafts of fragrance, too,
  From far blown flowers.
Pour balm, pour rest, pour life
  Through these despairing hours

And let some little child
  Wake as you sing
And feel your silken touch
  A stooping angel's wing.

PE STEALS SPECTACLES.

Which Makes Nearsighted Admirers Indulge In Strong Language.

There is a monkey in Lincoln park with a penchant for snatching eyeglasses from the noses of the spectators, bending them double and stuffing them down into his pouch. The startled loser of the auxiliaries to sight then has the pleasure of watching the lump of expensive ground lenses and bent and twisted bows joggle about in the pocket that a monkey wears in the region of his Adam's apple and of occasionally being tantalized with the appearance of them in the paw of the purloiner and of learning that the more fuss he makes the less likely is he to recover his property soon.

If the losers at once begin begging for their glasses and expostulating with the wayward monk, he seems delighted and alternately sits in melancholy abstraction gazing at the faraway "keep off the grass" sign, apparently thinking of his old jungle home and the cocoanuts there, or he is restlessly active in performing an aerial act on the topmost perches. His countenance is fixed in the dolorous expression of recent bereavement, and he hasn't time anyway for minding the talk of the common, everyday sightseer.

"Come here, you naughty monkey! Give me those glasses! What am I going to do? Nice Jocko"—in bewitching, insidous tones—"give me back my glasses."

Mr. Jocko Monk, however, is unmindful until suddenly a great light seems to burst upon his heart and brain. He nervously drags out those shapeless eyeglasses, holds them up and looks through them at the person outside the bars, red faced and stamping, in the serious, quizzical way of the dean of a medical college who believes he is discovering a new disease germ. Suddenly he looks up and begins chattering.

"Hello! You here?" he seems to twitter. "What's the matter? You're looking mad. Can I do anything for you? Say, got a peanut in your pocket? Just push it this way, will you? I'm feeling bad—really I am. I'm feeling tough. I need a light lunch. Oh, what you bothering about those old glasses of yours for? Let up, will you? Poor fellow, poor fellow! Can't you get along without those things? They ain't any good now anyway."

Then he flaunts the stolen property before the owner and puts it immediately back into the seclusion of the cavity at the roots of his tongue.

By the time the keeper has come to the rescue of the ill fated goggles the monkey has produced them and stowed them away again some three or four times, and the nearsighted individual whose nose they formerly graced is in rage and despair and swears that the monk is in collusion with some optician in the interest of the latter.—Chicago Times-Herald.

At Port Royal, Jamaica, for six months in the year thunderstorms are of almost daily occurrence, and guests to picnics and garden parties are usually invited to assemble "after the thunderstorm."

The epochs of our life are not in the visible facts, but in the silent thoughts of the wayside as we walk.—Emerson.

DAY OF THE CLIPPER PAST.

So the Stunsail Has Disappeared For Good From Most American Ships

"Stunsails out of fashion!" said the skipper as he puffed vigorously at his old clay pipe, which has been around the Horn almost as many times as its owner. "[illegible] they may be, but it is because [illegible] economy has abolished them on American ships. However, an old shipmate of mine who is a bit of a crank and left this port the other day, still carries a topmast stunsail. It may be for sentimental reasons just as a Confederate veteran might display the flag under which he went to battle, but stunsails are just as practical today as ever.

"'Studding sail,' you say? Oh, yes. Studding sail may be literally correct, but Jack says 'stunsail.' He objects to mouthing participles and words with long endings. He wants brevity all the time—in everything perhaps except rum. The corruption of language by sailors is proverbial. Stunsail may be a corruption of studding sail. But studding sail itself is a corruption of steadying sail or steering sail, which in my opinion was the original term. The stunsail, although used only in moderate weather, was a driving sail. Our yachts carry stunsails today in the form of the immense side sail that is called the spinnaker.

"It costs to fit a ship with a suit of stunsails. Their use means extra labor for the crew, or a larger crew, and their storage takes valuable cargo room. This means expense for the ship, which her earnings in these days of railroads and ocean tramps do not warrant. The cargoes that sailing vessels carry today do not demand quick transportation, with its high freight rates. The modern sailing ship is little better than a floating warehouse. It is not driven. Spars and canvas are not pressed as they were before the advent of the steamship. Sailing a ship to make a short passage is one of the lost arts. There is no demand for auxiliary canvas such as stunsails. The Yankee clipper is out of it—defunct.

"Away back in the middle of the century the stars and stripes floated over ships that were really clippers below and aloft. In competition with one another and with foreign craft our clippers carried valuable cargoes—tea from China, coffee from Rio and fancy merchandise to San Francisco. The steamships do the tea and coffee carrying now. It was not in those days a go as you please run. The clippers were under orders to get there to catch the top of a market. Hours saved on their voyages, long though they were, meant many dollars for all concerned. Ships were driven then with canvas that fairly smothered them in fair weather and foul, and Yankee seamanship, with its characteristic judgment and nerve, was recognized and rewarded.

"But all this is merely a memory now. I can fancy the clipper of the fifties coming head on, rising against the clear sky of the lower latitudes, her sails mounting above the blue horizon, tier upon tier—skyscrapers, moonrakers, cloud cleaners—a snow white pyramid, an angel's footstool, as Jack says. Did they carry stunsails? Aye, up to the royal yards."—New York Sun.

Silly Modern Magic.

It would be quite wrong to conclude that the crystal sphere is discredited among the faithful. Large numbers are sold every year—few, by comparison, with the parchment talismans, of course, and for excellent reasons. In the first place, the parchment worn next the skin requires periodical renewal; in the next, the crystal ball will last forever, and is, moreover, expensive. The genuine article—real crystal—may cost as much as £30, but that is a luxury only accessible to the wealthy and earnest prober into the future; for 15 shillings or a guinea you may possess yourself of a composition or glass ball nicely served up in a morocco case lined with satin like a jeweler's casket, and this will answer the purpose equally well. They are usually made perfect spheres, but if you prefer it egg shaped you can order an "ovoid crystal."

I understand that astrology recognizes no difference in the relative merits of the two forms. The chief essential to success in using the crystal ball is great concentration. A north light is recommended, for reasons I am unable to explain, but is not absolutely necessary. You recline in an easy attitude, hold the ball up to the light, and center your mind upon it until you see something; that which you see is going to happen. My knowledge of this particular matter is so slender that I will say no more about it.

That crystal balls have their sincere believers would seem to be proved by the prices they command. The richest man or woman does not pay 30 sovereigns for a sphere of crystal the size of a lawn tennis ball unless he or she confidently anticipates some return for the money.—Chambers' Magazine.

A Mountain of Basalt.

There is a mountain of dark brown basalt on the Columbia river nearly 2,000 feet in height and stretching along the stream for six or eight miles. When the white settlers first came into the country, the Indians told them this mountain was traveling; that some day it would move across the Columbia and form a lake which would reach from the cascades to The Dalles. What the Indians said has been found true in some respects. The mountain is in motion. Its movement is forward and downward. The railroad builders who constructed their line along the base found the tracks continually forced out of place. In some places the movement has amounted to eight and ten feet in a few years. Geologists attribute the phenomenon to the fact that the mountain rests on a substratum of conglomerate or of soft sandstone, which is steadily being washed away by the current of the big river.—New York Tribune.

Black and White.

The Boston Budget says that a merchant who lives near Boston numbers among his acquaintances and friends an old colored preacher, by whom he was recently invited to make a Sunday morning call at the church over which the latter presides. The merchant, although wishing most heartily to accept the invitation and to bring his wife also, was somewhat in doubt as to the propriety of so doing. "I am afraid," he said in explanation, "that our presence would not be wholly pleasant to your congregation." The shepherd reassured him. "Why, sah," he exclaimed, "dere's so many white folks in dat church some Sundays, mah congregashun looks like a han'ful of blueberries in a bowl of milk!"

THE REFORMED FAKIR.

He Had a Great Graft the Winter He Spent In Albany.

"I've earned an honest living in many ways," said the reformed fakir, when he was raking over the dead leaves of his past the other night, "but I never struck such a graft as I was up against the year I wintered in Albany. A friend got me a little job there that paid me a couple of dollars a day. Besides that, I was entitled to a pass down to New York and back every week. I might have starved if I had been so exclusive as to try to live on this alone. So I set my wits to ferreting.

"I hadn't been there long before all the pretty girls in town were after me. No, as I don't pose as a handsome man I did not take it to heart. They didn't want me, but they wanted the autographs of the statesmen. I'd sing 'em a song like this:

"'Why, cert, girls, I'd be delighted to oblige you. Nothing would give me greater pleasure. But you know I can't go on the floor. My friend the doorkeeper, however, can get just what you want, but it will be some trouble to him, and he may charge 10 or 15 cents, and'—

"'Oh, that's all right,' the girls would say, and nearly every one would put down a quarter a sig. And every quarter went into my pocket, for that guff about not being allowed to go on the floor was all a blind. So's they wouldn't see me, I'd just tackle the statesmen somewhere else.

"Then I got on to the money to be made in strikes. Every time a bill was introduced that would hurt some one or some interest in New York, I learned all I could about the matter there and wrote to a friend in New York who looked up the other end. Then I would write to the parties something like this:

"'A bill detrimental to your interests has been introduced here. Better come up and see about it.'

"When they reached Albany. I never failed to get my reward for putting them on.

"There was another way of coining an honest plunk—I worked all the boys I could for passes. Those who didn't go home over Sunday were willing to give up, and those who could get more than one I jollied into turning the extras over to me. Then I sold them to fellows who couldn't get even one pass, or who wanted two or three.

"By these grafts I managed to live well, and save every cent of my salary."—New York Press.

A THOROUGH ARTIST.

Sir Edward J. Poynter's Great Care For Minute Details.

It may almost be said that it is impossible to appreciate the finished work of this artist without some knowledge of the contents of those portfolios which contain his drawings. It at all events increases our respect for the man and his art to know how much thought and labor and thorough craftsmanship have gone to the making of his more important compositions. For the figure of St. George, for instance, which we see clothed in a complete suit of Maximilian armor, gleaming through the dusk of the lobby of "the house," he thought it necessary to draw the figure nude, and not only nude, but ecorche, and it was not unusual for him about this time to make a study even of the skeleton in the attitude required for a figure. Such a drawing I have before me now—a drawing for one of the men, who is stooping to pick up a stone to hurl at St. Stephen, on one side the figure nude, but fully fleshed; on the other, trunk and legs and arms "in the bones."

Contrasted with such studies there are others of great completeness and finish, but still preparations—one, for example, of the same St. George, but fully armed, with his attendant figures of Purity and Fortitude fully draped and underneath the shield of the United Kingdom, with naked children on either side holding a festoon. The work is bordered with a band of roses conventionally treated and executed in water colors with the utmost care, yet so broadly that when photographed it looks like a fresco. This little drawing, almost as beautiful in color as in design, was experimental only: The shield and the children were replaced by a more formal design for the mosaic.—"Sir Edward J. Ponyter, P. R. A.," by Cosmo Monkhouse, in Scribner's.

SMELTER FOR VANCOUVER

BIG WELSH FIRMS TO ESTABLISH THE INDUSTRY IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

(Special to the Times.)

Vancouver, April 12.—Messrs. Vivian & Sons, of Swansea, Wales and the Elliots Metal Co., of Burryport, South Wales, have, as a result of the success of trials, decided to come into the British Columbia market for the purpose of smelting all kinds of ores and furnace products, and principals of the firms are now en route here, to study the possibility of successfully establishing smelting works in this city.

In the meantime, spot cash will be paid here for any quantity or quality of ore, on their agent's certificate, to any shipper, large or small.

W. P. Harvey, F. S., is their representative here now.

VIEWS ON THE MESSAGE

OPINIONS IN LONDON DIFFER, SOME STRONGLY ENDORSING M'KINLEY.

(Special to the Times.)

London, April 12.—The Madrid correspondent of the Standard says: The most important feature in the new stage of the relations between Spain and the United States is the request of the Pope and the Powers a suspension of hostilities, which she had persistently refused to grant when President McKinley suggested it, the "American" Government and diplomacy now consider their hands free, as they were no party to the arrangement thus made by the Pope, and the Powers with Spain.

UNCLE SAM STANDS BY AND WAITS.

Their contention is that Spain, having taken upon herself to grant unconditionally this suspension of hostilities, without any mutual agreement or mutual conditions between the "American" and Spanish Governments, nothing can be asked or expected from "America," who will merely look on to see what comes out of this sort of armistice, and of any negotiations between the Cuban Autonomist Government and the insurgents.

M'KINLEY'S STRONG POSITION.

When in time events allow the United States to judge of the results of a suspension of hostilities and of the negotiations as to home rule, "America" will consider herself free to act in accordance with "American" interests, and to insist on a permanent settlement of the Cuban question to secure peace in Cuba; and all simply because President McKinley made no engagements for the present or the future with the Pope and the European Powers, who are alleged to have spontaneously induced Spain to grant the suspension of hostilities.

Our Circulation Department

The circulation of the Times has grown so much of late that it has become necessary to place it in a department by itself, under a manager. Mr. L. C. Connor, of Galt, has accepted this position, and enters on his duties to-day. Mr. Connor will have charge of the delivery boys, and will see that the paper is promptly and faithfully delivered. He will also solicit subscriptions to this paper, visit the towns and villages in the district, and appoint agents, and in fact devote his entire attention to extending the circulation of the Times.

A TRIBUTE OF SONG.

There is no place on earth where utter helplessness comes out so strongly, where the ceremonies in human use fall so powerless before the majesty of the occasion, as at a funeral. It need not be that one's heart shall be interested. The obsequies of a stranger conducted with all the pomp and vanity of church and state, with the melancholy rolling drum of the military funeral, or the gorgeousness of the Masonic regalia apron—all are alike inadequate and unavailing.

But once in my life have I witnessed a ceremony that was so grand, impressive and appropriate to the silent, awful occasion.

I will tell you of a funeral which lingers in my memory as the grandest, most solemn and befitting ceremony that was ever given to the dead.

It was rumored many years ago that a poor widowed woman, leading a hard life of unending labor, was called to part with the one thing dear to her—her only child. Mother and daughter had toiled together for 15 years, and the only bit of sunshine falling into their dark lives was that shed by their loving companionship. But the girl had always been sickly. Under the heartbroken mother's eyes she had faded and wasted away with consumption, and at last the day came when the wan face failed to answer with its ghastly smile the anxious, tear blinded eyes of the mother.

The poor young creature was dead. For many months the pair had been supported by the elder woman's sewing, and it was in the character of employer I had become acquainted with Mrs. Cramp and her story. By an occasional visit to the awful heights of an east side tenement where they lived, by a few books and with some comforting words, I had won the love of the dying girl. Her grateful thoughts turned in her last hours to the small number of friends she possessed, and she besought her mother to notify me of the day of her funeral and ask me to attend.

The summons reached me upon one of the wildest days of winter. A sleet that was not rain and a rain that was not snow came pelting from all points of the compass. A wind that wailed in the chimney and howled in the street told how truly dreadful for outdoor purposes was the weather of the day. I piled the glowing grates, I drew closer the curtains and shut out the gloom of the December afternoon. I turned on the gas and sat down, devoutly thankful that I had cut all connection with the witched weather, when an installment of it burst in on me in the shape of Parepa Rosa. She was Euphrosyne Parepa at that time, and the operatic idol of the city. Muffled with tippets, flecked with snow, glowing with the short encounter she had had with the elements rushing up the steps from her carriage, she threw herself into an easy chair and proclaimed the horrors of the outer world to be beyond description.

And even as we congratulated ourselves on the prospect of a delightful day together there came the summons for me to go to the humble funeral of the poor sewing woman's daughter. I turned the little tear blotted note over and groaned.

"This is terrible," said I. "It's just the one errand that could take me out today, but I must go." And then I told Parepa the circumstances and speculated on the length of time I should be gone and suggested means of amusement in my absence.

"But I shall go with you," said the great, good hearted creature.

"Your throat and old Bateman and your concert tonight?" I pleaded.

"If I get another 'froggy' note in my voice, it won't matter much; I'm hoarse as a raven now," she returned.

So she rewound her throat with the long, white comforter, pulled on her worsted gloves, and off in the storm we went together. We climbed flight after flight of narrow, dark stairs to the top floor, where the widow dwelt in a miserable little room not more than a dozen feet square. The canvasback hearse, peculiar to the $25 funeral, stood in the street below, and the awful cherry stained box, with its ruffle of glazed white muslin, stood on uncovered trestles in the center of the room above.

There was the mother, speechless in her grief, before that box—a group of hard working, kindly hearted neighbors sitting about. It was useless to say the poor woman was prepared for the inevitable end—it was cold comfort to speak to her of the daughter's release from pain and suffering. The bereft creature, in her utter loneliness, was thinking of herself and the awful fate —of, the approaching moment when that box and its precious burden would be taken away and leave her wholly alone. So, therefore, with a sympathizing grasp of the poor, worn, bony hand, we sat silently down to "attend the funeral."

The undertaker's man, with a screwdriver in his hand, jumped about in the passage to keep warm. The creaky boots of the minister belonging to the $25 funeral were heard on the stairs. There was a catarrhal conversation held outside between them as to the enormity of the weather, and probably the bad taste of the deceased in selecting such a bad time to die was discussed. Then the minister came in with a pious sniff and stood revealed, a regular Stiggins as to get up—a dry, self sufficient man, icier than the day and colder than the storm.

He deposited his hat and black gloves and wet umbrella on the poor little bed in the corner; he slapped his hands vigorously together; he took himself in well merited fashion by the ears and pulled them into the glowing sensation, and after thawing out for a moment he plunged into business.

He rattled merrily through some selected sentences from the Bible. He gave us a prayer that sounded like peas in a dried bladder, and he came to amen with a jerk that brought me up like a patent snap. He pulled on his old gloves and grabbed his rusty hat, and, with his umbrella dripping inky tears over the well scrubbed floor, he offered a set form of condolence to the broken hearted mother. He told her of her sin in rebelling against the decree of Providence. He assured her that nothing could bring the dead back. He inveighed against the folly of the world in general, and then he made a horrible blunder and showed he didn't know even the sex of the dead by saying, "He cannot come to you, but you must go to him."

This was a settler for Parepa and myself. We looked at the departing minister in blank astonishment.

The door swung wide; we saw the screwdriver waving in the air as the undertaker's man held converse with the clergyman. A hush fell on everybody gathered in the little room. Not one word had been uttered of consolation. It was the emptiest, hollowest, most unsatisfactory moment I ever remember.

Then Parepa arose, her cloak falling about her noble figure like mourning drapery. She stood beside that miserable cherry wood box. She looked a moment on the pinched, wasted, ashy face upturned toward her from within it. She laid her soft, white hand on the discolored forehead of the dead girl, and she lifted up that matchless voice in the beautiful melody:

> Angels, ever bright and fair,
> Take, oh, take her, to your care.

The screwdriver paused in describing an airy circle. The wet umbrella stood pointing down the stairs. The two men with astonished faces were foremost in a crowd that instantly filled the passage. The noble voice swelled toward heaven, and if ever the choir of paradise paused to listen to earth's music it was when Parepa sang so gloriously beside that poor dead girl.

No words can describe its effect on those gathered there. The sad mourner sank on her knees, and with clasped hands and streaming eyes the little band stood reverently about her.

No queen ever went to her grave accompanied by a grander ceremony. To this day Parepa's glorious tribute of song rings with solemn melody in my memory as the only real, impressive funeral service I ever heard.—"Planets and People."

Remarkable Musical Memories.

Possibly the greatest case on record is that wonder of wonders, the most intellectual of interpreters, the late Dr. Hans von Bulow. He not only played all of Beethoven by heart upon the piano, but knew all the symphonies in the same manner, and practically the whole Wagnerian output of musical metal, and it is claimed that so great was the mass of the piano music which Bulow retained "within the book and volume of his brain," inscribed in mysterious hieroglyphics somewhere among the molecules of the gray matter constituting the cortex of his cerebral organ, that he could have played 25 piano recital programmes without repeating and without a printed page. Since there go about 2,000 measures to the hour and two solid hours to an ordinary Bulow programme this would represent 100,000 measures of music, or about 4,000 large pages, something like eight or ten thick volumes.

Even Bulow was outdone by Rubinstein, in the field of piano music at least, if we can trust the anecdote mongers, for it is claimed that in one season at St. Petersburg he played a series of recitals which exhausted the literature of the piano and embraced 1,800 distinct compositions. It is mentioned of Mendelssohn that on one occasion, the score of Beethoven's "Sixth Symphony" having been misplaced, he raised his baton and directed the work from memory, but this does not seem to me a feat in the least remarkable, for the pastoral symphony is so extremely lucid and so bewitchingly beautiful that the only thing difficult or remarkable would be the forgetting of it. Mme. Patti knew 40 opera roles, and Varesi, the baritone, knew 80.—John S. Van Cleeve in Music.

An [illegible]—She—I don't look at all like myself to-day.

He—It would be a good time to have your picture taken.—Yonkers Statesman.

"In marriage," said the old bachelor, as he mentally figured on the cost of a wedding present, "a woman gets everything." "Yes," admitted the old maid, "she even gets the worst of it."

Hobson's Choice.—Mother—Johnny, I see your little brother has the smallest apple. Did you give him his choice, as I suggested?

Johnny—Yes'm. I told him he could have his choice, the little one or none, and he took the little one.—London Tit-Bits.

Almost Beyond Belief.—"Tender-hearted?" said one who knew him. "Very much so. Upon my word, he would not even hurt a baseball umpire."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29, 1894.

I have used "Pond's Extract" for many years and always insist upon my patients getting "Pond's," not the ordinary Extract, which is often a very poor article. W. K. BROWN, M. D.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9, 1895.

I use Pond's Extract a great deal in my practice. I think it very valuable in all venous enlargements.
J. L. BRADFORD, M. D.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., Nov. 27, 1894.

I have been using Pond's Extract in my practice for twenty years. I frequently have the experience you mention of druggists insisting they can put up as good as yours. I don't believe it. I use Pond's Extract a great deal as an antiseptic in combination with glycerine and carbolic acid. I think it far superior to any antiseptic known.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

It Pays Every Time

Mrs. Caldwell, No. 20 Queen street, inserted a small advertisement to The Times of boarders wanted, and has secured three young men as a result. This speaks for itself.

Unfounded

Brown—Glad to hear, old boy, that you have come into a large landed property.

Smith—Sorry to tell you that it is groundless.

Resumed Practice

Dr. Bingham has resumed the practice of his profession in Peterborough, and has opened an office over Clark & Gibson's store, Hunter street. The Doctor has spent nine months in the Toronto hospitals, and his return to Peterborough will be pleasing news to his many friends in Peterborough and surrounding country.

New Bank Manager

Yesterday's Toronto Globe referring to the new manager of the Bank of Commerce says: "Toronto loses a popular bank manager in the person of Mr. R. C. McHarrie, who leaves to-day to fill the position of manager of the Bank of Commerce in Peterborough. While his numerous friends will be glad to hear of his promotion they will regret his departure from Toronto, not only on account of his popularity as a bank manager, but also by reason of his standing as a first class bowler and curler. It is to be hoped he will find leisure to make occasional visits to the Queen City."

Fire Sale at Mason's

The recent fire at E. F. LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Interesting Items of Local and District Happenings in Brief

—The ice wagons are out for the season.

—It is said that wild ducks are very plentiful at Rice Lake just now.

—The police have not yet captured the party who burglarized the Times.

—The new management of the Burleigh Falls hotel are in possession of the house.

—Mr. John R. Miles has been appointed postmaster of Stony Lake, in succession to Mr. Jas. Robb, resigned.

—Cobourg merchants are going in for cement walks on the main business street, on the ground that the tendency of a fine pavement is to attract people and consequently trade.

—Mr. A. McDonald, of Point St. Charles saw mill, received a telephone message that his raft of saw logs had broken loose in South Bay, Stoney Lake. He sent men up to repair the damage and secure the logs.

—The 11.35 train Monday night on the C.P.R. was drawn by two engines. It included the two private coaches of the Governor-General, Lord and Lady Aberdeen being on board en route for Ottawa.

—Magistrate Dumble gave judgment yesterday morning as regards the point raised by Mr. D. O'Connell on Monday that as Monday was a legal holiday the proceedings taken against a local merchant for selling tobacco to a minor were null and void. Mr. Dumble upheld Mr. O'Connell in his contention, and dismissed the case.

—On Monday afternoon a boy named West Kent, who was riding one of Mr. T. Fitzgerald's wheels got in the way of Mr. McLennan's watering cart on Charlotte-st., and got the front wheel smashed. The cart was almost on top of him before he noticed it and he had a narrow escape from being injured.

—Rev. Mr. Ranton, the evangelist, while discussing dancing recently in Toronto, stated among other things that as women are cutting off the top of their dresses to go to dances and cutting off the bottoms to go bicycling, it's hard to tell where they will go next. It seems to us they will have to go to a warmer clime than Canada.

Preparing for Summer

Mr. John Morgan, the popular proprietor of the summer hotel at McCracken's Landing, Stoney Lake, is making extensive preparations for the greatly increased trade which he expects this season. The house is being renovated, repainted and a large wing is being added. A windmill has also been erected in order to supply water for lawn and domestic purposes. Mr. Morgan never does anything by halves.

Asleep on the Road

While Mr. Thomas Laplante was returning from Lakefield on Monday last he passed a horse and rig standing in the middle of the road. The horse appeared as if it had been driven almost to death, and was unable to proceed further. The driver was lying asleep in the rig. The fellow was in such a beastly state of intoxication that he could not be awakened. Mr. Laplante tied the horse to a fence and left the man to sober up.

Burleigh Falls Hotel

Messrs. Hughes & Gritton, the new proprietors of the Burleigh Falls Hotel, were in town yesterday purchasing supplies for the hotel in view of the changes and improvements which they contemplate making. The new firm propose to enlarge the hotel by the erection of a wing in which will be additional sleeping rooms. They will also erect new cottages on the island. They evidently intend making this popular resort more popular then ever.

A Good One on Senator Cox

A good story is told in connection with John Maguire, who died the other day in Hastings, aged 94 years. It appears that the deceased lived in the neighborhood of Grafton many years ago. In those days Senator George A. Cox was endeavoring to make a living manipulating a tele ga qh keyinthe village of Colborne, and purchased a cord of wood from McGuire Wood was not a cash article in those days or the collateral may not have been plentiful with the operator, and the woodwas not then paid for. Years rolled by and the transaction was apparently forgotten by both parties untuil one evening last fall, while a neighbor was reading aloud some political for Mr. McGuire in which Senator Cox's name appeared which recalled the wood deal of bygone years. The neighbor suggested that a letter recalling the transaction be sent to the Senator who immediately mailed a chec kfor fifty dollars in full for wood account. The Senator can boast of having paid the highest price for a cord of wood of any maninCanada.

Evangelist's Meeting

Evangelist Varley's meeting in St. Paul's church was well attended last night.

"Revive Thy Work, O Lord," was the opening hymn, after which Mr. Varley showed the distinction between gift and reward. Eternal life is a gift, free to all who will accept, and reward is what follows our good works after we are chosen by God. The Roman law condemned to death the thief on the cross, but Jesus gave him life eternal because He loved all mankind. Paul guarded the clothes who stoned Stephen, yet the grace of God was sufficient to turn him from his murderous work and lead him to martyrdom in preaching the faith he had first persecuted.

Mr. Varley made an urgent appeal to the young to come to Christ and lead a life that will entitle them to the great reward that He has promised.

Mr. Varley will give a Bible reading this afternoon in the Y.M.C.A. rooms.

The steamer North Star met with an accident at Hastings on Saturday breaking.

The City of Peterborough will be ready for her crew about May 15th.

How to Cure All Skin Diseases

Simply apply "Swayne's Ointment." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for Swayne's Ointment. Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Avoid substitutes.

Cheese Factory Registration

The dairy act of 187 provides among other things forz the registration of cheese factories and creameries. Already between four and five hundred applications for registration certificates have been received at the department of Agriculture and Dairying, who has the matter in charge will publish very soon a complete official list. Those desirious of having the names of their factories added should not delay making application to the department.

Fenlon Falls to be Harnessed

A company has been organized for the purpose of "harnessing" Fenelon Falls, and transmitting light and power to Lindsay, 16 miles. The price to be for arc lights of ten amperes each, to run 365 days in the year,f rom dusk till daylight each night, $30 per lamp. the company also undertakes to supply power at very low rates. The Times was always of the opinion that this scheme was feasible, and often wondered why some of the enterprising capitalists of Lindsay did not take hold of it before.

An Intricate Case

Before the Master in Chambers yesterday came up in review the case of Howard, administrtor of the estate of the late John Quirk, V.S., Margaret Ahern and Margaret Nathan. This is one of those unique cases wherein that fearfully and wonderfully made thing, "a will drawn by a layman from a law book," and which has taken up the time of the Master and numerous lawyers at several sittings to unravel the mysterious intricacies of the documents. At yesterday's sittings, G. I. Sherry, of Norwood, represented the Administrator Howard; D. J. Lynch, of Campbellford, the defendants, Ahern and Nathan; and A. L. Colville, also of Campbellford, for one of the devisees. The Master decided to order the sale of the property.

THE NAGLE ESTATE.

Application Made to the Court to Appoint a Receiver

Ottawa, April 12.—At the sitting of the Weekly High Court Saturday morning, Mr. Justice Street presiding, Mr. Frank Latchford moved on behalf of Mrs. Agnes Elizabeth Friel to appoint a receiver for the estate of the late Richard Nagle, and directing the payment into court of certain sums now in the hands of Mr. Henry Phelan, sole executor of the estate, and to prohibit Mr. Phelan from any further interference with the estate.

Mr. Charles Murphy, for the defendant, consented and an order was made appointing the Ottawa Trust and Deposit company as receiver upon the filing of a satisfactory bond.

SLOPERVILLE ITEMS

Red Dennie prophesies that we will have an early spring, as the wild-cat in the village smithy has commenced to sweat.

The quiet little village of Cookstown will miss the genial company of Mr. John L. Sullivan, who has rented the estate of Mr. J. O. Leahy, and is at present removing to his new quarters.

Red Jimmie has leased part of Michael McCann's blacksmith shop and has equipped it with machinery for the manufacture of hammers. He has already received a large order from P. G. Towns, and is working day and night to fill the same.

We are all elated to behold the smiling countenance of Mr. Patrick O'Brien in our midst again. Mr. O'Brien has long been troubled with an acute form of insomnia, being unable to sleep after 4 o'clock a.m., but he is rapidly improving under the diligent care of Dr. Pobbin Brown.

LIME JUICE CLUB.

A large meeting of the Lime Juice Culb was held in the hall on Monday evening last. The massive building was crowded to the doors, and even the aisles were full. Bro. Harry Whibbs was at his post, attending to hear traps, and everything was in readiness for the commencement of the meeting.

At exactly one minute to eight o'clock the president appeared, and just in time to catch his son John trying his utmost endeavor to prod Bro. Fardown with a pin. The culprit was duly punished by being sent to work on the estate of Patrick O'Brien for one week.

After Bro. Basswood Whibbs had secured a comfortable square yard of the floor for his feet, the president began by introducing to the audience the Hon. Wayworn Coughlin, a man of immortal fame as a lecturer, who had arrived that morning for the purpose of addressing the meeting that evening, on the important subject, "How to make our toes turn in."

In a few moments the orator appeared on the platform escorted by Bros. Bindertwins O'Connor and Pickaxe McGarrity.

He was a man of powerful stature and remarkable physique, and after laying aside his hat and taking a wad of slippery elm in his mouth to keep his throat moist, he began:

"My Dear Brethren,—The subject upon which I will speak this evening is of the utmost importance to all, young and old, and I think it my duty as one who has acquired the art to enlighten my fellow citizens on it. The art is, "How to make our toes turn in." In the first place buy a pair of No. 5 shoes, such as I wear, and in the second place drink a half gallon of Red Jimmie's whiskey at his social ball on Monday night."

The audience went wild with applause, and Bro. Whibbs broke a suspender square in two in his enthusiasm, after which the meeting adjourned for one week.

AMERICANS FLEE FOR THEIR LIVES

In Dire Peril at Matanzas City

CUBANS ARE AGGRESSIVE

President Sagasta Says The Great Powers can do no More to Prevent War

May be Civil War Among the Dons—Queen Regent is For Peace But the Army is for War—The Dynasty is in Danger—War Fever is Burning Furiously at Washington

(Special to the Times)

Toronto, April 13.—Vessel men were talking this morning about a report that the American Government are negotiating for the purchase of the Modjeska from the Hamilton Steamboat Company. The Modjeska is a Clyde built boat and cost $110,000. The report states that the United States will give this amount.

CUBANS FIGHT DESPARATELY.

New York, April 13.—A despatch received from Havana to-day states that the Cuban insurgents are gathering in force and strength all over the island, and that some half dozen desperate attacks have been made on small and badly garrisoned towns in the interior. The insurgents have been operating in small bands, and in some instances have been officered by deserters from the Spanish army. Early yesterday a band of insurgents entered Matanzas City, from which place American Consul Brice has fled from Spanish mobs, along with a dozen other Americans, a few days before, and after firing a number of buildings, made a desperate attack on the garrison. They were finally driven off, leaving two dead and three badly wounded. The fighting, while it lasted, was furious, the garrison keeping up a fusilade until the enemy scattered and fled. Under the galling fire the insurgents failed to get inside the garrison. The residents kept closely to their houses during the fight and offered the garrison no assistance whatever.

THREE SEPARATE CHARGES.

Another fight occurred between Spanish troops and insurgents in a small town named El Conde, the latter being led by a Spanish deserter. Both sides fought valiantly and a battalion made three separate charges, finally dislodging the insurgents. Among the Spaniards wounded was Capt. Colomo, a well known officer and some half dozen soldiers. The insurgents left nine bodies and a quantity of arms, including a quantity of dynamite, some of which had been used against the Spanish.

An insurrection has broken out at Guira de Melina, Havana, the prisoners, some of them Cuban sympathizers, having killed the guard. They succeeded in escaping to the street, but were all re-captured.

A special from Havana says that General Blanco looks upon the armistice as a purely political move to gain time, and that he within the past two days sent out five different expeditions against the insurgents. He has information that General Maximo Gomez and Calixto Garcia are directing the movement of the insurgents through subordinate officers, and that instructions have been sent out to concentrate for the purpose of attacking the loyal coast cities.

SPAIN'S ULTIMATUM.

Madrid, April 13.—The Sagasta Cabinet discussed McKinley's message at a special meeting last night. An official note was thereupon issued in which it is declared that the Council is of opinion that the unwarranted and meddling attitude and interference by the United States is incompatible with the sovereignity and rights of the Spanish nation. These rights, it is declared, admit of no interference with Spain's affairs by any foreign nation. The Cabinet solemnly affirms Spain's unalterable determination to uphold the nation's rights, and awaits with calmness further developments. The Council took extraordinary measures in preparation for war. It voted large sums to complete fortifications at Porto Rico. It also prepared a decree ordering a national war subscription, and appointed a committee to present an address to the throne.

A BRITISH SALUTE.

Norfolk, Va., April 13.—Four British merchant steamships passed Fort Munroe yesterday, near where the flying squadron under Commodore Schley lies at anchor. It was noticed that the English ship, as she passed, dipped her colors as a salute, and the warships returned the courtesy. The action of the Englishmen has been commented upon, and appears to be regarded as indicative of particularly friendly feelings for America.

THE PRESIDENT'S STAND.

Washington, April 13.—Senators and Congressmen who talked with the President this morning are satisfied that he will execute vigorously any policy decided upon by Congress, and since his interview with General Lee he is less peaceably inclined than heretofore.

WAR FEELING AT WHITE HEAT.

Washington, April 13.—The war feeling here this morning is at white heat. General Lee will appear before the Strategy Board of Army and Navy.

PANIC IN LONDON.

New York, April 13.—A London cable reports a veritable panic there in Spanish fours, on French holders scrambling to unload.

Washington, April 13.—Washington is once more warlike.

The reports of the committees, amounting virtually to a declaration of war, will be made to both Houses of Congress to-day.

President McKinley did not confer with the diplomats yesterday, but General Schofield was with him in the afternoon and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, of the Navy, in the evening. Neither of these is for peace. The chances all lean to war. Mandatory resolutions directing the President to intervene in Cuban affairs were presented by Foreign Committees of both Houses. They are practically identical, and are virtually a declaration of war.

The Senate Committee is agreed and the House Committee is divided, but the division is not between peace and war. It is on the recognition of a Cuban Republic. General Lee was the determining factor yesterday. The public cheered him. He said that a Spanish mine blew up the Maine. He said that the Cubans were capable of self-government, but were not governing themselves capably yet. To-day he will advise with the Stragetic Board.

General Lee's views, the Republicans hope, will get the House Democrats into line. They were aggressive yesterday, attacking the President's message and endeavoring to make it appear that the Republican policy was to continue Spanish sovereignty in Cuba. General Grosvenor, who is looked upon as McKinley's spokesman, denied it in strong terms.

Private advices from Madrid say that there is danger of civil war there unless there is a war with the United States. The Sagasta Ministry is hopelessly divided, and in danger of collapsing. Indications, however, were that Sagasta will reverse his policy and adopt an aggressive attitude.

General Weyler is a constant menace, and it is believed he is ready to turn his influence with the army against the Government. The dynasty is in great peril, as the Queen Regent is in favor of peace, but all the parties in Spain are for war.

REPORT STRAIGHT FOR WAR.

Washington, April 13.—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has reported to the Senate resolutions for immediate armed intervention and establishment of a stable independent government. A minority of five members report in favor of Cuban insurgents independence.

The following is the majority resolution reported to the Senate by Senator Davis immediately upon the convening of the Senate at noon to-day:

"Whereas, the abhorrent conditions which have existed for more than three years in the island of Cuba, so near our own borders, have shocked the moral sense of the people of the United States, have been a disgrace to Christian civilization, culminating, as they have, in the destruction of a United States battleship with two hundred and sixty-six of its officers and crew, while on a friendly visit in the harbor of Havana, and cannot longer be endured, as has been set forth by the President of the United States in his message to Congress on April 11, 1898, upon which the action of Congress was invited. Therefore, resolved,

"First, that the people of the island of Cuba are and of right ought to be free and independent.

"Second, that it is the duty of the United States to demand, and the Government of the United States does hereby demand that the Government of Spain at once relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba and withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters.

"Third, that the President of the United States be and he hereby is directed and empowered to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States and to call into the actual service of the United States the militia of the several States to such extent as may be necessary to carry these resolutions into effect."

The reading of the report occupied forty-seven minutes. Mr. Hoar demanded that the resolution lie over under the rules until to-morrow. The Vice-President reversed his decision on the point of order.

THE MINORITY REPORT.

Mr. Foraker yielded to Mr. Turpie, who presented a minority report from the Foreign Relations Committee, as follows:

"The undersigned members of the Committee on Foreign Relations cordially concur in the report made upon the Cuban resolutions, but we favor the immediate recognition of the Republic of Cuba, as organized in that island, as a free, independent and sovereign power among the nations of the world."

It was signed by Senators Turpie, Mills, Daniel and Foraker.

It looks as if the conservative Senators would delay the Cuban resolutions by debate. Senator Davis said there was no disposition to unduly press this question, though it would be pressed as rapidly as possible. The speaking would, in itself, be sufficient to throw the case over to-morrow.

The chair decided Senator Hoar's point of order well taken.

FOUNDRY DESTROYED

Manitoba to Guarantee Bonds in O. & R. R. Railway

Serious Fire at Vanleek Hill, Supposed to Have Caught from Inside—$8,000 a Mile for the Ontario and Rainy River Project

(Special to the Times.)

London, April 13.—The Anglo-Canadian trade continues to improve. The exports to Canada during March increased six per cent. and for three months increased twelve per cent.

Exports to all countries decreased four and three per cent. respectively. This remarkable contrast in Canada's favor is partly attributed to the new Canadian tariff.

Imports from Canada were stationary for the month, but increased fifteen per cent. for the three months. Imports from all countries increased seven and one per cent. respectively.

The chief increase in imports from Canada in thousand pounds sterling for three months are: Animals, £19,000; wheat, £104,000; wheat flour, £9,000; bacon, £15,000; butter, £10,000; eggs, £2,000; fish, £63,000.

Chief decreases are: Hams, £5,000; Cheese, £1,000; timber, £75,000.

KILLED ON THE G. T. R. TRACKS.

An unknown young man of some 23 or 24 years of age, while walking on the G.T.R. track, near the Exhibition grounds, Toronto, was struck and instantly killed by the Hamilton train, due in Toronto at 1.15 p.m. The train stopped and picked up the body, which was taken to the morgue.

M., O. & R. R. R.

Winnipeg, April 13.—It was learned last night on good authority that the Manitoba Government has decided to aid the Ontario and Rainy River railway project to the extent of guaranteeing bonds to the amount of $8,000 a mile for one hundred miles from Lake of the Woods to Winnipeg, or over the Southeastern Railway. The Legislature resumed last evening after the Easter holidays.

FOUNDRY TOTALLY DESTROYED.

Vanleek Hill, Ont., April 13.—A serious fire last night resulted in the destruction of the foundry of F. C. Routheir & Son. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed to have caught fire from the inside of the building. The loss is estimated at about $3,000; insurance $1,000.

A NOVEL POINT.

Toronto, April 13.—An interesting legal point is being argued before the Divisional Court at Osgoode Hall, arising out of the case of Houston vs. Gilhuly. The parties reside in Chatham Township, Kent County. The crops of a married man were seized in execution, and were claimed by his wife. The question at issue is whether, when a husband's goods are used in farming operations performed by the wife under consent, the wife can own the crops.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. Inspecting the Watches

Conductors on the G.T.R. are taking great objection to a new regulation issued by the management of the road. The rule calls for an inspection of their watches by an expert appointed, and if the watches vary over 30 seconds in a week they have to get new ones. The company offers to furnish substantial watches for $20, and the employees think this looks very peculiar. The watches in future are to have a weekly comparison and a quarterly inspection.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 14, 1898

The armistice applies to the war only. It has no connection with the war news.

• • •

It will always remain a mystery why bicyclists who are just learning to ride should prefer to practice on crowded streets.

• • •

The Yankees will even refuse to grow Spanish onions in the event of war. The idea almost takes their breath away.

• • •

In the event of war betwen the United States and Spain it might be a good opportunity for Coxey's army to distinguish itself.

• • •

It begins to look as though the recently elected member without a protest on his hands would be decidedly out of fashion.

• • •

The wearing of a pig-tail does not make Li Hung Chang a pig, but if he really took a bribe of over a million taels from Russia he certainly is a hog.

• • •

"Why is the present year likely to be most unlucky?" says an East Indian paper. "Because 1898 is devisable by 13 and 26, the sum of the four figures is also a multiple of that fatal number."

• • •

The two Peterboroughs must be exceptionally moral constituencies. They are about the only ridings in the province that are not indulging in the luxury of a protest.

Satan reproving sin is an absurdity, of course, but, at the same time, it is a model of consistency compared to the crocodile tears of a partisan like Colonel Samuel Hughes, as he rises to weep over the intolerance of partyism as exemplified in the act of the cruel Senate which deprived William McKenzie of the profits of the Yukon Deal.

• • •

The religious newspapers are protesting against the proposal to charge newspaper postage. Just like those people—they always expect to get something for nothing. If Mr. Mulock knows his business, and we fancy he does, he will take no stock in the miserable whims of such people. The Times is in favor of compelling newspaper publishers to pay postage on their publications, for the simple reason that it is not right that they shouldn't.

LATEST FROM APSLEY

Another Strong Plea for Railway Connection [illegible]

Not having seen any news from this quarter for some time, perhaps a few items would be of some interest to the numerous readers of your great family journal. It is eagerly looked for each week for any fresh news of the railroad, the prospect of that achievement being likely to become a reality, has put new life in the country, the Spanish-American war being only a secondary consideration.

Mr. F. Bullied has taken "the bull by the horns," and is busy erecting a new store on Wellington street, adjacent to the cheese factory. We wish him success in his new undertaking. Perhaps some more of our young men will follow his example and start some other industry in the near future.

There is not the least doubt that were the railroad to be built the country would prosper, and as soon as our Eldorado is discovered it must come and the Klondike will be nowhere in the dance.

THE NEW KLONDIKE.

Mr. Tullock, the minerologist, passed through here last week on his way home from a prospecting tour in the township of Cardiff. He speaks very highly of this district as a mining country, and says that some day it will be the centre of activity for mining operations. He had many fine samples of ore with him—gold, silver, corundum and black lead being among them.

EASTER.

Easter day was duly observed by all the churches, the Rev. Canon Harding holding two services to large congregations at St. George's. The church was very prettily decorated by the ladies of the congregation. Mrs. Geo. Ayling deserves great credit for the lead which she always takes inthe decorations, and the pretty mottoes, etc., were her handiwork. Mr. L. S. Hall, the Presbyterian Missionary, held divine service in the afternoon, which was well attended. This was his opening service, he having only lately been appointed to this mission. Mr. J. N. Clarry, the Methodist Missionary, held his service in the evening, and gave a very able discourse suitable to the day.

SAW-LOGS.

The Rathbun Company's drive is passing through here now under Mr. A. Teilborn. There is not an over-supply of water, but Alphonse says he is going down flying. There is a large hollow cedar among the logs which the water runs through. It seems to bother "Stots" a good deal and he is seriously thinking of plugging it up to make it run faster.

BAND OF HOPE.

The Band of Hope, which has been going on all winter, holding meetings every Monday evening, has been a great success, many of our leading citizens taking part in the meetings. The Rev. C. Lord, who wasthe promoter of the band, is well satisfied with the undertaking.

NOTES.

Mr. A. Snider, our shoemaker, has been very busy of late rigging the boys for the drive.

Our worthy reeve, Wm. Gallon, Esq., has commenced gardening. He intends beautifying his grounds this spring, as he is good on horticulture. We expect pect to see a flowery show from him this summer.

The roads are commencing to dry up nicely with the beautiful weather that we are now getting. It is to be hoped that on account of the early spring the Government will allow the money for repairs to be expended next month when the farmers will have finished seeding, and have time to do the work before haying begins. This would be far better for the roads, as it would give them material time to past before the fall traffic.

Bicycling is now the rage, and two or three new bikes have arrived this season. There is some talk of a few tandems being needed.

Sugar making is about over. One young man engaged here in boiling sap left the bush for dinner, and on his return was surprised to find that his whole outfit had been consumed by fire in his absence. A spark from the fire ignited the whole woods.

No more news at present—will try to send you a few items next week.

COULD DO NO WORK.

"Large sores broke out on my body, head and limbs, and also on my hands, so that I could not do any work, and my hair came out. My trouble was called eczema. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken several bottles the sores and itching disappeared and I was cured." Mrs. J. G. Brown, Brantford, Ont.

HOOD'S PILLS are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Cure all liver ills.

Valencia Fans

Aside from the Japanese fan, those of next importance in commerce are made in Valencia by poor Spanish working people, working in garrets, there being no large factories there, but despite this fact there exists a subdivision of labor exactly similar to that of a great manufactory, each workman becoming skilled in some small part of the construction of the article. These fan sticks of ebony, olive or sandal wood or bones, are beautifully carved, and their coverings are painted by artists of some skill and shipped to Paris. [illegible]

If You are a Sufferer Try the Efficacy of the Great Medicine At Once.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO.,

DEAR SIRS:—For over five years I have been a sufferer from dyspepsia, and have used a great variety of medicines without any benefits or good results. I was advised to use Paine's Celery Compound, and now, having just about finished three bottles, I feel it my duty to announce to the public the great benefits I have received. For over a year I was unable to sleep at night owing to pains in my head and stomach, and my appetite was gone; now I can sleep well and am always ready for my meals, thanks to your Paine's Celery Compound. I cannot recommend it to highly too those suffering from dyspepsia.

CORNWALL CANAL AND RIVER REACHES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvements at Upper Entrance of Cornwall Canal and River Reaches" will be received at this Office until 16 o'clock on Saturday the 30th day of April, 1898, for the works connected with the widening, straightening and deepening of the Upper Entrance of the Cornwall Canal and the River Reaches between Cornwall and Coteau Landing.

Plans and Specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 15th day of April, 1898 at the Office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Cornwall. Printed forms of Tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $17,000 must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the condition requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of November, A. D., 189, will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

SINCE THE TROLLEY'S COME TO TOWN.

Ring out the loud hosannas and do the job up brown,
For at last we have a trolley a-running through the town.
The farmers stop their haying and wonder at the sight,
For the way the cars go scooting is a revelation quite.
Their clanging and their buzzing all other noises drown,
For they make an awful racket a-running through the town.

The old town doesn't seem the same. It's mighty bright and gay,
And every one can celebrate its resurrection day.
'Twas buried many years ago, and buried good and deep,
But now it has awakened from its Rip Van Winkle sleep,
And every hour of the day the cars run up and down,
And every one is tickled now the trolley's come to town.

There's two new barns a-going up, excitement everywhere,
And a mild form of paresis seems to permeate the air.
The benefits to be derived have surely taken root,
While real estate has risen to fifteen cents a foot
And all the wimmin folks have bought a brand new muslin gown,
For they're bound to cut a figure now the trolley's come to town.

—Hartford Times.

AN EERIE EPISODE.

It was at a masquerade at Galinberti's studio in one of the old Roman palaces. There were music, the tripping sound of dancing feet, laughter and the unintelligible hum of conversation mingled in a gay medley.

Carson, an American, a new arrival in the city and a stranger to that colony of sculptors and painters, had been accidentally separated from the friend who brought him in the crowd shortly after his entrance to the ballroom.

He was wandering listlessly among the merry maskers, quite regardless of their gibes and laughter at his expense. Tired at length of his aimless peregrinations, he turned aside from the glaring lights and heat to the shade and coolness of the balcony.

The wide casements at the end of the room were open and gave an unobstructed view of the kaleidoscopic scene within. A divan near the balustrade offered a place for repose, but it was not until he was seated that he was aware of the presence of a lady. She occupied the farther end of the divan and was partially concealed by the drooping tree ferns and palms with which the balcony was decorated. She moved slightly in her nest of tricolored cushions, and her fan fell with a slight clatter upon the stone floor.

Carson picked it up and gave it to her with a courteous bow. She thanked him, speaking in English, with just the slightest Italian accent.

"I fear that I am intruding, signora," he said.

"Not so. The balcony is free to all who come. There can be no intrusion."

She reached up her hand as she spoke and pushed aside the feathery branches that swayed between them. Then he saw that she was young and very fair to look upon.

Her face was decidedly English. She wore an indescribable swathing garment of soft texture that was gathered up closely about her neck and fell to her feet in long, clinging folds—strongly suggestive of a Bernhardt costume. Two beautifully shaped arms were bare to the shoulder, and the small hands that lay in her lap looked as though they had been modeled in wax.

She leaned back, resting her head upon the stuccoed pillar, her fan waving languidly to and fro.

"Permit me," said the American, taking the dainty lace and ivory trifle from her hand and fanning her gently.

She smiled a gracious assent, and then began talking.

It was so warm in the ballroom and one grew so tired dancing, she said. Did the gentleman dance? Perhaps he was not acquainted with many ladies—a stranger in Rome? Was he an artist or a sculptor?

"Neither, signora. I am an attache."

"From what country—England?"

"No—America."

"America! Ah, that marvelous land!"

She chatted on in an open, friendly manner until a bevy of tired dancers invaded their retreat. Among them was his friend Tarro.

"Great heavens, Carson! Where have you been? I have looked everywhere for you. Everybody is unmasking, and it is time for supper. No doubt you are starving. Come, I have secured a table, and you are to meet some charming women. What have you been doing here all alone? It was exceedingly stupid in us to get separated."

"I have not been alone," replied Mr. Carson. He glanced around, but the lady was gone.

"Not alone? Why, who was with you?"

"The lady. Did you not see her when you came?"

"A caprice, my dear boy. I saw no lady. No, you sat there mooning, staring in a most sentimental manner at that Moorish lantern hanging over there. Come along. They are waiting for us."

They lingered long over their supper. There were merry, high pitched talking and much laughter, but Carson was not in a state of hilarity. His restless, bored glance wandered over the assembly, and once he started and turned sharply in his chair at the low voice of a woman who, with her escort, passed close beside him.

Tarro tried to rally him on his abstraction, but his brow contracted fretfully, and he nervously fingered a spray of flowers that lay by his plate. He was not sorry when the ball was over and he found himself on the pavement outside of the palace.

A cab was waiting, but without knowing why he declined to accompany his friend, saying he preferred to walk. [illegible] ively, with bowed head, aimlessly staring at the dim shadows cast by the waning moon. As he was passing across the Piazza de Farnese he heard a low voice speaking:

"So we meet again!"

He halted. She, his new acquaintance, was beside him.

"Signora! You here at this hour and alone? Where are your friends?"

She smiled. "You will walk with me to the street below, will you not?"

"Certainly. But your friends—their carelessness is criminal."

They walked through the square and down several streets almost in silence. Presently she stopped before the entrance of a house.

"Here, signor!" she said.

Almost simultaneously she swayed forward and caught his arm, at the same time uttering a smothered cry.

"You are hurt!" he exclaimed anxiously. "You have twisted your ankle on those wretched stones."

"I fear so." She pressed her hand upon her bosom and looked into his eyes with mute appeal.

"You cannot walk." He stooped and gathered her up into his arms. "I will carry you. Which floor?"

"The fourth," she replied, her face flushing as the light of the early day fell upon it.

A drowsy janitor answered his ring. He ascended the first flight of stairs without pausing, carrying her as a nurse might a child, happy at the delicious touch of her bare arms against his neck as she clasped him.

On the second flight ascent was not so easy. Her weight grew heavier, and the head that had now fallen on his shoulder pressed like a ball of iron, her arms were relaxing their clasp and lay against his neck with startling coldness. She seemed to be letting herself go, and at each step grew heavier in proportion.

He was no longer carrying a lissome maiden, but something burdensome and horrible—something that was bearing him down and suffocating him with a sensation as though his chest was bursting.

On the third landing he felt her slipping.

"Signora," he faltered.

He sought to renew his hold, but the burden, now a dead weight, slid from his arms, and she fell with a heavy thud to the floor.

"What noise is this?" called a masculine voice in Italian.

Carson began a hasty explanation to the man, whose head protruded from a partially open door.

The man came forward and bent over her.

"She does not belong here," he said. "She is a stranger. She is pale as death. Unfasten her clothing. She must have fainted. Where is the janitor? The fool! He never is here when he is needed. Call him, signor, and send for a physician." His hasty hand broke the knot of ribbon that confined her bodice. With a wild exclamation he instantly loosened his hold on her dress and started backward. The full throat and white bust were exposed. There were deep bluish purple bands around the throat and a gaping dagger wound, dark with coagulated blood, on the snowy bosom.

Their cries aroused the janitor, who hastened to call the police. Presently he returned, panting up the stairs, accompanied by an officer. Carson drew aside the curtain, and the bright light of day fell upon the body.

"Holy Virgin!" cried the policeman as he saw the dead woman.

"Can you identify her?" asked Carson.

"Yes," returned the man. "She is the woman who was found murdered on the Corso night before last. How came she here?"—M. M. Halm in Argonaut.

OLD AGE.

It may be, when this city of the nine gates
Is broken down by ruinous old age,
And no one upon any pilgrimage
Comes knocking, no one for an audience waits
And no bright, foraying troops of bandit moods
Ride out on the brave folly of any quest,
But weariness, the restless shadow of rest,
Hoveringly upon the city broods—
It may be, then, that those remembering
And sleepless watchers on the crumbling towers
Shall lose the count of the disastrous hours
Which God may have grown tired of reckoning.

THE POSTAL THIEF.

BY CHARLES B. LEWIS.

As a postoffice inspector I did not hear of the doings at Shelby until two or three of my fellow inspectors had tried their hands and made a failure of it. Then I took the case and failed most ignominiously of all because I added blunder to failure.

The postmaster was an old man named Harper, and for assistants he had his two daughters, one being 19 and the other 15 years of age. Mr. Harper had held the office for 12 years when the complaints came in. The postoffice was an L of his residence, with a front added. The inspectors who preceded me had looked the ground over and left the case a mystery. Everybody said that Harper was honesty itself, and the idea that the girls would tamper with the mails was not to be entertained.

The mail carrier was the first man to see to. I arrived on the ground without my identity being revealed and watched him for two weeks. There was opportunity during his eight mile drive to open the bags with a duplicate key, but I watched without result, except to be satisfied of his honesty. Then I made myself known to the postmaster and received a warm welcome. He was very much distressed about the thefts, and to the best of his knowledge and belief all had taken place in his office. There were only about 20 persons who rented boxes, and all other mail was put into the general delivery. As the father and his two daughters were the only ones handling the mail or having access to the interior of the office it seemed that one of the three must be the thief, and yet I could not bring myself to believe that. I was given the fullest opportunity to investigate, and I also did some work outside unbeknown to the postmaster.

I caused to be mailed to the patent medicine people a large number of letters, with a private number on each envelope. The first batch of ten came through all right, but out of the second two were missing. The whole ten had left Denton in the mail bag, as I well knew, and the two had either been taken en route by the carrier or by some one after their arrival at Shelby. As the carrier had brought over two passengers in his cart that trip he might be considered out of it. The mail had arrived at Shelby at 8 o'clock and been called for an hour later. Next day a batch of six letters came through all right, and so on the next, and on the third ten were received. I helped to distribute the mail and counted three letters and recorded the number. Father and daughter all knew this, and yet at 5 o'clock three of these letters, together with two for a certain merchant, which I had particularly noticed, were missing and could not be found.

That evening, after the office closed, we turned it upside down, as it were, but nothing came of it. The old postmaster was in the deepest despair, while his two daughters wept and sobbed over what they believed would be the ruin of all. As an inspector, and with such evidence before my eyes, it was my business to believe one of the three guilty, and yet I had to reason that they wouldn't be idiotic enough to purloin letters under my very nose. I simply didn't know what to think, and next morning was knocked off my feet to receive a complaint from Washington that three important letters posted at Shelby ten days before for a city only 100 miles away had been lost en route. I telegraphed for enlarged instructions, and upon receiving them I told Mr. Harper I must let go of the case temporarily for another. I shifted my quarters over to Denton, through which all mail to and from Shelby must pass, and made such arrangements with the postmaster that every letter was counted and its address taken. I mailed about 80 decoy letters in this time, and at the end of 14 days had the satisfaction of knowing that 11 different letters had somehow or other been made away with at Shelby. This was adding evidence to evidence, but I did not return to Shelby to lay the matter before the old postmaster.

I went back there in the disguise of a farmer's hired man looking for work, and luckily for me no farmer wanted a man. I therefore loafed about the village and was in and out of the postoffice half a dozen times per day—always there when the mail departed or came in. By looking through the glass door of one of the boxes I could see the general delivery box, mail tables, etc., and carefully scrutinized the conduct of the three as they did their work. I kept up this espionage for a week before anything happened. Then the mail came in one afternoon while the father was temporarily absent, and the girls opened the bag and assorted it. As they picked up the letters each pocketed one with a sly look, and you may believe me when I tell you I turned away with a heavy heart. Instead of one thief there were two, and those the handsome and winsome daughters of an honest and upright old man. It would break his heart when he learned the truth, but I must tell him, and those girls must be punished.

I went to the hotel, threw off my disguise and then returned to the postoffice. I somehow felt that the girls ought to look guilty, but they did not. They gave me a cordial greeting, hoped I had come back to stay until the mystery was thoroughly sifted, and no persons could have borne themselves more innocently. That night after the office was closed to the public I asked the father to my room and then went over the case with him. There could be no manner of doubt that a score or more of letters had been purloined from his office. There were three of them who had access to the mails, and one of the three must have some guilty knowledge of those letters. By no possibility could an outsider reach them. With tears streaming down his furrowed cheeks he acknowledged that my assertions and declarations were correct, but who was the thief? Did I suspect him? Could I suspect either of his daughters? Then I broke it to him as gently as I could—told him what I had seen in the afternoon and what was a fact.

For some time he argued that I must be mistaken, but finally told me to go ahead and do my duty and never mind his feelings. He had been father and mother to those girls for years, and no word or act of theirs had ever before caused him a moment's uneasiness. If they had taken two letters, they had taken all the others, and he asked me to go to the house and confront them and extort a confession. Hard hearted as I thought myself, I hadn't the nerve to do that, but put it off till morning. He gave me his promise to say nothing overnight, and I was at the house soon after breakfast. I sat down with the girls and went over the case, as I had with him, hoping to break them down, but they had only anxiety on their faces as they listened. Then I boldly stated what I had seen on the previous day, and the shot told. Both blushed and stammered and began weeping, and I took it as a confession and told the father so. He couldn't speak to them for his emotion, and when I told him they must consider themselves under arrest and a search made of their rooms he simply bowed his head in acquiescence. I wanted to keep the girls below while I searched their room, and unfortunately for me I called in the village constable to sit with them. He had to be told more or less of the case, and as soon as he was at liberty he went out to spread the news. In an hour it was known all over town that the two girls had been caught robbing the postoffice, and some of the excited people even went so far as to say that the father had probably winked at it.

My search revealed two letters from two different men in New York. They had been directed under other names, but the two girls had opened them. They had stolen these letters and forgot to destroy them. I went out and made inquiries, and then I discovered what a blunderer I was. Both girls were carrying on a clandestine correspondence, using fictitious names, and these were the letters I had seen them pocket. When I asked them to confirm this theory they did so, but it was evident that in their eyes clandestine letter writing was about as bad a crime as robbing the mails. The news had gone forth that they had been detected in purloining letters, and how could I combat it? I spent the next two days in trying to explain matters to the public, but found not one man or woman who would believe me. Postoffice inspectors didn't bring charges and retract them, they reasoned, and a strong petition was drawn up and sent to Washington asking that the culprits be duly punished. Letters were also written stating that I must have been bribed to act as I did and declaring that I was not a proper man for the service. You may well reason that I was summoned to report in Washington without delay and that my reception there was anything but flattering to me. I had lost my official head before saying 20 words. It was my first and only blunder for ten years, but that didn't count. If I got a grain of comfort out of the situation, it was when I heard that several more complaints about lost letters at Shelby had just come in that day.

I left Washington with no particular aim, but on reaching Denton I made up my mind to go over to Shelby and have one more look around. I went back in my old role as hired man and entered that postoffice about half an hour after the mail had been distributed. Looking through the glass door of a box, I saw one of the girls sewing and the other reading. Behind them was an open back window, and within three feet of this window was the general delivery box. In front of the window and only two feet away was the table on which the mail packages were done up, and a score of letters were lying there to be wrapped. I had just made out these things when a good sized bird, black in color, alighted on the window sill, hopped along to the delivery box and picked off the top letter and darted away. In 15 seconds the bird was back, and in the course of ten minutes I watched her take away five letters. That bird was a magpie and the real thief, but I had ruined the reputation of a family before solving the mystery. I at once made myself known to the father, and we visited the back yard to search for the letters. There in an old dog kennel which had been tenantless for years we found them—every single one which had been missed. The magpie belonged to a neighbor, and singularly enough she had never been caught at the trick. As it was summer the back window was open all day, and there were times when only one person would be waiting on the public. With the usual cunning of her species the bird watched her chance, taking letters from both the table and the general delivery box, and a dozen other inspectors might have been put on the case without solving the mystery. I had that satisfaction, though I was not reinstated, and I also take great pleasure in saying that after awhile the people of Shelby came to believe the Harpers entirely innocent and made ample amends for what had been said and done.

WHAT SHE MOST RESENTED.

She Could Readily Forgive and Forget Most Anything but This.

She swept into the office of the manager with cyclonic perturbation. Anybody could see from the haughty superiority of her manner that if she was not yet a star she fully intended to be one. In her hand was a newspaper, which she laid on the desk before the manager.

"Now, really, Miss Frostleigh," he said somewhat impatiently, "I am not responsible for what appears in the newspapers about you. I can't do anything more than say I am sorry you should have any troubles. That's all anybody does for me when I get into debt."

"Have you read that cruel article about my husband applying for a divorce?"

"Yes—that is to say, I glanced over the headlines."

"You can at least tell me where I can find the editor."

"Now, take my advice and keep away. It won't do you the least bit of good."

"But don't you think I have a right to complain?"

"Of course. It was too bad. I have no doubt it was a base calumny to say you cut his allowance down to $12 a week."

"I could have borne that," she murmured.

"And I can understand it was very annoying to have it said that you put him out of a cab one night and made him walk three miles to the depot."

"That was not the cruelest part of it, though."

"And it was naturally embarrassing to have it asserted in cold type that in a fit of jealous pique you knocked him down and then jumped on him."

"Do you think the papers in all of the cities printed that?" she inquired.

"In all probability they did. I'm sorry for the worry it must cause you."

"That wasn't all!" she exclaimed.

"I know. What you refer to is the insinuation that he is your seventh husband."

"That isn't the worst either," she said, with a heartbreaking sob. "They spelled my name wrong!"—Detroit Free Press.

WARTIME RECOLLECTIONS.

The Old Soldier Tells of His Going Away and of His Home Coming.

"My last recollection of the camp in which we were mustered in," said the old soldier, "was of my mother. We had been in camp for days, for weeks, in fact, filling up the regiment and drilling and getting equipped, and getting ready generally. Finally we were mustered in, and the next day after that we started.

"It was nightfall when we fell in for the last time in the company streets of our first camp and marched out and formed on the color line. There was a great crowd there, relatives and friends and sightseers come to see the regiment off. In front of my own company I could see my father and mother, come to see the last of their boy before he went to war. I was the apple of my mother's eye. I knew that, and I had expected to see her break down completely when the regiment marched away, but she stood as firm as a rock.

"When the regiment came home, we marched up through the same street that we had marched down years before—night again, it was, too—with a band of music, with fireworks flying everywhere, and with crowds on the sidewalk cheering, to the town hall, where there was a banquet, with a speech from the mayor, and so on. When this was nearly over, my father and my brother, who had come to meet me, went home to tell my mother I was coming.

"Home was half a mile or more away. A bunch of us, men of the regiment, started from the hall together. They fell off one after another, until finally I went on alone along the familiar street. It was bright moonlight. Far ahead, at the corner of the street down which I must turn for home, I saw her. She was waiting.

"When I had come to her, she lifted up her hands and pronounced my name, that was all, and then her arms were about my neck, and my old blue overcoat was wet with her falling tears. Her son had come home."—New York Sun.

THE EXCITABLE FRENCH.

Scene In the Chamber of Deputies With the Members Enraged.

Upon arriving at the anteroom of the chamber of deputies, says Colonel T. W. Higginson in The Atlantic, I found the hall full of people waiting, each having to send his card to some member, naming on it the precise hour of arrival. The member usually appeared promptly, when an immense usher called in a stentorian voice for "La personne qui a fait demander M. Constant"—or whoever it might be. Then the constituent—for such it usually was—advanced toward the smiling member, who never looked bored, the mask of hospitality being probably the same in this respect throughout the legislative halls of the world. At last M. Talandier appeared and got me a place among the corps diplomatique. The chamber itself was more like our representatives' hall at Washington than like the house of commons. The members had little locked desks, and some were writing letters, like our representatives, though I saw no newspapers.

The ordinary amount of noise was like that in our congress, though there was happily no clapping of hands for pages, but when the members became especially excited, which indeed happened very often, it became like a cage of lions. For instance, I entered just as somebody had questioned the minister of war, General Borel, about an alleged interference with elections, and his defiant reply had enraged the Lefts, or radicals, who constituted the majority of the assembly. They shouted and gesticulated, throwing up their arms and then slapping them on their knees very angrily, until the president rang his great bell, and they quieted down lest he might put on his hat and adjourn the meeting. In each case the member speaking took his stand in the desk or tribune below the president, and the speeches were sometimes read, sometimes given without notes.

The war minister, a stout, red faced man—always, the radicals say, half intoxicated—stood with folded arms and looked ready for a coup d'etat, yet I heard it said about me that he would be compelled either to retreat or resign. One saw at a glance how much profounder political differences must be in France than with us.

Married on Thirty Minutes' Courtship.

"You may talk about your brief courtships and marriages on short notice," said Captain Arm Cardwell once, "but I think I once witnessed the quickest made match on record. I was running as a conductor between Russellville and Owensboro, as I did for many years, and on a trip in the winter of 1881 I got a pretty country girl passenger at a little flag station south of Central City about 9:45 a. m. A few miles farther on at another small station a big strapping looking farmer, dressed in brown jeans, with his trousers tucked in his tall boots, got on my train. The fellow hadn't opened the car door till he spied the rustic lass, and before he took his seat in front of the girl he had smiled at her.

"I punched his ticket, went in the smoking car, and on my return to the regular passenger coach found the Green river tiller of the soil sitting in the same seat with the maiden, chatting with her as if he had known her since birth. In 25 minutes after they had first met the fellow called me to him and said: 'See here, podner, we want to get hitched. I hain't knowed Mirinda Jane here but 30 minutes, but we both like, an she's willin an so'm I. Whur's the nighest parson, podner?' I took them on to Owensboro, and the happy bridegroom and his blushing other half were passengers back on my train that afternoon. For hurry up nuptials it does strike me that these ought to have the cake and other special prizes offered for quick yeast love matches."—Louisville Post.

DR. T. T. SANDEN, 156 St. James St., Montreal, Que

Eugene Sue's Pranks.

The father of Eugene Sue was a physician with exalted patients all over Europe, who sent him the choicest wines. The emperor of Austria, for instance, had contributed tokay, the king of Prussia rare bock, Queen Christina of Spain priceless alicante, Prince Metternich genuine cachet d'or, and so on. The whole was kept in a large iron cupboard in the study of the learned physician, known as the Elzevir library. Eugene was then a college freshman, and, having procured a skeleton key to the closet, with his friends, Adolphe, Adam, Veron and others, proceeded every night to investigate the contents of the bottles. Not wishing to have their explorations prematurely stopped, they took the precaution to fill up the partially exhausted flasks with water and then to reseal them. When, for a long time afterward, the doctor brought forth samples of his precious stock for the delectation of guests worthy of it, and the company tasted it with a due sense of awe, it was privately felt that the celebrity of these great brands was all moonshine, that ordinary table d'hote bordeaux was preferable to them. But nobody dared to say so, and it was only after the death of his dreaded parent that the novelist confessed the sacrilege.

He Got a Mate.

A sea captain called at a village inn and asked the landlady, a young widow:

"Do you know where I can get a mate? I have lost my mate."

"I am very sorry for you, Mr. ——," she said, smiling. "I want a mate, too, and cannot get one. As we are in the same position, I'll tell you what I'll do—if you'll be mine, I will be yours."

He closed with the bargain, and, the widow keeping her word, he is now supplied with two mates.—Pearson's Weekly.

Hebrew Texts of the Old Testament.

The most ancient Hebrew manuscript of any part of the Bible is in St. Petersburg and dates no earlier than the tenth century. More than 2,000 copies of the Hebrew Old Testament have been compared, and very few variations have been found. This is accounted for by the fact that from the time when the Hebrew canon was formed, and even before that time, very strict rules were laid down for the scribes who copied the Bible. The lines and letters were counted, and each copy had to correspond precisely with the one from which it was taken. They calculated, for instance, that there were 5,245 verses in the Pentateuch, 22,206 in the whole Bible and 78,100 letters in Genesis. All of these rules and calculations were called the Massorah tradition, and about the tenth century the college of rabbis of Tiberias, on the Euphrates, decided upon a standard Bible, or "authorised version."

The Hebrew consonants alone had been written down up to that time, the pronunciation being a matter of tradition. Now a system of vowel signs was devised, fixing the sense in many instances. The vowels are just as important in Hebrew as in English; so it is easy to see how necessary this reform was. The English consonants b r d may be read board or bread, or bored or braid, and if they occurred in a sentence without the vowels we should have to guess by the connection which vowels were necessary. It is possible that after a text had been adopted all older manuscripts were destroyed, or more probably were neglected because of their defects, and hence they have altogether disappeared.—Review of Reviews.

Trees and the Air.

According to a reliable computation, a single tree is able through its leaves to purify the air from the carbonic acid arising from the respiration of a considerable number of men—as many as a dozen or a score. The volume of carbonic acid exhaled by a human being in the course of 24 hours is estimated at 100 gallons, and a single square yard of leaf surface, counting both the upper and under sides of the leaves, can decompose about a gallon of carbonic acid in a day.

Hobson's Choice.—Mother—Johnny, I see your little brother has the smallest apple. Did you give him his choice, as I suggested?

Johnny—Yes'm. I told him he could have his choice, the little one or none, and he took the little one.—London Tit-Bits.

Almost Beyond Belief.—"Tender-hearted?" said one who knew him. "Very much so. Upon my word, he would not even hurt a baseball umpire."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Kidneys

are the seat or the starting point of many maladies, all of them serious, all more or less painful, and all of them tending, unless cured, to a fatal end. No organs of the body are more delicate or more sensitive than the kidneys. When symptoms of disease appear in them not a moment is to be lost if health is to be restored. The best way to treat the kidneys is through the blood, cleansing it from the poisonous matter which is usually at the bottom of kidney complaints. For this purpose there is no remedy equal to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For many years I have been a constant sufferer from kidney trouble, and have tried a number of largely advertised kidney cures without benefit. At last a friend advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The use of eight bottles of this remedy entirely cured my malady."—MARY MILLER, 1238 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 14 1898

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

The Brigade Camp

The military camp for District No. 3 will this year be held in Belleville, that city having offered a site, lighting and water free. It appears to us that it is about time that Peterborough came in for some of these plums. What's the matter with our offering the same inducements, and, say, a little extra thrown in in the way of a small bonus?

The Boy and His Catapault

It is despicably cruel and also against the law to kill robins, and it is also illegal to use catapults, yet plenty of boys are committing both offences in Peterborough. A few salutary examples are needed to stop this annual spring habit of the small boy. Parents might compel their children to destroy their little but dangerous weapons; and the authorities start a few prosecutions as warnings.

A Peculiar Accident

Mr. J. O. Leary, of Downeyville, while driivng from Lindsay on Tuesday last, had a narrow escape from death. His horses ran away, and the wagon becoming detached, Mr. Leary was dragged a quarter of a mile over the rough roads by the reins, which had become wrapped about him. Strange to say, he received little injury. Mr. Leary is well known in Peterborough, and his friends will be glad to hear of his escape.

Clean Up

Every citizen should take a pride in having the Plate Glass City look neat, clean and beautiful this year. Every householder should clean up, burn or cart away all the loose leaves and rubbish that accumulate in the yards during the fall and winter. Lawns should be put in good order, fences, gates, etc., repaired and painted, and the boulevards sodded. The owners of vacant lots should tidy them up, and put them in as presentable a shape as possible. If each citizen does his best Peterborough will be a place of beauty. We are going to have a very large number of strangers here on July 1st, and the town should look its prettiest.

ON THE WAY TO KLONDYKE

Interesting Letter from Mr. T. J. Kearney of Young's Point

Mr. T. J. Kearney, formerly of Young's Point, who is en route for the Northern Gold Fields, writes a very interesting letter to his brother at Young's Point, who has kindly handed it to us for publication in the Times.

After embarking at Vancouver, Mr. Kearney says as the vessel turned out into the harbor his companion, whom he calls Billy, "stood on herdeck and took a last look at the fading lights of the city, and wondered what our emotions would be when next we gazed upon them.

Yesterday morning the weather was very pleasant, and warmer than it was at Victoria. In the afternoon it began misty rain and was raining hard when I went to bed. About noon yesterday we entered Queen Charlotte Sound, the largest stretch of open water on the route. We were about three hours crossing it and a few of the passengers were seasick. With that exception what I have seen of the route so far is almost like a ride through Stoney Lake, but instead of low hills there are mountains all along, and in some of the channels there are strong tidal currents. Last night we stopped three hours on account of the darkness.

There are four musical instruments on board—a violin, guitar, flute and cornet, and as each is well played we have a fine orchestra. Yesterday we had two concerts; one in the forenoon in the forward cabin and another in the evening in the after cabin. The violinist is an artist with his instrument, and when he reaches Dawson if he does not make a success of mining perhaps he may win the plaudits and dollars of the successful miners with the melody of his instrument.

Mrs. Jack Dalton, wife of "The Alaska Pathfinder," is one of the passengers and also Bracket, of Skagway wagon road fame, is another.

Morning bell rings at seven, but I am always up before that. We have breakfast at 8, lunch at 1 and dinner at 6—and we live in royal style. As we have plenty of fish and eggs it has been an easy matter for me to keep Lent, but after landing at Skagway it will be different. The dining room seats over eighty, and each one has a certain chair, table and sitting. I am in the first sitting, having made it a point to secure a ticket in time. Our table seats eight; on my right are two ladies, both married, and on my left a New York man. Across from me sits an Ontario man, a doctor and a young friend of his. I do not know the eigth man. George Russell and Abrahams sit on the other side of the room at the table waited on by Quinn Burnett, a brother of my old friend, and fellow motorman and employee, Ben Burnett.

One sees many different costumes on the steamer. Some with fur coats and caps, moccasins, sweaters and a few in ordinary business dress. I am wearing a double-breasted coat, light colored flannel shirt and the remainder of my apparel is the same I wore around the city. For the trail I have a suit of mackinaw, cap, mittens, German socks, moccasins, heavy waterproof shoes, rubber hip boots, sweater and heavy flannel shirts besides ordinary clothing.

Thursday.—Last night we reached Wrangel, but we were asleep and did not see the town and now we are at Juneau, where we arrived at 5.30 p. m., and will leave at 9. The Rosalie is going South she has just come in and I must hurry up and get this letter on her. To-day we passed icebergs and the mountains are all covered with snow. The air is clear and calm, but of course pretty cold, and I hope it will continue this way for a week or two. Early to-morrow morning we will be at Skagway, and we have just heard that the trail is in fine condition, so we may get along all right. I am feeling well and hope that kind Providence who watches over us all may protect you, and that you will not be uneasy if you do not often hear from me.

And now good-bye, with kindest regards to all our friends, I am your loving son and brother,

THOS. J. KEARNEY,
Box 34, Skagway, Alaska.

P. S.—Use a large envelope of good paper, so there will be room for change of address.

Mr. R. C. McHarrie, the new manager of the local branch of the Bank of Commerce, arrived in town yesterday morning.

Mr. Victor McWilliams' friends in town will regret to learn that he has been quite ill in Toronto for the last week.

Mrs Wm. Scott and Miss Emma Scott, of Lindsay, who have been spending Easter in town, have returned home.

Mr. J. A. Fife, of the Collegiate Institute staff, is taking a special course of study of a week's duration in the School of Mining, Kingston.

Mrs. Alex. Elliott has returned from Belleville, where she has been spending a few days as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Brignall.

Mr. A. L. Lawson, who has been confined to his room through an attack of la grippe, has sufficiently recovered as to be able to be up again.

Mrs. Richard Clegg, who has been spending several weeks in town as the guest of Mrs. J.B. Pentland and Mrs. S. Clegg, has returned to Ingersoll.

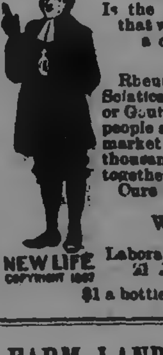
Mr. C. B. Butler left yesterday to take a position as steward on the North Shore Navigation Co's steamer City of Toronto, plying between Penetang, Midland and Parry Sound.

Port Hope Times: Mrs. W. Moise and Master Freddie Hatcher, Peterborough, are spending a few days in town, the guests of Mrs. W. A. Russell, John Street.

Lindsay Post: Miss McKee returns to her home in Peterborough this evening, after spending the Easter vacation very pleasantly at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Quinn, Sussex-st. north.

Corporation Work

As we have a town engineer the council should do away entirely with the system of doing public works by the corporation. All sidewalks, sewers, grading, etc., should be let by tender and constructed under the instructions and according to the city engineer's plans and specifications. Contractors will do it just as good and a great deal cheaper than by the town, when all the cost of supervising, etc., is added to that of material and labor. Let this be done.



"New Life"

Is the name of a medicine that we have never known a case of failure to cure.

Rheumatism of any form, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, or Gout. It has cured more people since it was put on the market one year ago than the thousands of remedies put together in twenty years.
Cure guaranteed.

WAR ONLY A FEW DAYS DISTANT

Pope Prays for Death or a Peaceful Solution

WAR CONTINUES IN CUBA

Awful Butcheries of Peaceful Cubans By Spanish Soldiers

At Matanzas, Where Two Hundred Americans are Now in Peril of Their Lives—Soldiers Make Human Targets of Concentradoes and Carry the Riddled Bodies Through the Streets as Boasts of Their Bloody Deeds

(Special to the Times.)

Washington, April 14.—A formal declaration of war may be looked for within the next few days; nothing but the ignominious withdrawal of Spain from the best of her possessions can avert it. It cannot be conceived that the Spaniards will yield without at least a short struggle, and advices from Spain show that the temper of the Queen Regent's subjects is distinctly warlike.

RAPIDLY MOVING TOWARDS WAR

New York, April 14.—Madrid and Washington have moved further on towards war, Madrid calmly, Washington with a mad plunge.

Spain's armistice seems to be making no headway.

Congress is sure to direct armed intervention. Spain will consider this a hostile act. All signs of peace have vanished.

The House of Representatives, after one of the most riotous sessions in its history, has desired the President to intervene at once.

Premier Sagasta's Cabinet has decided that the United States has no right to interfere in Spain's affairs.

The Foreign Committees of both Houses of Congress yesterday reported a resolution directing the President to use the land and naval forces against Spain.

The Senate will delay for several days for speech making, but will consider no other business until the matter is settled.

A semi-official note, issued at Rome, says that the European powers will be absolutely neutral in the event of war.

Spain is drawing up a protest to the powers against President McKinley's message.

General Lee's revelations regarding the fortifications in Cuba are considered very valuable.

General Blanco tendered his resignation when he received the news of the armistice, but withdrew it at Sagasta's request.

The Brazilian cruiser Nictheroy has been purchased by the United States and she is in negotiation for the purchase of Cunarder Lucania and the Kaiser Frederich, of the German Line. The impressment of the steamers St. Paul and St. Louis indicates that President McKinley considers war inevitable.

THERE MUST BE WAR.

Washington, April 14.—A member of the Cabinet, who has heretofore been very conservative in his opinions, said: "Whether the President tries to take advantage or not of the ambiguous character of the resolutions passed yesterday by the House there will be war. The Senate will not under any circumstances fail to back up the report of its Foreign Affairs Committee, which distinctly laid the blame for the Maine horror upon Spain. In face of this fact we have got to fight. The peace party must yield in the end."

A TALE OF HORROR.

New York, April 14.—A despatch from Key West states that the steamer Carevan arrived there this morning, having on board eleven American refugees, who fled from Matanzas and walked along the Cuban coast to Cardenas, a journey that occupied nearly four days, although scarcely sixty miles distant. The Carevan was lying at Cardenas when the refugees arrived and was immediately chartered. The fugitives were greatly exhausted as the whole neighborhood [illegible] with war it is feared that they may fall victims to Spanish hate and fury. In a desperate assault made on the Matanzas garrison by a band of insurgents it is stated that after driving the rebels from the town the Spaniards fired a number of buildings belonging to Americans, and several of the latter disappeared, their families being unable to find any trace of them. These facts have been represented to President McKinley and it is understood that he has directed a steamer to sail for Matanzas in the hope that the Americans may be rescued before the warcloud bursts over the Spanish coast.

[illegible] severely wounded [illegible] been made. Any reputable man can cure our treatment a reasonable time

Alexander Brice, United States consul at Matanzas, who with thirteen others, were obliged to flee for their lives, has written out a full statement of the facts for the President. In an interview with a Herald reporter Mr. Brice says that Matanzas is in a state of anarchy and that the soldiers are overriding all civil law. Speaking of his experiences, he says:

"Scenes of suffering and horror that I have witnessed during the last two years in Matanzas will haunt me all my life. I have seen the Spanish soldiers, regulars as well as guerillas, drive before them out of the streets of Matanzas unarmed and unresisting Cubans, on to the hills, and there use them as human targets. Then they would ride back with the bodies thrown across their horses, to parade the streets and boast of what they had done.

"I have seen more than eleven thousand Cubans and eighteen American families driven within the military lines of the city by the mounted offscourings of Spanish prisoners—'guerillas' and 'cavalry of Spain.' Of the the eleven thousand nearly all are dead. The eighteen American families were fed by me after my report on their condition had been read by the President to his Cabinet, and a fund was sent. The dead lay everywhere in the streets, and the dead were less revolting than the living.

"With the sending of relief came a lessening of the profits of these bodegas, and from that time they began to plot and threaten vengeance on the Americans. Time after time I was warned that they were plotting mischief, but I did not believe the danger real.

"With the arrival last week of the last ship load of more than four hundred tons of provisions from Kansas the climax seemed reached, and I was in nightly expectation of some attempt to destroy these stores. I turned them over to the British Consul, De Cocta, the night I left. They have not yet been distributed, and the British Consul may have difficulty in carrying on the work.

"I fear thousands more will be added to the 5,000 that have died in Matanzas Province since reconcentration."

TO INVADE CUBA.

Washington, April 14.—The Secretary of War is making preparations to invade Cuba. Senator Cullom says it is only a question of a few days when the Senate and House will agree on the resolution which will result in war.

MYSTERIES OF WAR.

Washington, April 14. — Secretary Long has issued an order directing that no movement of war vessels is to be given out. Instant dismissal is threatened for the violation of this order.

The Ways and Means Committee are now in session considering a bill to raise $150,000,000 for war purposes.

MARINE RISKS DOUBLED.

New York, April 14.—Marine war risks are double what they were yesterday on vessels for the coast of South America. Four per cent. is now asked against 2 per cent. yesterday. The volume of business is large, and some of the companies will not do business on vessels bound for Cuba.

POLO WILL LEAVE WASHINGTON.

Washington, April 14.—The Spanish Minister Polo has made final preparations for departure. When Madrid instructs him to leave, the French Ambassador will care for Spain's interests.

WASHINGTON FRENZIED.

Washington, April 14.—The action of the House of Representatives yesterday in adopting its declaration upon the Hispano-American situation made the Senate to-day the storm center of the war elements. The crowd flocked to the Senate gallariers at an early hour, and after 10 o'clock thousands were turned away.

THE POPE COURTS DEATH.

London, April 14.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily News says: The Pope is exceedingly upset by the latest developments of the Spanish-American question, which seems turning in a way he had tried to avert. This morning, having said mass in the Sistine Chapel, he turned to those around him and explained:

"I have prayed God with the whole force of my being and with the deepest fervor to avert this sad war, and not to allow my Pontificate to end in the smoke of battle. Otherwise, I have implored the Almighty to take me to Himself that I may not behold such a sight.

Those present say that the aged Pontiff spoke with such real emotion that his words deeply touched all. After mass the Pope and Cardinal Rampolla conferred together for an hour and then were joined by the Spanish Ambassador, who was the bearer of warlike news.

I learn that one of the projects of the Pope, if the chief obstacle to peace had been a refusal by the insurgents to accept an armistice, was to instruct the Bishop of Havana to send Capucine monks to preach peace and moderation to the people all over the island. The Pope has despatched to Emperor Francis Joseph, in answer to a telegram from his Majesty, a message in Italian thanking him for his kindness and for the way he had responded to the Pope's request.

The Pontiff begged him to make a last trial by using his good offices with the heads of other States to spare the world the horrors of war. As is patent to all, Leo XIII. has done everything humanly possible; but war is now considered almost upon us, even by the most optimistic.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. The Railway Committee Defeat the Bill for a Charter for a Bridge Over the Ottawa River Between Ottawa and Hull by a Vote of 35 for, to 60 Against.

(Special to the Times.)

Toronto, April 14.—Shortly before noon to-day a japanning mixture, containing turpentine, naptha and benzine, used by Fred. Dawson, aged 22, an employee of Henry LePage, washing machine manufacturer, at 25 Cunningham street, exploded.

Dawson, who was working in the second floor of the shed, threw the burning mixture downstairs, and, grasping Herbert LePage, his employer's seven-year-old son, who was playing around the shop, attempted to dash through the flames to escape from the burning building.

A second explosion of the material covered them both with flames.

The boy was almost burned to a crisp, while Dawson was dangerously, if not fatally, injured. He was taken to the Western Hospital.

An inquest will be held.

The fire destroyed $3,000 worth of stock and did $150 damage to the building.

MAJORITY 289

LIBERALS ELECT THEIR MAN IN WEST PRINCE AND TREBLE HIS LEAD OVER THE LAST VOTE.

(Special to the Times.)

Charlottetown, April 14.—Detailed and complete results in West Prince give D.B. McLellan, Liberal, 289 majority over Ed. Hackett, Conservative, the vote standing, Hackett, 1,525; McLellan, 1,814.

At the general election Hackett polled 1,572, Perry 1,499, and Yeo 343. When Hackett was unseated and the bye-election held on April 27, 1897, the vote stood: Perry, 1,579; Hackett, 1,493; Liberal majority 86.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

CONVICTS IN THE PENITENTIARY DEPRIVED OF SUGAR AND BUTTER, AS WELL AS TOBACCO.

(Special to the Times)

Kingston, April 14.—It is evidently intended to make the Kingston Penitentiary a place of punishment with all the meaning of the word.

After having deprived the convicts of their tobacco supply the order has gone forth they they be further deprived of sugar for their tea and butter for their bread.

The convicts find this dry fare, but what they get of it is wholesome and substantial.

OUR NICKEL MINES

IMPORTANT ACTION TAKEN AT OTTAWA YESTERDAY TO HELP ALONG DEVELOPMENT WORK.

(Special to the Times)

Ottawa, April 14.—The Private Bills Committee met to-day and took up the Nickel-Steel Co's. bill. Some of the clauses of the bill were held over from the last meeting for further consideration.

Mr. Wood, M.P., who has charge of the bill, was present. Along with him was Hon. J.M. Gibson, who explained to the committee the different points at issue.

One of the clauses held over was to permit the company to run railways from their mines to existing railways. This was granted. The bill was adopted.

BRIDGE BILL LOST

STRONG LOBBY AT OTTAWA WINS ITS FIGHT — TWO RAILWAY BILLS PASSED.

Ottawa, April 14.—The Railway Committee to-day defeated the bill for a charter for a bridge over the Ottawa River between Ottawa and Hull by a vote of 35 for to 60 against. There was a strong lobby put up against this bill by the Interprovincial Bridge Co., which is being built by Mr. Beemer, of the Quebec & Ottawa Electric Railway.

The cities of Ottawa and Hull were in favor of the bridge. The applicants did not want any bonus, while the Interprovincial Bridge Co. are getting $350,000 in subsidies.

The Edmonton & District Railway Co., for the construction of a railway from its connection at Athabasca River to the Nelson River, and thence by Nelson, Laird and Francis Rivers, to the navigable waters of Pelly River, was adopted by the Railway Committee.

The bill to permit the Lake Manitoba Railway & Canal Co. to amalgamate with the Manitoba & Southwestern Winnipeg & Great Northern and Manitoba & Southwestern was passed.

CARDINAL TACHEREAU.

In the removal of Cardinal Tachereau by death there has been taken away a prominent figure from the Canadian Ecclesiastical world. He gradually rose from the ranks of the common priesthood till he reached the highest position in his church in Canada. He confined himself mainly to his work within the commonly accepted church lines of effort, rarely projecting himself into the political arena, as an active participant in the strife.

COMMERCE AS A FACTOR IN THE PRESERVATION OF PEACE.

Time after time in recent years have the nations been seemingly on the point of war but have as often receded and war was averted. The main cause for the prevention of an open, armed conflict has, unquestionably, been the interests of trade. All civilised nations are linked closely together by commerce. These bonds cannot be broken between any two members in the sisterhood of nations, without considerable losses resulting to trade. The merchantmen of the belligerents are liable to be destroyed by their warships. Ports are blockaded, and thus neutrals are prevented having intercourse.

Suppose that war was going on between Spain and the United States, it would no longer be safe for a merchant vessel to leave any harbor in either nation. For once out of the reach of the protecting guns of the land forts they would be liable to be taken and their cargoes confiscated by privateers or regular war ships.

Spain would endeavor, by her ships, to prevent all ingress and egress to New York, Boston and Baltimore, the United States would do the same to the cities on the Spanish seaboard, in which case the usual trade of other countries would, with these ports, be seriously interrupted.

The shrewd men of business know of this injury and are hence against the breaking out of war. Their voices are not so loud as the clamor of the Jingoes who have nothing to lose by hostilities and expect some gain from the conflict. But the merchants of America are yet exerting a potent pacific influence on the President, the Senate and Congress.

The Emperor of China has been sending congratulations to the Emperor of Russia on the good relations established between them by the cession of territory. Referring to these courtesies the Montreal Witness says: "It suggests a pleasant-faced bear pausing to lick his chops and congratulate his victim on his sweetness and good sense in keeping quiet while being devoured."

The attitude of Toronto in respect to the Trent Valley Canal is only what we expected. Toronto, commonly known as Hogtown, is opposed to anything and everything that is not calculated in some way to contribute to its wealth. The Government regards the efforts of Toronto to injure our Canal as eminating from purely selfish motives, and will pay little attention to anything that Toronto may say or do.

The sad story of the Cuban reconcentrados' sufferings is too harrowing to become familiar or wearisome by iteration. In the consular reports of these horrors, transmitted with the President's message to Congress, all possible phases of misery, degradation and despair seem to be presented as though for the first time. Such piteous and heart-rending narratives of human wretchedness and agony are rare in the world's history, all crimsoned with cruelty though it be. It makes the smoothly-flowing American blood boil whenever the oft-told tale of anguish and death is repeated.

Peterborough town council and board of trade, alarmed by Toronto's condemnation of the Trent Valley Canal scheme, are about to arrange for another joint deputation to wait upon the government and urge its speedy completion.—Lindsay Post.

My dear boy, you are away out. Peterborough is not losing any sleep over anything Toronto may do to injure the prospects of the canal. If our contemporary really wants to know why we go to Ottawa about once a year, he should know that a jaunt in the spring of the year, after a weary winter's curling, is necessary to clear the system and put the blood in condition. Not only this, it affords an opportunity for our wives to do the housecleaning. Will our contemporary now take a tumble?

ATTENDED THE CONVENTION

Of the School Trustees Held in the Normal School, Toronto

Messrs. James Stevenson, ex-M. P., and Louis M. Hayes, delegates of the Peterborough Board of Education, attended the annual general meeting of School Trustees held at the Normal School in Toronto on Wednesday.

The proceedings were of a highly interesting character. The general management of schools, the engagement of teachers, modes of discovering their qualifications, and the duties of trustees generally formed the basis of discussion.

Mrs. Hoodlass, of Hamilton, delivered a practical address on the subject of domestic science and asked the trustees to take into consideration the question of instructing girls in the new duties appertaining to the home. This system, it appears, now forms part of the school curriculum in England and Germany and is being rapidly adopted throughout the United States. Mrs. Hoodlass explained that the present system of education is adopted solely to mental acquirements so that girls on leaving school as a rule have no knowledge or experience whatever of the management of a household.

It was suggested that Mrs. Hoodlass should be given an opportunity of placing her views before several of the school boards throughout the province.

It was noticeable that, except in a few instances, none of the Boards had adopted the system of yearly engagement of teachers in force in Peterborough. This subject was discussed at considerable length and the rule adopted by the Peterborough Board of Education seemed to meet with considerable favor and approval, and it is likely will be generally adopted by other Boards of Education.

CORNWALL CANAL AND RIVER REACHES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvements at Upper Entrance of Cornwall Canal and River Reaches" will be received at this Office until 16 o'clock on Saturday the 30th day of April, 1898, for the works connected with the widening, straightening and deepening of the Upper Entrance of the Cornwall Canal and the River Reaches between Cornwall and Coteau Landing.

Plans and Specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 15th day of April, 1898, at the Office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Cornwall. Printed forms of Tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $17,600 must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the condition requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of November, A. D., 1898, will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

A FAMOUS MULBERRY TREE.

Planted by Milton in Christ's College Gardens, Cambridge.

In the gardens of Christ's college, Cambridge, stands a venerable mulberry tree, which, tradition says, was planted by Milton during the time when he was a student at the university. This would be between the years 1624 and 1632, for the following copy, from the Latin of his entry of admission, accurately fixes the former date, and his admission to the degree of M. A., to which he proceeded in the latter year, ended his intimate connection with the university: "John Milton, native of London, son of John Milton, was initiated in the elements of letters under Mr. Gill, master of St. Paul's school; was admitted a lesser pensioner Feb. 12, 1624, under Mr. Chappell and paid entrance fee, 10s." He was then 16 years and 2 months old.

The tree so intimately associated with his name is now much decayed, but in order to preserve it as much as possible from the ravages of time many of the branches have been covered with sheet lead and are further supported by stout wooden props, while the trunk has been buried in a mound of earth. The luxuriance of the foliage and the crop of fruit which it annually bears are proof of its vitality, but to insure against accidents and perpetuate the tree an offshoot has been planted close by. In the event of a bough breaking and falling it is divided with even justice among the fellows of the college, and many pieces are thus preserved as mementos of the poet. It was during his residence at Cambridge that he composed his ode, "On the Morning of Christ's Nativity." "Lycidas," too, is intimately connected with Milton's life at the university, since it was written in memory of Edward King, his college friend and contemporary, with whom he doubtless shared the same rooms.

In those days students did not, as now, occupy separate apartments, as witness the original statutes of the college, "In which chambers our wish is that the fellows sleep two and two, but the scholars four and four," in consequence of which a much closer intimacy was formed among them than is now possible. Dr. Johnson relates that Milton was flogged at Cambridge, but the fact is doubtful, though there is reason to suppose that he had differences with the authorities in the earlier part of his college career, since he was transferred from his original tutor. This tree is still pointed out to visitors and was until recent years especially marked by a bough of mistletoe growing upon it.—Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper.

Poet and Queen.

Dr. Max Muller relates that the late queen of Holland frequently came to England and was fond of meeting while there distinguished literary people. On one occasion she lunched with Dean Stanley and asked him to invite several literary men, among whom were Tennyson, Lord Houghton, Huxley and Max Muller himself.

Luncheon was ready, and everybody had come to the deanery except Tennyson. Dean Stanley suggested that the party should wait no longer, but the queen refused to sit down before the laureate's arrival. There was another period of waiting, painful to all the company.

Finally some one suggested that probably Tennyson was "mooning about in the cloisters somewhere." One was sent to see, and the poet was indeed found there, apparently oblivious that anything was going on. He was brought in and placed at the table next the queen of the Netherlands.

The queen took the conversation into her own hands and in particular tried to draw Tennyson out. He was not in talking mood. She addressed him a question.

"Yes, ma'am," he answered.

Then there was another question.

"No, ma'am," came from Tennyson.

Again she asked his opinion about something. The question was not susceptible of answer by "Yes" or "No."

"Ma'am," said Tennyson after a great effort, "there is a great deal to be said on both sides of the question."

Presently he turned and whispered to Max Muller, "I wish they had put some of you talking fellows next to regina."

Anglo-Saxon Common Sense.

I had occasion at Coolgardie to be present at a public meeting gathered to protest strongly against the actions of the Western Australian government with regard to the mining population and the insufficiency of its political representation. Several speakers held forth. One declared that he was neither democrat nor socialist, another that he was a democrat, but not a socialist; a third at last professed himself a socialist. Sometimes groans, sometimes applause, underlined certain phrases, but in the midst of these gold miners, in this town but three years old, in spite of the relaxing influence of a torrid heat, the most perfect order reigned throughout. Thanks were voted at the end of the meeting to all the speakers without distinction of opinion, a motion of protest was adopted, and the crowd retired in the greatest tranquillity. I thought, not without shame, of the manner in which meetings of this kind are often conducted in France.—"Les Nouvelles Societes Anglo-Saxonnes," Pierre Leroy-Beaulieu.

THE BEAUTIFUL.

Wrinkled and old are those hands of hers,
Hard and full of the seams
Of labor and the years,
Knotted the knuckles
And creased and crinkled
The skin on the backs of them.
Dark veined and large,
With splotches of brown
Between the drawn tendons,
As if seared by tears,
Thick the nails and blunted,
Rough and with little ridges
Running the length of them,
Callous the palms
And lacking all pinkness and prettiness.
Old are those hands of hers,
Wrinkled and hard.
But, oh, what a story of Infinite tenderness
And love
Could they tell,
Those hands of a woman
Whose threescore years and ten
Have been passed in doing the good
That women do!

THINKING ALOUD.

A Ruse Which Roused Lord Dudley and Formed a Friendship.

One of the earls of Dudley, who was addicted to the practice of thinking aloud, found himself in a very awkward predicament on a certain occasion, if a story told of him may be credited. He was to spend the evening at the house of a friend and ordered his carriage early, as he had a long drive back to his own home.

When the hour arrived, the carriage was not forthcoming. Seeing that Lord Dudley was considerably annoyed by the delay, one of the guests, whose way homeward lay past his lordship's house, politely offered him a seat in his carriage. The gentleman was almost a stranger to Lord Dudley, but the offer was accepted.

The drive did not prove a very sociable one. Lord Dudley took his seat and immediately relapsed into silence, his thoughts apparently engrossed by some unpleasant subject. Presently he began to speak in a low, but distinctly audible tone of voice, and his companion, to his astonishment, heard him say:

"I'm very sorry I accepted his offer. I don't know the man. It was civil certainly, but the worst is I suppose I must ask him to dinner."

Silence followed this bit of audible thinking. His lordship was unaware that he had betrayed his thoughts and was probably still meditating upon the same unpleasant subject when the voice of his companion broke the stillness.

Apparently this stranger was afflicted with the same malady from which his lordship suffered, for he exactly imitated Lord Dudley's tone as he said:

"Perhaps he'll think I did it to make his acquaintance. Why, I would have done the same to any farmer on his estate. I hope he won't ask me to dinner, for I shan't accept his invitation."

Lord Dudley's abstraction was all gone. He listened to the other's words, immediately comprehending the joke against himself, and frankly offered his hand to his companion, making many apologies for his involuntary rudeness.

The stranger proved magnanimous, and from that night the two became fast friends.—Youth's Companion.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

FRENCH SUSPICION.

IT HAS PLAYED AN IMPORTANT PART IN THE COUNTRY'S HISTORY.

In France the Element of Suspicion Has Reached the Preternatural and Is No New Thing—How It Influenced the Actions of Robespierre.

At all the great crises of French life the element of preternatural suspicion has played an important part. Like some mischievous Puck it hovers over the land, whispering doubts here, misgivings there, converting the whole nation into mouchards, whose business it is to set a watch on their neighbors day and night. We have such a profound admiration for many qualities of the French people, such a sincere belief in the necessity of a powerful French factor in the complex mesh of modern civilization, that we can afford to bring this charge of undue suspicion against France as a whole. No student of French history can fail to see the confusion it has wrought. It is not the growth of yesterday, but it is almost as evident in the memoirs of the France of the seventeenth century as on the Paris boulevards at the present moment.

It pervaded the court and the official classes in the time of Richelieu, it was constantly present in the mind of Mazarin when negotiating with Cromwell, and it is visible all through the pages of the memoirs of De Retz. This spirit of preternatural suspicion naturally attained its climax in the French revolution, when, for the first time, the monarchy was involved in its infinite entanglements.

From the moment when the national assembly met at Versailles to the day when Napoleon was banished to Elba universal suspicion filled the air and dictated the cruel aspect of French policy. The queen was, of course, suspected, and justly, in political matters, and perhaps it was not altogether unreasonable that the suspicion in which she was enveloped should have attached to her weak but perfectly honest husband, who was assumed to be absolutely under her fatal influence.

The attack on the Bastille was animated not merely by memories of the past, not in the least because of actual cruelties at the time, for there was none, but mainly because it was suspected that the Bastille was to be utilized as an armed fortress to overawe Paris. The day of the "black cockades" and the march of the Maenads (to use Carlyle's graphic phraseology) were due to excited suspicion. The assembly had scarcely organized itself before the demon of suspicion spread its dusky wings over that body, and Mirabeau and Barnave, at first popular idols, became suspected of intrigue with the court. The vigorous personalities who came to the front all suspected one another. To them the famous warning which Benjamin Franklin addressed to the founders of the American republic, "Gentlemen, we must hang together or we shall hang separately," would have been useless. They could not hang together, and they did hang, or were guillotined, separately. It was Danton's suspicion of an aristocratic plot which caused the September massacres. It was pure suspicion that created the most revolting and unjust of all the revolutionary excesses, the tribunal of Fouquier-Tinville. Danton in his turn was suspected and fell.

We may, of course, justify the suspicion of Dumouriez, but what possible explanation can be given of the suspicion of the harmless astronomer Bailly, with his precisian virtues, who paid with his head for the dangerous folly of meddling with things he did not understand? It was obviously a question of war to the knife between Jacobin and Girondin, for each took an absolutely different view of both foreign and internal politics; but why could not the struggle have been confined to party warfare within the walls of the convention? Why was it necessary to decimate the Girondin chiefs? The only answer that can be made is that suspicion had grown to such a pitch that the very existence of Girondism was considered incompatible with the security of the republic. Men had become frenzied, insane, through constant spying on one another's actions and perpetual attempts to fathom one another's inward thoughts, and the "law of suspects" was simply a formal expression of national craziness. That way madness lies. In the person of Robespierre preternatural suspicion attained its most complete incarnation. His feline nature was ever on the dart for its prey. He could not hear a good word said of any man but he instantly began to revolve in his mind the question as to whether there were not some concealed motive in the praise. The shout of triumphant relief which reverberated over France when Robespierre's head fell into the basket marked the break of the straining point of that suspicion which had created and sustained the terror. When we remember that but for an accident Carnot would have fallen a victim to Robespierre's suspicions and that this suspicious disposition had led a man of sentimental virtue to become a wholesale murderer, we can understand that feeling of relief.—London Spectator.

EDWIN BOOTH

The Great Tragedian Was Possessed of a Keen Sense of Humor.

Booth had a keen sense of humor, and among his intimates he was anything but the sad and gloomy man whom the outside world associated always with the character of the melancholy Dane of the stage. His published letters show how bright and cheerful he was usually in his familiar correspondence, and the following rhyming epistle is worth printing here as an example of his not infrequent efforts in that peculiar line. It came with an engraved portrai neatly framed:

XMAS EVE, '78.

DEAR H.:

Think not that I forget,
Or that because the walkin's wet
Is why I haven't called as yet
Fumer la pipe, ou cigarette,
In your sanctum sanctorum.
'Tis but because I have to fry
Some other fish before they're dry.
This only is the reason why
My friends I do not bore 'em.
So, since I can't aller ches vous,
This deadhead I present in lieu
Of the one which here I shoulder,
Hoping this, too, may likewise call
Before the New Year learns to crawl
Or the old one grows much older.
But I know not, dear Hutton,
If you'll care a button
For this mug o' my own that I send,
Though 'tis told me as truth
(May be flatt'ry, forsooth)
By some who are judges
That this very mug is
By far the best phiz
Of your friend
EDWIN BOOTH.

P. S.—You may spurn it, or dern it,
Or dash it, or dang it, or burn it,
Or mash it by puttin yer fut on.
Do anything—rather than hang it,
If you don't like it, dear Hutton.

—Laurence Hutton in Harper's Magazine.

The French Peasant.

The French peasant has an independent means of existence. He owns the soil he tills. If he employs laborers, they at least will own a house and garden and hope to own a plot. The English villager is either a small tradesman or a laborer. A garden which he cultivates but does not own is, as a rule, the extent of his possessions. There are two classes in an Engish village, and these may be subdivided into various religious sects. There is only one class in our French commune—a fact which has a material bearing upon the social economy of the community. Every inhabitant of the commune is a proprietor of something, and all are bent on saving; yet, with all their individualism, they combine for common and mutual interest. This is illustrated by the organization of the syndicate for buying at wholesale prices. They unite for the cultivation of the soil, lending each other horses and making up teams. Every commune has a field, which is common property and where, on payment of a trifling fee, animals graze. After the harvest all the fields become common property, and the gros betail and the other betail are allowed to roam at large.—Contemporary Review.

Bismarck of Jewish Descent.

Few people are aware that Prince Bismarck is of Hebrew descent. He derives his Jewish blood from his mother, whose father—Anastasius Menken, one of the favorite bureaucrats of Frederick the Great—was of Hebrew parentage. Although of late it has evidently appeared politic to the prince to countenance the anti-Semitic movement both in Germany and Austria, yet while in office he invariably showed himself a good friend to the Jewish nation and chose the Hebrew banker at Berlin, Baron von Bleichroeder, as his most trusted confidant. Indeed, in those days he was so well disposed toward the Jews that he even discussed the advisability of marrying his sons to Jewesses on the ground that it would bring money into the family again and likewise "improve both morally and physically the Bismarck breed."—International Review.

SONG AND SEQUEL.

"Long lane without a turning,
But—keep the end in sight!
Far off the fires are burning
Like beacons in the night.

"Far off the bells are chiming!
Away with sigh and tear!
The hill was hard in climbing,
But the summit's cool and clear!

"The sun'll rise tomorrow
And all the dark destroy.
So, leave the house of sorrow
And clink a cup with joy!"

(That's what the poets sing us—
They'd have us be content—
But all the songs they bring us
Don't settle up the rent,

And all the bright suns rising
In sweet tomorrow's skies,
With golden beams surprising,
Don't make the biscuits rise!)
—Atlanta Constitution.

A WAUWINET WOOING

Miss Leila Hamilton was the chief stenographer in the banking office of Harrison Bros., State street, Boston. She directed the feeding of six other typewriting machines, and she kept her subordinates busy from morning until afternoon.

Miss Hamilton was not only invaluable to her employers. She was also of great use to her sex, in whose emancipation she was most vitally concerned.

Miss Hamilton was, in fact, a fair specimen of the "new woman." Her great ambition was to see woman, in the full possession of the ballot, rising on great billows of reform until all the sins of wicked man were swept away in one great tidal wave of feminine votes.

But Miss Hamilton was a very attractive young woman. She possessed large and lustrous blue eyes, which looked steadily and straight into the eyes of others and gave birth to new sensations in the hearts of the wicked men.

In short, Miss Hamilton had all the appearance of being a pretty, happy, guileless chorus girl while she was at heart a combination of Miss Susan B. Anthony and Dr. Mary Walker.

"This year, when my summer vacation comes," she told one of her colleagues, "I am going omewhere where I can rest and where I won't be troubled by men. I have discovered an ideal place at Wauwinet, on Nantucket. It's a little neck of land, and on one side is the surf and on the other the still water. It is out of the terrible rush, and there are a great many women there, and as far as I know not one single man. If that is not a paradise, I do not know what is."

Thus it happened that Miss Hamilton landed at Wauwinet, where she peacefully established herself for three weeks of uninterrupted rest. Miss Hamilton was greeted by a little bevy of women who wore spectacles, had little red cases at the ends of their noses and were plain in their dress and in general strict in their appearance.

"We are so glad you have come," they exclaimed in a chorus, "and it is so nice to have one so young and girlish looking interested in the great cause!"

Miss Hamilton had made only one mistake in her catalogue of the advantages of Wauwinet. As it happened there was a fine old mansion, which had been recently purchased by a party of bachelors from New York city. Here they had established themselves for their first season. Thus it happened that there were really 20 single men instead of none at all when Miss Hamilton made her first appearance.

Miss Hamilton rose early after a fine night's rest. She enjoyed with equal zest her breakfast. Then she started out for a ramble along the beach. She looked down toward 'Sconset, saw the soaring tower of Sankaty light and trudged toward it as a magnet draws its iron.

This brought her past the clubhouse, where, all unknown, she became an object of great interest.

"Gad, Charlie, just look there," called Billy Hills from the reading room, "and don't go too near the window or you will scare her! But, Jove, isn't she a rare bird for Wauwinet? She is the first good looking girl I have seen since we arrived."

"Guess I'll take a little stroll," quietly observed Davy Holmes. "Think I need a little exercise."

"No, you don't!" a half dozen voices objected. "You are too well known. You may disgrace yourself in New York as much as you like, but here we want to be respectable." So "Davy" subsided and bided his time.

A howling northeasterly storm had cut the neck of land on which Wauwinet stands in two pieces. This breach occurred at the spot which had always been called the "Haulover," because it was the narrowest spot where the fishermen hauled their boats over to the other side. It was now called the "Opening" and was growing wider and wider.

Miss Hamilton began at once to harden her muscles by rowing and had rented a small skiff for the season. She came to this opening and, little realising the danger when the tide was running, she boldly rowed up to it and suddenly found herself carried along toward the open sea by a power as unmanageable as it was imperceptible.

This was on the evening of her first day. Charlie Harris had seen her set out and was slyly following, unseen, behind the hedge of bayberry which grew along the footpaths of the neck.

He thought at first that Miss Hamilton handled the oars in a manner which would be creditable to an amazon. He was quite as ignorant as Miss Hamilton herself of the great danger in which she rowed.

But as Miss Hamilton approached the broad opening which leads to the great ocean she became alarmed. She saw Harris and for a moment forgot her prejudices by calling for help.

It took less than a minute for Harris, somewhat lighter by the clothing he had hastily taken from his back, to reach the boat. Miss Hamilton had forgotten his sex. At the same time she forgot her prevailing opinion of his kind. Her heart swelled with gratitude as he took the oars.

But Charlie Harris was unable to cope with that tide, and the boat and its two occupants went sweeping along faster and faster until it was among the heavy breakers of the sea.

It chanced also that Charlie had himself been observed, and a party of a dozen young gentlemen were soon seen to be making hasty efforts to launch a big boat. Then Charlie perceived a party of his friends making good progress toward his boat.

His feelings were somewhat mixed. His desire to be saved was divided with the hope that he might have the honor of saving Miss Hamilton alone. He was disappointed, however. The little boat was brought alongside, and the pair was transferred safely and brought to shore.

Then Charlie noticed his own condition and quickly fled without further conversation. Miss Hamilton also came to her senses and started for the hotel without a word.

She said nothing about her adventure to the array of severe matrons who lined the piazza as she approached, and, eating her supper as quickly as possible, she joined the group, which was busily discussing the propaganda of their cause and the campaign which was to be waged for the emancipation of women. Somehow the old subject had lost some of its savor to Miss Hamilton. She talked less and seemed to have lost her animation.

Charlie Harris was also suffering in a different way.

'We are going to apply to the lifesaving service, old man," said Reggie Bowles, 'for a situation here to rescue pretty girls in the summer, but I'm afraid you'll not be cap'en, Charlie."

Each one had a little jibe until it was too hot for Charlie. He went to his room and dressed for evening. It was born in him that he owed Miss Hamilton an apology. At all events it made an excellent excuse.

As Charlie approached the hotel he noticed Miss Hamilton, and he quietly cursed to himself when he saw her surroundings. Miss Hamilton also noticed him, and her color deepened. It was just this moment that she began to hate the "cause."

"I beg pardon for interrupting," he said, "but I should like to speak to you, Miss Hamilton."

The entire company rose as if governed by the same impulse and departed with elevated noses. Miss Hamilton and Harris had the place to themselves.

At the departure Miss Hamilton found to her surprise that she had actually accepted an invitation to visit Sankaty light the next day.

When the two departed the next morning, there was a wave of dismay in the camp of the woman suffragists.

"It is a most disgraceful proceeding, and she is no longer respectable," declared the leader of the crowd, and her opinion was regarded as final.

Miss Hamilton was no longer troubled by their society. Strangely enough she was no longer concerned over the degraded condition of woman.

* * * * * * * *

When Miss Leila Hamilton returned to the old office on State street, she was discovered to be as charming and girlish as ever, and it was also noticed that certain callers whom she had been wont to receive came no more.

It was further chronicled that there were other things about Miss Hamilton which were new and strange. When the postman came and a letter was handed to her—an event of three or four times a week—Miss Hamilton would turn a little pale and quickly hide it in her waist.

A month later these events had their explanation when Miss Hamilton came to the office with a sparkling object on her engagement finger, and the venerable senior partner received her resignation to take effect soon.—Boston Globe.

Comets to Appear.

The London Globe says that a number of comets will appear in the skies during the year 1898. "The Pons Winnecke comet should open the list by appearing in April, after an absence of about 5½ years. In May the celebrated Encke comet is due. This comet has a period of only 8¼ years, and its frequent reappearance has been the means of astronomers discovering a great deal about comets and their wanderings through space. In June we should have two of these cosmical visitors—Swift's and Wolfe's comets—the former after an absence of six years and the latter a trifle longer. Temple's comet completes the visitors' list by arriving in September. These comets are all regular visitors, whose periods are so well known that their arrivals may be timed almost to the hour. Others, no doubt, will arrive, but they will doubtless be casuals, of whose antecedents nothing is known, and most of them such small fry as to catch the attention of only the most assiduous observers."

De Lesseps Statue.

M. Fremiet has finished the head of the enormous statue of the late Comte Ferdinand de Lesseps which is to be placed at the entry of the Suez canal. The canal projector is to be represented standing, covered with an Arab burnoose, and pointing toward the new waterway opened up to navigation. On one of the sides of the pedestal—which is to have a granite foundation—will be a medallion containing the portraits of the khedives who patronized the canal.—Boston Transcript.

Seeing Oneself.

Next to the power of standing outside oneself and looking at me as other folks see me the most remarkable is this of (by the insight of genius and imagination) becoming you. The first makes one sometimes only too reasonable, too humble; the second warms the heart and enriches the soul, for it gives the charm of selfhood to beings not ourselves.—Jean Ingelow.

A Croup Cure

is what many a mother is looking for; something absolutely safe and reliable, that will disarm her terror of that dread rattling, strangling cough, so fearful to the mother, so fatal to the child. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a croup cure that can be relied on. Thousands say so.

MRS. W. J. DICKSON ("Stanford Eveleth") writes from Truro, N. S.:—

"That terror of mothers, the startling, croupy cough, never alarmed me so long as I had a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house."

"We have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in our family for years. Once when our boy had a severe attack of croup, we thought that he would die. But we broke up the attack by using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."

An Ex Convict's Work

When Constable Parkinson, of the Dominion Police, who is working on the Norwood burglary, was here he expressed a belief that the man who was captured by Mr. Pearc and is in gaol here, was an ex-convict and had done a term before. The following from the Ottawa Free Press shows that Constable Parkinson has satisfied himself as to the identity of the prisoner: "Major Sherwood this morning received a telegram from Dominion Constable Parkinson, who is at Norwood, Ont., to the effect that the man arrested for robbing the Norwood post office, and who gave his name as McDonald, has been identified as the notorious Eddie Johnston, who about fourteen years ago, with his brother Charlie and a pal, stole a safe from a Montreal establishment and took it out on the ice, where they blew it up. For this offence the Johnstons were sentenced to thirteen years in St. Vincent de Paul, and about a year ago secured their liberty.

"Charlie Johnston is thought to be implicated in the Norwood robbery, also, but he cannot be found. Both Johnstons are well known to the older members of the Ottawa force."

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 15 1898

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

The Nagle Estate.

It appears The Times was misinformed when it stated that Mr. Harry Phelan had resigned his position as manager of the estate of the late Mr. Richard Nagle. Mr. Phelan will, we are pleased to say, continue to act as managing executor, a position which his manly, honorable and business-like qualities eminently qualify him to fill.

New Power Company.

Mr. J. H. Brandon, of Fenelon Falls, who is interested in the new Light and Power Company that proposes to furnish Lindsay with light and power, was in town yesterday, and says the scheme is a big one, and will at once be carried into effect. The new Company will "harness" Fenelon Falls, and thus have ample power to dispose of in Lindsay for manufacturing purposes. The Company also expect to secure the contract for lighting the town, and will also take over the light plant at Fenelon Falls. The firm of which Mr. Brandon is a member will be large holders of stock.

Railway Notes

—Acetylene gas is succeeding well as an illuminant for railway trains. A plant has been installed on the government car Cumberland, and it will be of interest to railway engineers to know that the locomotive headlight generator makes the run from Ottawa to Montreal on two pounds of carbide, costing three cents per pound wholesale.

—The rate war still seems to be a pretty good thing for the two leading Canadian railways, judging from reports of earnings. The Grand Trunk's earnings for the week were $470,965, an increase of $42,130 over 1897, while those of the C.P.R. were $448,000 an increase of $69,000.

DROPPED DEAD ON THE STREET

Very Sudden Death of Mr. Robert Elliott, of Town

While Mr. Robert Elliott was on his way home to dinner yesterday, and when opposite the Spot Cash Grocery Store, he suddenly staggered and fell. Mr. Martin and one or two others who saw him fall ran to his assistance and carried him into the grocery Dr. McCullough, who was dining in the Grand Central Hotel, was with the deceased in a couple of minutes but it was too late, as the poor fellow was dead. Dr. Halliday was also sent for and arrived soon after.

Mr. Elliott was employed at the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company's foundry, and was a general favorite.

The cause of death is stated to have been heart failure, although the deceased was not known to have been affected in any manner or unhealthy in any way. Whilst walking up from the foundry with Mr. David Harper he complained greatly of a pain in his chest, but did not apprehend that there was anything seriously wrong with himself.

The deceased was 27 years of age and was a son of the late Jas. F. Elliott, of Smith. He moved into town with his mother, brother and sister about a year ago, since which time he has been employed by the Peter Hamilton Co., and has been living with his mother at No. 19 Union St. The other surviving members of the family are Wm. F. Elliott, Quebec; Mrs. F.M. Thompson, Montreal; Mrs. (Rev.) F.A. Leitch, Gorham; J. J. Elliott and Miss Eva Elliott of town.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 p.m. Sunday.

Mr. Elliott was a most exemplary young man and a great favorite with his companions. His widowed mother and relatives will have the sympathy of the community. He was a member of L.O.L No. 41, Emily.

Will Get a Medal.

Last week, says the Campbellford Herald, a gentleman of Peterborough wrote to the editor of this paper asking as to the truthfulness of the statement made in a late issue of a little dog saving another from drowning in the river. When the affidavits are made out of persons who witnessed the act, the owner of the dog will be awarded a medal.

Undermined

Yesterday the roadway just east of the Simcoe-st. bridge in front of the Phelan House gave way showing a big hole in the ground covered over by only a foot or two feet of road. The high water of the creek a couple of weeks ago had washed through the stone wall intended to confine it and had undermined the road so that while the surface appeared perfectly secure it was only hiding the space below. The earth gave way without pressure, showing that it had been undermined.

All Advertisements Must Go.

It has been declared by the authorities of the Grand Trunk railway that all advertisements of patent medicines and other notices must be cleared out of the waiting rooms at all stations along the line, and nothing will be allowed to be put up except railway time tables and notices of special rates, etc. It has been suggested that in the place of these advertisements the Grand Trunk should hang up framed pictures of natural scenery of principal points along the line.

Close Season for Fish.

It should be borne in mind that pickerel is protected by the fishery regulations of the government from the 15th day of April to the 15th day of May, so that the close season for these fish is now on. Bass and maskinonge are protected two months—from the 15th of April to the 15th of June. Pike may be taken at any time. There is no change in the season for brook trout, the open season commencing on the 1st of May. Poachers using lights and spear in Crow Bay this season may find it expensive work if they operate as freely as they did last year.

BIG FIRE IN MILBROOK

The Grand Trunk Station and Other Buildings Destroyed

Millbrook, April 14.—Millbrook was visited with a fire this morning, which destroyed the Grand Trunk station, Mr. Needler's flour store house, and the large granary owned by Mrs. James Gardiner, and occupied by Capt. C. H. Winslow.

It was about one o'clock a.m., when the fire, which seemed to originate in the grain house, occupied by Mr. Winslow, was first noticed. At this time the entire building was a mass of flames. The alarm was quickly given, but by the time the firemen got on the spot the fire had spread to the store house of Mr. Geo. Needler, in which there were stored three car loads of flour, ready for shipment, and to the lumber yard belonging to Mr. William Thexton.

The station house, which was situated immediately across the railroad track from these buildings, also fell a victim to the flames, and owing to the inflammable nature of the structure, all attempts to save it proved fruitless.

The efforts of the firemen were then turned toward saving the neighboring buildings, the large piles of lumber which were going like matchwood, and also the contents of the station house. All freight, office papers, furniture, in fact everything that could be moved, with the exception of the safe, was taken out.

When the station was still in a mass of flames, Station Agent Cochrane telegraphed to Lindsay for an engine to move a large number of box cars that were in danger of being consumed and it was not long until engine No. 375, in charge of Driver Sandy Laidlaw, came rolling in, having made the thirty miles in exactly thirty minutes.

The losses are about as follows: Geo. Needler, $2,000 worth of flour, on which there is $1,000 insurance, also the building, insurance not known; C.H. Winslow, about 4,000 bushels of wheat, partly covered by insurance; W. Thexton, 500,000 feet of lumber, partly covered by insurance. The insurance on Mrs. Gardiner's grain houses, if any, is not at present known. The G. T.R. station house is a total loss.

A number of cattle that were in the cattle yards close by were liberated in time to save them from a horrible death.

The station house was rebuilt only a few years ago, and was quite an up-to-date one. This morning as the traveller is passing through he finds nothing but blackened ruins on either side. The cause of the fire is unknown but it must certainly have been the work of a "firebug."

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Interesting Items of Local and District Happenings in Brief

—The Gun Club shoots this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

—The Legal and Street and Bridge committees of the town council met last night and transacted some routine business.

—The banquet in connection with the boys' branch of the Y.M.C.A. takes place this evening at 6.30. All members of the branch are invited.

—Every bit of rubbish and garbage you remove from your premises is enjoyed by your neighbor as well as yourself. It is to be hoped that no one will suffer the disgrace of being fined for keeping filthy premises.

—The residents on George street, between King and Sherbrooke, are complaining about the mud scrapings being left on the sides, and also that no street sprinkling is done, though adjacent blocks were well watered.

—A small sized English boy, of dark dark complexion, without coat, strayed away from a Mr. Tyrell, in Ops township. He was of the Dr. Barnardo variety, and his "owners" are looking for him.

—Vegetation is beginning earlier than it did last year, as some of the perennials are an inch above ground, and the lilacs willows, elms, soft maples and other trees are bursting the bud and expanding their leaves.

—The other day a farmer's wagon collapsed in a strain caused by contact with the street railway track. By the side of the driver was a deaf mute. Both men were thrown out, but sustained no injury. The speechless man then picked up a hub and —spoke.

—The new chairman of the roads and touring committee of the C. W. A. has made arrangements to have sign boards placed on roads all through the country. A certain firm has agreed to supply the boards for the privilege of advertising goods on a portion of the space.

—Port Hope Guide: The East Durham License Commissioners have decided to rigidly enforce the laws against the sale of liquor during prohibited hours. And such determination will certainly be upheld by public sentiment. There is no reason why proper respect for the law should not be enforced by all the machinery at the disposal of the commissioners.

—Mr. Chas. McCormick, of Peterborough, won second prize in the Wire-hair Fox Terrier puppy class at the Toronto Dog show with his Aldon Vixor, Tommy. As the dog which took first was also the winner in the challenge class, Mr. McCormick certainly did well to run him so close with Aldon Vixor. "Mac" sold one dog for $40 recently, and was offered, we are told, $50 for Tommy.

POND'S EXTRACT

PHILADELPHIA,
Dec. 29, 1894.

I have used "Pond's Extract" for many years and always insist upon my patients getting "Pond's," not the ordinary Extract, which is often a very poor article. W. K. BROWN, M. D.

PHILADELPHIA,
Jan. 9, 1895.

I use Pond's Extract a great deal in my practice. I think it very valuable in all venous enlargements.

J. L. BRADFORD, M. D.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL.,
Nov. 27, 1894.

I have been using Pond's Extract in my practice for twenty years. I frequently have the experience you mention of druggists insisting they can put up as good as yours. I don't believe it. I use Pond's Extract a great deal as an antiseptic in combination with glycerine and carbolic acid. I think it far superior to any antiseptic known.

F. G. FLOURNOY, M. D.

COLUMBIA, PA.,
Jan. 18, 1895.

I have been a constant user of Pond's Extract since 1852, and do not expect to discontinue it while I live. S. ARMOR, M. D.

CHELSEA, MASS.,
Nov. 8, 1894.

I have made diseases of the skin a specialty for thirty years, and am free to say I know of no remedy that has given me such perfect satisfaction as Pond's Extract in cases for which it is recommended.

G. W. BABCOCK, M. D.

ASTHMATICS' INSTITUTE,
Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 8, 1894.

I know Pond's Extract to be a valuable remedy, and shall continue its use whenever the opportunity offers.

GEO. H. CALKINS, M. D.

NEWARK, N. J.,
Dec. 13, 1894.

I am pleased with the purity and strength of Pond's Extract.

J. L. DURYEE, M. D.

POND'S EXTRACT is used by the leading physicians and principal hospitals of America and Europe.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 15 1898.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

The Nagle Estate.

It appears The Times was misinformed when it stated that Mr. Harry Phelan had resigned his position as manager of the estate of the late Mr. Richard Nagle. Mr. Phelan will, we are pleased to say, continue to act as managing executor, a position which his manly, honorable and business-like qualities eminently qualify him to fill.

New Power Company.

Mr. J. H. Brandon, of Fenelon Falls, who is interested in the new Light and Power Company that proposes to furnish Lindsay with light and power, was in town yesterday, and says the scheme is a big one, and will at once be carried into effect. The new Company will "harness" Fenelon Falls, and thus have ample power to dispose of in Lindsay for manufacturing purposes. The Company also epxect to secure the contract for lighting the town, and will also take over the light plant at Fenelon Falls. The firm of which Mr. Brandon is a member will be large holders of stock.

Railway Notes

—Acetylene gas is succeeding well as an illuminant for railway trains. A plant has been installed on the government car Cumberland, and it will be of interest to railway engineers to know that the locomotive headlight generator makes the run from Ottawa to Montreal on two pounds of carbide, costing three cents per pound wholesale.

—The rate war still seems to be a pretty good thing for the two leading Canadian railways, judging from reports of earnings. The Grand Trunk's earnings for the week were $470,995, an increase of $42,190 over 1897, while those of the C.P.R. were $448,000 an increase of $69,000.

DROPPED DEAD ON THE STREET

Very Sudden Death of Mr. Robert Elliott, of Town

While Mr. Robert Elliott was on his way home to dinner yesterday, and when opposite the Spot Cash Grocery Store, he suddenly staggered and fell. Mr. Martin and one or two others who saw him fall ran to his assistance and carried him into the grocery Dr. McCullough, who was dining in the Grand Central Hotel, was with the deceased in a couple of minutes but it was too late, as the poor fellow was dead. Dr. Halliday was also sent for and arrived soon after.

Mr. Elliott was employed at the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company's foundry, and was a general favorite.

The cause of death is stated to have been heart failure, although the deceased was not known to have been affected in any manner or unhealthy in any way. Whilst walking up from the foundry with Mr. David Harper he complained greatly of a pain in his chest, but did not apprehend that there was anything seriously wrong with himself.

The deceased was 27 years of age and was a son of the late Jas. F. Elliott, of Smith. He moved into town with his mother, brother and sister about a year ago, since which time he has been employed by the Peter Hamilton Co., and has been living with his mother at No. 19 Union St. The other surviving members of the family are Wm. F. Elliott, Quebec; Mrs. F.M. Thompson, Montreal; Mrs. (Rev.) F.A. Leitch, Gorham; J. J. Elliott and Miss Eva Elliott of town.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 p.m. Sunday.

Mr. Elliott was a most exemplary young man and a great favorite with his companions. His widowed mother and relatives will have the sympathy of the community. He was a member of L.O.L No. 41, Emily.

Police Court

Three boys and a girl were in the Police Court yesterday charged with being disorderly. The boys were fined $2 each and the girl was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Lost.

A small pocket book, containing three notes, a locket and 56 cents in change. The finder will be suitably rewarded by leaving it at the Times Bookstore.

The Teacher's Union

The Primary Teachers' Union meets this evening at 8 p.m. in the primary class room of the George-st. Methodist church. A cordial invitation is extanded to all those who teach children from five to fifteen years of age to join with them in the study of God's Word, and the discussion of practical topics pertaining to the Christian training of little children.

How to Cure All Skin Diseases

Simply apply "Swayne's Ointment." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for Swayne's Ointment. Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Avoid substitutes.

Will Get a Medal.

Last week, says the Campbellford Herald, a gentleman of Peterborough wrote to the editor of this paper asking as to the truthfulness of the statement made in a late issue of a little dog saving another from drowning in the river. When the affidavits are made out of persons who witnessed the act. the owner of the dog will be awarded a medal.

Undermined

Yesterday the roadway just east of the Simcoe-st. bridge in front of the Phelan House gave way showing a big hole in the ground covered over by only a foot or two feet of road. The high water of the creek a couple of weeks ago had washed through the stone wall intended to confine it and had undermined the road so that while the surface appeared perfectly secure it was only hiding the space below. The earth gave way without pressure, showing that it had been undermined.

All Advertisements Must Go.

It has been declared by the authorities of the Grand Trunk railway that all advertisements of patent medicines and other notices must be cleared out of the waiting rooms at all stations along the line, and nothing will be allowed to be put up except railway time tables and notices of special rates, etc. It has been suggested that in the place of these advertisments the Grand Trunk should hang up framed pictures of natural scenery of principal points along the line.

Close Season for Fish.

It should be borne in mind that pickeral is protected by the fishery regulations of the government from the 15th day of April to the 15th day of May, so that the close season for these fish is now on. Bass and maskinonge are protected two months—from the 15th of April to the 15th of June. Pike may be taken at any time. There is no change in the season for brook trout, the open season commencing on the 1st of May. Poachers using lights and spear in Crow Bay this season may find it expensive work if they operate as freely as they did last year.

BIG FIRE IN MILBROOK

The Grand Trunk Station and Other Buildings Destroyed

Millbrook, April 14.—Millbrook was visited with a fire this morning, which destroyed the Grand Trunk station, Mr. Needler's flour store house, and the large granary owned by Mrs. James Gardiner, and occupied by Capt. C. H. Winslow.

It was about one o'clock a.m., when the fire, which seemed to originate in the grain house, occupied by Mr. Winslow, was first noticed. At this time the entire building was a mass of flames. The alarm was quickly given, but by the time the firemen got on the spot the fire had spread to the store house of Mr. Geo. Needler, in which there were stored three car loads of flour, ready for shipment, and to the lumber yard belonging to Mr. William Thexton.

The station house, which was situated immediately across the railroad track from these buildings, also fell a victim to the flames, and owing to the inflammable nature of the structure, all attempts to save it proved fruitless.

The efforts of the firemen were then turned toward saving the neighboring buildings, the large piles of lumber which were going like matchwood, and also the contents of the station house. All freight, office papers, furniture, in fact everything that could be moved, with the exception of the safe, was taken out.

When the station was still in a mass of flames, Station Agent Cochrane telegraphed to Lindsay for an engine to move a large number of box cars that were in danger of being consumed and it was not long until engine No, 375, in charge of Driver Sandy Laidlaw, came rolling in, having made the thirty miles in exactly thirty minutes.

The losses are about as follows: Geo. Needler, $2,000 worth of flour, on which there is $1,000 insurance, also the building, insurance not known; C.H. Winslow, about 4,000 bushels of wheat, partly covered by insurance; W. Thexton, 500,000 feet of lumber, partly covered by insurance. The insurance on Mrs. Gardiner's grain houses, if any, is not at present known. The G. T.R. station house is a total loss.

A number of cattle that were in the cattle yards close by were liberated in time to save them from a horrible death.

The station house was rebuilt only a few years ago and was quite an up-to-date one. This morning as the traveller is passing through be finds nothing but blackened ruins on either side. The cause of the fire is unknown but it must certainly have been the work of a "firebug."

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Interesting Items of Local and District Happenings in Brief

—The Gun Club shoots this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

—The Legal and Street and Bridge committees of the town council met last night and transacted some routine business.

—The banquet in connection with the boys' branch of the Y.M.C.A. takes place this evening at 6.30. All members of the branch are invited.

—Every bit of rubbish and garbage you remove from your premises is enjoyed by your neighbor as well as yourself. It is to be hoped that no one will suffer the disgrace of being fined for keeping filthy premises.

—The residents on George street, between King and Sherbrooke, are complaining about the mud scrapings being left on the sides, and also that no street sprinkling is done, though adjacent blocks were well watred.

—A small sized English boy, of dark dark complexion, without coat, strayed away from a Mr. Tyrell, in Ops township. He was of the Dr. Barnardo variety, and his "owners" are looking for him.

—Vegetation is beginning earlier than it did last year, as some of the perennials are an inch above ground, and the lilacs willows, elms, soft maples and other trees are bursting the bud and expanding their leaves.

—The other day a farmer's wagon collapsed in a strain caused by contact with the street railway track. By the side of the driver was a deaf mute. Both men were thrown out, but sustained no injury. The speechless man then picked up a hub and —spoke.

—The new chairman of the roads and touring committee of the C. W. A. has made arrangements to have sign boards placed on roads all through the country. A certain firm has agreed to supply the boards for the privilege of advertising goods on a portion of the space.

—Port Hope Guide: The East Durham License Commissioners have decided to rigidly enforce the laws against the sale of liquor during prohibited hours. And such determination will certainly be upheld by public sentiment. There is no reason why proper respect for the law should not be enforced by all the machinery at the disposal of the commissioners.

—Mr. Chas. McCormick of Peterborough won second prize in the Wire-hair Fox Terrier puppy class at the Toronto Dog show with his Aldon Vizor. Tommy. As the dog which took first was also the winner in the challenge class, Mr. McCormick certainly did well to run him so close with Aldon Vizor. "Mac" sold one dog for $40 recently, and was offered, we are told, $50 for Tommy.

Going to the Klondyke

The Salvation Army are sending six officers out to establish a branch of the Army in the Klondike. These officers will appear in Klondike costume at the barracks here this evening.

Navigation Notes

—The steamer Sunbeam will run a trip to Stony Lake to-morrow, leaving Lakefield on arrival of morning train, and returning in time to connect with the 4.20 p.m. train.

—H.H. Gildersleeve, Manager of the Bay of Quinte and Lake Ontario Navigation Company, has issued the usual spring circular. The North King is scheduled to arrive at Port Hope on her first trip on Monday, May 2, at 9 o'clock. The steamer will leave Kingston at 5 o'clock on Sunday, May 1, for Charlotte.

DELAYING ACTION TO GAIN TIME

The War Cloud Growing Darker Every Hour

WILL SIGN WITHIN AN HOUR

President Will Not Show to the World a Divided House

Consul-General Lee Has Been Honored With the Command of the Virginia Volunteers Spain is Making Rapid Preparations for War—the Defences of New York Harbor Completed—The Report That the Power Would Intervene Denied

A special despatch received at the Times office at one o'clock this morning from Washington says that war is only a few hours distant and that even this short respite is due to a desire on the part on the United States to gain time for war preparations. Every hour counts in the playing of the deep game of war and to-day the the fighting forces of these two countries will have formal liberty to fly at each other's throats. The President says that whatever resolution meets with the approval of both Houses will receive the executive signature within an hour after it reaches the White House. He has no idea of exhibiting before the world a Government divided against itself.

EVERYTHING POINTS TO WAR.

New York, April 15.—There are signs of delay in Madrid and Washington, but no signs of peace in either place. From Madrid comes the news that the Queen Regent has signed a decree for the convocation of the Cortes on Wednesday next. This indicates a desire for further delay, but while Madrid waits the war tone rises. General Weyler has arrived there. General Pratt, in full uniform, met him at the station. He was outspoken for war. He said he had offered his services to the Queen. Spain's Cabinet has decided to address a note to the powers and the subject of the note will be the attitude assumed by the United States.

Sagasta's paper openly accuses President McKinley of intending to annex Cuba. All over Spain there is excitement.

There is much discontent at the Washington Administration for not being aggressive enough.

While Spain mumurs and prepares to act the United States Senate is talking. Five speeches were made yesterday and twenty more are on schedule. The Senate, however, will stay in session to-day until the Cuban matter is decided.

Senator Foraker says that his amendment recognizing the Republic of Cuba will be passed.

Senator Bryan is at work with the Democrats and an effort is being made to show that the Democratic party is the party favoring Cuban independence. The Republican leaders in the Senate are hard at work to prevent the recognition of independence. The President does not want it. The Democratic Senators predict that the House will fall in if the Senate recognizes an insurgent Government.

It is said that European powers are arranging to take more vigorous steps at Washington towards securing peace.

Fighting continues in Cuba and the "armistice" is a farce. Reports received in London say that the danger of revolution is so great in Spain that the Queen Regent has determined to sacrifice her Ministry in order to preserve the dynasty.

There is some danger that Weyler will attempt to seize the Government.

NEW YORK IMPREGNABLE.

New York, April 15.—A despatch from Washington says: A large batch of naval assignments were made to-day. Senator Hanna was an early caller at the White House and was with the President for some time.

The War Department announces that the defense of New York Harbor is virtually complete. The electric wire connections are made, the mines are laid, the torpedoes are in place and the guns on the fortifications have been mounted.

A FEW HOURS WILL SETTLE IT.

Washington, April 15.—Forty-five Senators have signed an agreement to vote on the Foraker resolution and it is said the vote will be taken before adjournment of the Senate to-night.

WAR ELEPHANTS SECURED.

Washington, April 15.—The Department to-day received word from a circus company that in the event of war 25 elephants would be put at its disposal for active service in Cuba. Some of these animals have served in India and neither swamps nor underbrush in Cuba would interfere with their utility.

SPAIN'S WARNING NOTE.

London, April 15.—A special despatch from Madrid published this afternoon says: The note to the powers will review the whole Cuban question, pointing out that all the trouble with the United States arises through the clamor of the sugar manufacturers, who it is claimed, fomented and organized the entire revolt, attention will be recalled to the alleged unmolested American filibusterings, and it will be asserted that the chief insurgent leaders are not Cubans, but adventurers of all nationalities, whose sole purpose is plunder and robbery.

The concessions made by Spain will enumerated, and the note will point out that while Spain has done everything possible to pacify the island, the consuls of the United States, it will be alleged, have constituted themselves insurgent agents, and the statement will be made that when autonomy promised the desired result an American squadron was sent to Cuba to encourage the insurgents to hold out. These contentions, it is added, will be supported by documentary evidence which, it is alleged, will prove the bad faith displayed throughout by the United States towards Spain.

The note to the powers will conclude with declaring that Spain, having exhausted every means of peace, is "reluctantly compelled to prepare for war and to fight for the maintenance of its rights and honor."

GENERAL LEE HONORED.

New York, April 15.—The President has decided to give Consul-General Lee the command of the Virginia volunteers in the event that hostilities break out between the United States and Spain. This decision on the part of the President, says a Washington Correspondent, was reached after a conference with Secretary Alger and a number of other military men. When the call is issued, Virginia, General Lee's State, will furnish her quota, and the President will designate General Lee as the commander of the forces from the Old Dominion. A member of the Senate proposes to introduce a special act, under which the President may appoint General Lee Major-General of volunteers.

BRINGERS OF GOOD NEWS.

We all know what Shakespeare says about the first bringer of unwelcome news. On the other hand how thankful we are to the first bringer of good news. Be sure there is never any "sullen bell" sound from his tongue thereafter. Not to our ears at any rate.

Why only the other day, being in among the docks, I happened upon the identical steamer that carried my wife and me on our wedding tour. She (the boat, I mean) is getting old now, and I couldn't help noticing that some repairs and a coat of paint would have improved her looks; but there! explain it as you may, I stood on the deck one mortal hour feasting my eyes on the venerable craft, and letting my fancy dwell on the day of days when one other person and I crossed the sea on board of her, with Youth at the prow, and Happiness at the helm.

So it is with us all everywhere The value and interest of things are largely determined by the principle of association. If I should, for example, come upon a paragraph in a certain newspaper to-morow morning, saying that a distant and hitherto unknown relative had died and left me a large fortune you can lay odds on one thing—I should subscribe for that paper the balance of my life; yes, even if it was dead opposed to my ideas on politics.

That's why I think Mr. Frederick Plank will always have a warm spot in his heart for the paper that brought good news to him; not about money but something of greater importance.

"In August, 1890," he says, "I took a severe chill on the kidneys, and had excruciating pain at the loins and back I soon began to feel weak and heavy and had difficulty in getting about. My appetite was bad, and after meals I had fulness at the chest, and a horrible pain at the pit of the stomach.

"I had difficulty in passing the secretion from the kidneys, and often it was of the colour of blood. In a little time I became so weak I was obliged to give up my situation, and was treated by a doctor at Bath. He said I had an acute attack of Bright's Disease. He gave me medicine, but it relieved me only for a time and then I was as bad as ever.

"Now better, now worse, but never properly well, I continued until June of last year (1896), when I had to abandon my work entirely My condition was now very serious, and I was so weak I had to sit in a chair all day long. being unable to stand or walk.

The secretion was now the color of ink and mixed with sand, and I was in pain all over me. I wasted away as you might say, to nothing, and none thought I would get better Then I had a Bath physician attending me but got no better.

"In November, 1896, I read in a paper The Messenger of Health, of a case like mine being cured by Mother Seigel's Syrup. I got a bottle of this medicine from Mr. King, chemist, Twerton, and after taking it experienced much relief. My appetite came back food agreed with me, and I had less pain

"I followed on with it, and soon all the pain at the kidneys left me, and the secretion was natural. When I had taken four bottles I was in sound health, and have since kept well. Beyond a doubt Mother Seigel's Syrup saved my life, and I wish others to know of it You may publish this statement and refer anyone to me. (Signed) Frederick Plank, 21 Brougham Hayes, Tiverton, Bath, April 5th, 1897."

Surely in this case the Messenger of Health deserved its name, as it was indeed a messenger of health to Mr. Plank. Now, if the reader will ask his chemist for any one of the multitude of certain little books that are scattered all over the country (free for the asking), he will learn exactly how and why Mr. Plank was cured by Mother Seigel's Syrup after all other medicines had proved so useless and disappointing; for a full explanation would be too long and complicated to give here. Yet the principle of it is plain and easy to understand.

Meanwhile, let us appreciate and encourage all bringers of good news—people and papers. No question but the page on which you read this will turn out to be a messenger of health to somebody.

HAVANA MINE PLANTER

Said to Have Been Run To Earth in Chicago

E. ESCARDO UNDER ARREST

Says He Laid the Mine That Blew Up the Battleship Maine

Charles A. Crandall, alias Emanuel Escarao Escardo, Under the Personal Orders of Capt-General Weyler, Planted the Mines and Torpedoes

(Special to the Times.)

Chicago, April 15.—The Times-Herald says: "Charles A. Crandall, alias Emanuel Escarao Escadaro, who, acting under the personal orders of Captain-General Weyler, planted the mines and torpedoes in the Harbor of Havana, has been run to earth in Chicago. Last night he was in the custody of three United States Secret Service agents, who are taking him to Washington, where he is expected to give information to prove, beyond any possible doubt, that the Maine was blown up by a mine, and her 266 officers and crew murdered designedly by agencies known to the Spanish officials. He was run down by a Cuban spy. Ever since the Maine disaster Crandall, or Escadaro, has been dodging about the country. When the United States Secret Service agents assured him he would be protected, he volunteered to accompany them. Crandall's statements are substantiated by letters in his possession from Weyler's officers and from Weyler himself. His story is as follows:

CRANDALL'S STORY.

"My name is Charles A. Crandall I am an American by birth and formerly lived in New York City. I served in the United States navy on the cruiser San Francisco, under Captain Sampson and Admiral Brown. It was while in the United States service that I made a study of mines and torpedoes.

"I left the navy and went to Lima, Peru, where I entered the employ of Grace & Company, of London, England, in the nitre beds. While at Lima I met many Spaniards. One of them, Emil L. Castillo, an agent of the Spanish Government, induced me to go to Cuba as an expert on coast defence for General Weyler. I was given free transportation to the island and when I arrived there I met Antonio Marco Diaz, who assigned me to harbor work and plotting for torpedo and mines anchorage.

LAYING TORPEDO MINES.

"I began laying the mines and torpedoes early in the spring of 1896, and finished about a year later. My work was performed at night. I was assisted by five Italian laborers and two Spanish boatmen. In all seventeen mines and ten torpedoes were placed. The mines were made in England and the torpedoes in Italy. The work of laying them was very slow, because it was ordered that I should not work on moonlight nights. When my work was completed, I made a chart showing the location of all the mines and torpedoes, and submitted it to General Weyler. I was directed to place three mines and seven torpedoes in the Harbor of Matanzas. This was completed early in last July. When I had finished General weyler ordered me to place an additional mine near buoy No. 4, which made a complete chain of mines about the harbor from side to side, from the mouth of the harbor to the last anchorage. When I went to the palace General Weyler asked me if it were possible for a ship to enter the harbor or leave it with the chain of torpedoes and mines there. I showed him my rough chart, and he personally directed several changes.

THE FATAL MINE.

"When my work was done and his artillery aids had approved the plans, he handed me my passport to Key West and assured me that I would receive pay until the first mine or torpedo was used. I remained in Havana until February 10, when I went to Key West, where I stayed until March 3, on which date I received my last Spanish gold from Havana, from a Spanish messenger. After the Maine was blown up I kept in hiding with a colored family near Fort Taylor, and as I received word to skip out I left a stowaway on the first steamer for Miami. The Maine was anchored at the identical buoy where General Weyler ordered me to place the additional mine officially known as buoy No. 4."

All of the evidence has been turned over to the United States Secret Service agents, and will be used at Washington.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 16, 1898

G. T. R. MISMANAGEMENT

Mr. E. P. Hannaford's suit against the Grand Trunk has uncovered a disgraceful misapplication of the company's money. The evidence brought in against Mr. Hannaford shows that he was in the habit of using railroad employes to work about his house while they drew pay from the Grand Trunk coffers. Edward Belanger, for example, testifies that he has so worked for Mr. Hannaford for six months in the year for the past five years, in the kitchen, in the garden, shaking carpets, shovelling snow, ets. He was always paid by the Grand Trunk Railway, and never by Mr. Hannaford. Nine other witnesses gave similar testimony. Joseph Dandurand, a carpenter, even asserted that in January 1896, two car loads of lumber were removed from Grand Trunk Railway sheds to Mr. Hannaford's private premises. The lumber was afterwards recovered by order of Mr. Hobson. Hannaford's counsel intend to produce evidence to show that Grand Trunk officials were in the habit of using the railroad employes on private work.

THE COMING WAR

We in Canada naturally know less of what the people of Spain are thinking about the impending war with the United States than of the opinions of our neighbors. But it can hardly seem possible that they appreciate the situation if they deliberately go to war with the American Republic. The end of such a strugggle cannot be in any real doubt. The American people have on their side a wealth and a power of recuperation that the Spaniards have not known for many a year; and, though the results of the meeting of the first line of battle cannot be predicted, the Americans must win in the long run. It is a pity that under such circumstances the people of Spain should march to certain disaster. Their utter failure to subdue the Cubans after a war which by its length and brutal cruelties has worn out the patience of civilization, shows how futile will be their task when they come to fight Cuba supported by the United States. And to wage a hopeless war for the privilege of harrying an oppressed and tortured population, is an act neither of prudence nor high spirit.

It is improbable that civilization will be willing to have the Atlantic highway, long disturbed by war. Once the Americans have secured control of Cuba and the rescue of the Cuban population, which is the chief purpose of the war, is complete, the trading nations which use the Atalntic as the ancient world did the Mediterranean, will be excused if they dmand that commerce be made free again upon its bosom. Spain will in any case complain loudly at the loss of her colony; but the sufficient answer will always be that the loss was self-inflicted; for years been demonstrating her inability to govern with humanity and success. Were Cuba as near to Britain as the Channel Islands, it is safe to predict that the Cuban war, with its starvation of non-combatants, would have been stopped long ago.

Apparently peace can only be secured now by Spain. The Americans have gone too far to recede, unless the freedom of Cuba be granted. A candid friend would advise Spain to grant this without burning any gunpowder over it; but, unfortunately a proud nation which has passed through the experiences that have fallen to the lot of Spain during the last few years, is not usually very open to the advice of candid friends. There will be a sincere hope here for a speedy and thorough victory for the nation that is fighting oppression and carrying succor to the suffering victims.

If the war is inevitable, let 'er come; we repeat it, sir, let come. We're too old to be drafted.—Oil City Blizzard.

For a generation the world has been waiting to see what naval war will mean under the new conditions of torpedoes and high epxlosives. If Spain is any better than China there is about to be an object-lesson.

Mr. Tarte in Le Patrie, favors a scheme of senate reform by which the government, in an emergency, would have power to appoint a sufficent number of senators to carry a government measure which the senate opposes. But the senators are appointed for life, and must be paid. Wouldn't Mr. Tarte's scheme be rather expensive? Would it not be better to give the government power to hire a certain number of men to act as senators only for the purpose which they would be hired for? Lots of men would consent to vote as senators for a dollar a day.

Paine's Celery Compound, the World-famed Spring Medicine, Gives Mr. Ducharme a New Lease of Life.

This is the Trade Mark of the Kind That Cures---Look for the Name "PAINES" and the Stalk of Celery---Refuse All Substitutes and Imitations

GENTLEMAN:—For a long time I was subject to spells of weakness that rendered me quite unfit for work. At such times my nervous condition was very alarming, and I felt as if my life was coming to an end. My sufferings were increased owing to violent attacks of rheumatism, and altogether I was as helpless as a child. Friends strongly advised me to use Paine's Celery Compound, as they had seen such grand results from its use. I used the Compound, and the results were astonishing and happy. Paine's Celery Compound has done for me what the doctors failed to do. It has made me active and strong, able to work every day, and has given me a new lease of life. Every sick, weak and broken-down man woman should use Paine's Celery Compound; there is nothing like it in the world.

Yours truly,

CORNWALL CANAL AND RIVER REACHES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvements at Upper Entrance of Cornwall Canal and River Reaches" will be received at this Office until 16 o'clock on Saturday the 30th day of April, 1898, for the works connected with the widening, straightening and deepening of the Upper Entrance of the Cornwall Canal and the River Reaches between Cornwall and Coteau Landing.

Plans and Specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 15th day of April, 1898 at the Office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Cornwall. Printed forms of Tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $17,000 must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the condition requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of November, A. D., 1898, will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

AN INDIAN CRADLE SONG.

Swing thee low in thy cradle soft,
Deep in the dusky wood!
Swing thee low and swing aloft—
Sleep as a papoose should,
For safe in your little birchen nest
Quiet will come and peace and rest,
If the little papoose is good.

The coyote howls on the prairie cold,
And the owlet hoots in the tree,
And the big moon shines on the little child
As it slumbers peacefully.
So swing thee high in thy little nest
And swing thee low and take the rest
That the night wind brings to thee!

Father lies on the fragrant ground,
Dreaming of hunt and fight,
And the pine leaves rustle with mournful sound
All through the solemn night;
But the little papoose in his birchen nest
Is swinging low as he takes his rest,
Till the sun brings the morning light.

—Southern Workman.

THE DERELICT.

BY CHARLES B. LEWIS.

I was second mate of the American brig Ruby, bound from Java to New York, and all had gone well with us for a fortnight, when accident brought about a curious adventure. Just as night was closing down, with the brig sailing along on an even keel and the breeze steady, I swung myself upon the rail to get a look at what seemed to be a raft floating past us. I may have been overcareless or a rope may have given way, but of a sudden I found myself in the water. The man at the wheel witnessed my mishap and gave the alarm and threw me the life preserver always ready for such an emergency, and I had no doubt of being picked up within ten minutes. I had seized the float, when down thundered a black squall from out of the west, and next moment it was as dark as midnight and the sea all in a chop. I felt that it was all over with me then. The men would be lucky to bring the brig through the fierce squall without thinking of me. Indeed, if she had had 100 men on board instead of 12, they would not have dared to lower a boat. I got just one glimpse of the craft as she shot away into the darkness and then began to work to get the life preserver under my arms. I was buffeted and knocked about in the most confusing manner, and had the squall lasted five minutes longer I should have been drowned on the surface. It passed away as suddenly as it came, and ten minutes later the sea had calmed down, and I was floating with my head well out of the water.

I had gone overboard at about 7 o'clock in the evening. For the first three hours my hope and fears made me alert, but by and by I felt a dull languor and was only half conscious of what was going on. An hour after midnight I was suddenly aroused from what seemed to be a troubled dream. I was bumping against something hard, and my first idea was that I had been cast ashore. It took me several minutes to shake myself together and make out that I was alongside the hull of a vessel. It was hard to credit the fact, but fact it was, and when I realized it I had scarcely more to do than lift up my hands and seize the low rail and draw myself inboard. I had found a derelict brig. Both masts were gone close to the deck, much of her bulwarks swept away, and I knew by the feel of her that she was waterlogged. I took one glance over her and no more, but dumped myself down on the deck and was asleep in five seconds. When I opened my eyes, the sun was an hour high, and a big albatross was poised directly above me and not 50 feet high. It did not take me long to master the details of the wreck. In the first place, she was loaded with Australian redwood and could not sink beyond a certain point; but she had been floating about for months and months. There was some wreckage on her decks, but masts and yards and boats and booms had gone clear off her as they fell. She had settled down until her scupper holes were only a few inches above water, but owing to the buoyant cargo she could not sink deeper. As a sailor I made her out to be a French craft, and later on I discovered that she was the Marie of Brest. She was a small craft, carrying a crew of eight or nine men, and was a forecastle ship instead of having a deckhouse for the men. The caboose or cook's galley had gone overboard with the rest, but the doors of the cabin and the scuttle to the forecastle were tightly closed. The brig had been wrecked aloft in squall or gale and had at the same time sprung a leak. Whether her crew had been washed overboard or taken to the boats there was no means of telling until I had made an investigation below.

The first thing was to get something to eat and drink. After a few minutes' work I broke open the cabin doors and got into the pantry. There was wine in plenty, as might have been expected, and I soon came across some meat and biscuit in tins. I wanted water, but there was none to be had, and so, taking what I could lay hands on, I went on deck and made a fair meal. When this had been concluded, I returned to the cabin for an overhaul. All the charts and nautical instruments were there, nor had any of the spare clothing of captain or mates been taken away. I found the logbook, and though I could not read French I made out the latitude and longitude last recorded. As near as I could figure it out the brig was then midway between Australia and the Cape, and the date was nearly seven months old. She had drifted to every point of the compass, but must have drifted nearly 2,000 miles to the north to reach the spot where I found her. It was noon before I began an examination of the lazarette to see how I should fare for provisions. I found flour, wines, table waters, preserves, boxes of biscuit, choice bacon, codfish and other articles in liberal quantity—enough to last one man for months. Forward of the cabin I found a storehouse, in which were several barrels of beef and pork, with four barrels of coarse flour, dried fish, beans, coffee, tea and other articles of food for the men. Forward of this were the water casks, a dozen or more, and all full. When I came to examine the forecastle, I found boots, oilskins, sou'westers and other belongings of the crew, to prove that they had not gone away in the boats. Indeed I was sure before I had half concluded my investigation that every man had perished when the brig was wrecked. It was night before I had finished, and I tumbled into the captain's berth and never slept more soundly. You may think it queer that during the day I had scarcely glanced around the horizon and given no thought to rescue, and that I went to bed with a contented mind, but sailors are prone to take luck as it comes, good or bad. I had made a miraculous escape and was fairly safe on the wreck, and there was nothing to worry over if not taken off for weeks. Interested as I was in overhauling the stranger, I would not have tossed up a penny to be taken off by a passing vessel.

When morning came again I made a more thorough investigation of the cabin. In rear of the captain's stateroom I chanced upon a closet which had escaped me the day before, and here I made a great find. There was about $1,000 in French gold and notes, $1,200 in English goldpieces and exactly $7,000 in goldpieces just struck off at the Australian mints. The money was in two tin boxes, but whether it belonged to the ship, her captain or to other people I could not determine. It was a big fortune to a poor sailor, and I remember that I acted very foolishly over the find. I counted it over and over again, and when I at last realized that I was rich I rushed on deck, with a wild hope of seeing a sail close at hand. But for the money I believe that the long days and nights which followed would have been rather contentful for me, isolated as the situation was. I had plenty to eat and drink, there was nothing to break my sleep, the wreck might drive where she would, but there was no danger of her going down. The discovery of the money was followed by a hope of rescue, and this again by worry and anxiety. I wanted to go ashore to enjoy my wealth. I feared that when rescue did come I should be robbed. I conjured up a thousand senseless fears, and the upshot was anything but beneficial. I have spoken of the general situation in a careless way. As a matter of fact, being a navigator, I took observations regularly when the weather permitted and pricked off the drift of the wreck on the chart. On the average the weather was fine, but there were days and nights when gale and sea tumbled the waterlogged craft about until only a sailor could have lived through it. Instead of lifting her the waves ran over her, and at such times the decks were two feet under water and the cabin was flooded. The cargo was afloat with the water in the hold, and as the wreck rolled and pitched the timbers rubbed together and produced noises which would have frightened landsmen into fits.

I kept an accurate reckoning, and I had been on the wreck just 49 days when I caught sight of my first sail. No doubt ships had passed and repassed me by day and night, but I could set no signal by day and from the first I slept all through the night. This sail was discovered early one morning, coming up from the south, and her course was such that she must see me. I had put the money into bags and the bags into bundles of clothing in view of a rescue, and therefore had nothing to do but wait. The stranger, which proved to be an English merchantman bound for India, but considerably off her course, was within four miles of me and had set a signal to gladden my heart when a big whale suddenly broke water close to the wreck. He was followed half a minute later by a second, which attacked him with great fury. The monsters put up a terrific battle, lashing and biting each other and kicking up a sea like a gale of wind. They at first drew away from me, but after a few minutes made a circle which brought them back. What I had feared from the first came to pass after a quarter of an hour. Half blinded by pain and fury, or feeling itself overmatched and desirous of getting away, one of the whales suddenly whirled about and came for the wreck head on. He was fully 80 feet long, and he came like a moving mountain. I made sure of my hold as I saw him coming, but he struck the wreck on her port side with such force that I was thrown across the deck and into the sea beyond. I heard the crash of planks and timbers. was tossed about by the waves, rubbed against the whale as he sounded and reached the surface to find the wreck a hull no longer. It was simply a heap of floating debris. The strange ship drew nearer, lowered a boat, and I was picked up as I clung to a plank. The money was gone, all else but the timbers which composed the cargo had disappeared, and my adventure, surprising as it had begun, had ended in a manner strange enough to satisfy even the most imaginative novelist. I was carried to India by the rescuing ship, and I know that the French consul at Calcutta set inquiries on foot regarding the fate of the crew of the Marie. What they amounted to I never learned, but have always felt satisfied that all perished when their craft was dismasted. But for the fight between the whales I believe the brig could have been pumped out and sailed into port, but fortune is a jade who robs Jack Tar far oftener than she smiles upon him.

Jinks—What! You don't mean to say you are engaged to the beautiful Miss de Pink?

Blinks—Yes, I do. Got engaged to her last night. This afternoon I am to bring her into town. She wants to go to an optician's, I believe. New pair of glasses or something. She is nearsighted, you know.

Jinks—I say, old fellow, just slip round to that optician's and bribe him not to give her any better glasses than she has.—London Tit-Bits.

NOT EASY TO ESCAPE.

AVERAGE CRIMINAL PRACTICALLY SURE TO BE CAUGHT.

Conscience the First and Greatest Aid of the Detectives — Letters, Indiscretions, Carelessness, Any or All of These May Cause Betrayal.

On the evening after the capture of a man for whom the police had been hunting for several months a party of men who had met by chance in a cafe began to discuss the case, and one of them said that he was positive that, under similar circumstances, he would have fooled the detectives and escaped.

"Maybe you'll tell us how you would escape if you had committed a crime," said the first speaker. "We'll make up the crime, and you'll tell what you would do. Let's take a robbery and an easy one. Suppose you went from your office to Jones' here. Jones knows you as a respectable man. You see on his desk a bundle of bank notes. Say there is $20,000 in the package. Lots of people are entering the office and walking past the desk. Jones' attention is diverted. You pick up the bank notes and slip them into your pocket. No one sees you do it. You chat with Jones for a few minutes, bid him good day and walk out of the office. We'll give Jones 15 minutes to discover his loss. You know that 50 people have had a chance to steal the money, and that you are one of the last who will be suspected. Now, what would you do?"

"It seems to me that the case you make out is altogether too easy," said the self offered criminal. "I should do absolutely nothing except attend to my everyday business in my everyday way. On leaving Jones I would walk out of his office, speaking to the men whom I knew, and then I would go to my own office, put the money in an envelope and lay the envelope on my desk as though it was of no particular value. I would work until my usual hour to go home came, and then, after dinner, I would come down here and see you fellows. I would not vary the routine of my business or social life. Probably the newspapers of the next day would contain long accounts of the mysterious theft of $20,000, with a hundred guesses as to the identity of the robber. If they did, I would drop in on Jones, tell him I was sorry for his loss and ask him if I could help him in any way. He would bewail his loss and maybe might borrow a few thousand of me to tide him over.

"I would leave the $20,000 in my desk. I would not touch it. I would let it kick around. I would talk of the robbery with my friends, but not too much. I would say that I hoped the robber would be caught, but I would be careful not to be too talkative about the case. Jones would send for the police and all of his clerks would be examined. The detectives would look wise, talk about outside and inside jobs, round up a few well known sneak thieves and have Jones look at them. The matter would die out after awhile. After a few months had passed I could spend the money and my theft would never be suspected."

"Your theory is all right except for one thing," said a man who had listened attentively to the conversation. "You forget that you are made of flesh and blood. If you were cut out of a block of wood, you'd get away splendidly. But the moment you got that money in your pocket your fear of detection would become so great that your knees would knock together. Even if you controlled yourself until you had finished that chat with Jones you speak about so lightly, which I don't think you would be able to do, the strain would exhaust you so that you would go to pieces when you got to your own office. You also speak of letting the money kick around. You couldn't do it. That little package of bills would grow to a mountain. Your nerve would fail you if it lay on your desk. Knowing it was there, you would be in a panic lest some one should find it. If you put it away in a vault, the whole thing would weigh on you. You'd dream of the stuff. Your nerve would give way. You would betray yourself in a fortnight."

"All that you say about self betrayal is true," said the man who started the conversation, "and there are other things to be considered. Jones would have talks with the detectives. He is now a healthy minded man who believes all his friends are honest, but in his conversations with the policemen he would hear about robberies of mothers by their children, of husbands by their wives and of dozens of cases where intimate friends had stolen from the houses of their associates. His mind troubled by his loss, he would be constantly on the lookout for a plausible explanation of the mystery. At first he would declare that neither you nor any other friend could have taken his money. Then, as he thought of the stories he would hear from the detectives, he would begin to think it possible that some one he trusted as a friend had committed the theft.

"He would get into a condition in which he would suspect every one, and after awhile he would give your name with those of all the other men he saw on the day of the robbery. Then a detective would call on you. He wouldn't take into account that you were a respectable man or anything of that kind. Unless you have more nerve than any one I know, his interview would shake you some, and you can be sure that he would see any break you made. Then the rest would be easy. You would be caught either by a blunder of your own or by the work of one of the detectives you think so useless now.

"Remember that you have a conscience and that misery loves company," said the man who began the talk. "Conscience, confessions, indiscreet conduct, letters—all of them play part in the capture of criminals. They are the detectives' aids. One of them is bound to crop out in the lawbreaker at one time or another. Think it over and consider every side of the question, and I'm sure you'll agree with me in the opinion that a criminal must be an extraordinary man to escape detection and capture."—New York Sun.

The Bulldog a Good Dog.

No member of the canine family has been more persistently maligned than the bulldog. Writers who have no intimate knowledge of the dog and his attributes have described him as stupidly ferocious, and illustrators have pictured him as a sort of semiwild beast, till the general public has come to look upon him as dangerous.

"Give a dog a bad name," is an old saw, and perhaps a true one, but when it is applied to the bulldog it is manifestly unjust. Writers, too, have fallen into grave error in claiming that the bulldog is deficient not only in affection, but in intelligence.

Stonehenge, who is considered one of the greatest of canine scientists, claims that the bulldog's brain is relatively larger than that of the spaniel, which dog is generally considered to be the most intelligent of the canine race, while the bulldog's affection is never to be doubted.—Outing.

English Jacobite Societies.

To judge from the list of Jacobite clubs and associations given in the "Legitimist Calendar For 1895," which includes the order of the White Roses, the Devon White Rose club, the Legitimist Jacobite League of Great Britain and Ireland (ponderous title!), the Eastern Counties' (shade of Cromwell!) White Cockade club, the Forty-five club of Grimsby, the Glasgow Jacobite club, the Oxford University Legitimist club, the St. Ives (Hunts) Jacobite club, the Jacobite Restoration league, the Surrey White Rose league, the Mary Stuart club of Lanark, the Legitimist Registration union, the National Royalist and Jacobite association, the order of St. Germain and the Hemingford Grey Royal Oak club, not to mention our old familiar Thames Valley Jacobites and two or three foreign legitimist bodies, it ought not to be difficult for the supporters of the lost house of Stuart to put several hundred adherents in the field (or even Ludgate circus) if they so decide.—London Mail.

FRUITS FOR THE TABLE.

Mrs. Rorer Tells the Best Kinds—How They Should Be Served.

Fruits are more appetizing and, perhaps, more easily digested if taken in the early part of the day—whether or not before the breakfast must be determined by the eater.

Grapes, oranges and shaddocks may be served before the cereal. Baked apples, peaches, baked bananas, figs, dates, prunes or stewed fruits should be served at the close of the breakfast.

Raisins, sultanas, dried figs and prunes should be soaked thoroughly, so that they may take up the same amount of water with which they have parted in the process of drying, and should then be heated just enough to soften the skins.

The subacid fruits, such as apples, figs, dates, peaches, persimmons, pears, prunes and apricots, are, perhaps, the best of the winter fruits and may be used to good advantage with animal foods.

Acid fruits must at all times be used most sparingly, especially by persons inclined to rheumatic troubles. The continued use of an orange or shaddock before breakfast will diminish the power of stomach digestion, for which reason they should be served with cereals or such foods as require only intestinal digestion.

The papaw and pineapple belong to a class alone. They contain a vegetable pepsin which assists in the digestion of the nitrogenous principles. These fruits, then, may be served with meats and will aid in their digestion. When served with bread and butter, they do not form so good a diet. They are more digestible raw than cooked, as the heat destroys the activity of the ferments.

Apples as a rule are more easily digested cooked than raw, although raw apples are more palatable.

The fashion of adding sugar to fruits should be avoided, as they have already been endowed with a sufficient amount of sugar, and as all the starch and cereals are converted into sugar any further amount would be stored in the system, to its detriment. If our bilious friends would throw aside their liver pills and with them sugar, they might be free from much discomfort.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer in Ladies' Home Journal.

The epochs of our life are not in the visible facts, but in the silent thoughts of the wayside as we walk.—Emerson.

"The Geisha Coming"

The Japanese musical comedy, "The Geisha" will be presented at Bradburn's Opera House, Monday evening, April 18. It is said that the eye is always delighted with the charming spectacle so full of color and life, and so replete with artistic effect. There are two acts and both are picturesque and beautiful. The action moves briskly along with capital illustrativeness of songs and choruses; the dancing is agile and entertaining and there is not a dull moment in the play. This is owing not only to the merits of the play itself but to the clever company which presents it. Miss Laura Millard, as O. Mimosa San, the chief Geisha, and Linda Da Costa, as Mollie Seamore, divide the honors of the ladies in the cast. Miss Millard has a very pleasing voice and she sings in a bright and intelligent way. Every word she utters is distinctly heard and she acts with great vivacity. Her "Gold Fish" is piquantly sung, and receives encores nightly. While her "Kissing" song is carried on with much chic and artful suggestiveness. Miss Da Costa is said to be remarkably pleasing and her singing is full of sunshine and brightness. Special mention is made of her part in the "Toy-Duet," "The Chon Kina," "The Interfering Parrot," all of which receive nightly encores.

Address and Presentation

The Port Perry Standard says: A very large gathering of young people met at the home of Mr. C.J. Pearce on Monday, April 11th, to spend a few happy moments with their loved and respected friend, Miss M. Buntin, who is soon to leave our midst to reside in Peterborough. Miss Libbie Pearse read the following address:

Dear Sister Buntin,—We your sisters and brothers in the S.O.T. are here to-night to convey to you our regret on hearing of your intended departure from our midst. Be assured, dear sister, that we will often miss your smile and helpful word as well as the services of song which you have so freely given on every occasion. We trust that you may be to others who will surround you in your new home, what you have been to us, and that other lives be brightened by the happy influence you have exerted in our midst. We hope that when you are forming new associations and friendships you will not entirely forget the old friends of Port Perry Sons of Temperance, but you will occasionally think of the pleasant times spent in the division room. Dear Sister, we wish you to accept this ladies' companion and ink well and pen as a very small token of our love, and we trust you may value it, not only for its intrinsic worth, but for the motive that prompted it. Again we wish you every prosperity and happiness in your new home and pray that the hand that has led us thus far may lead us to the haven of rest where parting is no more. Signed in behalf of the S.O.T., Libbie Pearse, May Bennetts, W.P.; Maude Kyle, R.S.

Miss Buntin replied in a very appropriate manner, after which many amusing and interesting games were played, when all returned to their own homes with best wishes for their worthy friend.

NYE'S FRIEND DAVIS.

HOW HE WORKED THE COSTLY DINNER JOKE ON THE HUMORIST.

A Sudden Advance In Price From 25 Cents to $22.70—How Davis Was Made to Impersonate the Chief Justice of North Carolina For a Day In Wyoming.

While Nye was not a mountain man to such an extent, there were frequent occasions when he got into the same horizon with Sam Davis, and when they associated there were hot times in the old towns.

After Nye had become famous and had taken to lecturing he had an odd adventure with Davis, whom often before he had met joyously and parted from sadly.

Davis was working on a San Francisco paper, and Nye, meeting him, asked if it were true that one could get a royal banquet in the Golden Gate town for the ridiculous prices mentioned by men who had been there. Davis said the stories were overdrawn, but still one could manage to exist on what was set before him even if he did not have a kegful of money in his possession.

"I'll tell you what," he said. "You come along with me to dinner this evening and I'll take you to a rotisserie—one of these French restaurants, you know, where you can get something for 25 cents, or if you prefer a 15 cent meal"—

"I guess not!" cried Nye, who was spending $15 a day for being allowed to breathe in the Palace hotel. "A quarter meal's cheap enough."

After they parted Davis hurried to one of the finest eating houses in all the coast country and had a brief but convincing conversation with the proprietor. He also called in to his aid a man with whom he knew Nye had had some pleasant correspondence and whom the lecturing knight desired to meet.

In the evening the three gourmets approached the lair of good eating. The menu card was presented. It was about as long as the Canadian Pacific's time table and made mention of wonderful things gastronomical. But Davis and the other San Franciscan behaved with ill temper when they saw it. There was no variety. It was no better than the 10 cent meals provided on Kearney street, and here they were prepared to pay two bits a head. Finally these two impatiently directed the waiters to bring everything that was on the bill, and they would select something fit to eat out of the lot. Mr. Nye had very little hair, but what he had rose in a spiky way.

"Do you mean to say," he gasped, "that the price of such a meal as you are ordering is a quarter?"

"Well," said Davis, in confusion, "of course 15 cents would be about the right price, but something seems to be wrong with the chef today. Try to make out a little, and we'll go somewhere else tomorrow. I am really filled with shame at bringing you here to such a poor, dismal excuse for a dinner, but I hadn't been in here for a month and didn't know it had run down so."

The two coastwise men objected to everything. It might be considered passable at a 20 cent place, but at a shop where the price was 25 cents it was inexcusable. The worst of it was that they had a guest with them, and he would carry away a poor opinion of San Francisco hospitality. They called the proprietor over and forced him to apologize to the visitor for the wretched food he had served. Then Davis paid the checks, which were for 25 cents apiece, and Nye nearly fainted when the cashier humbly thanked him.

The next day Nye slipped away from all friendly hands and secretly went around to that restaurant. He wanted to have just one more of those stupendous 25 cent dinners. So he ordered about one-third what he had taken on the previous day. "There's no use wasting food just because it is provided so generously and at such a price," he reasoned. And he called for his check.

Somewhat to his surprise the check was for $22.70.

The Davis dinner had been a nice, pleasant little prearranged swindle put up by Sam and his friend and the restaurateur.

It was the same Sam Davis who, previous to this, had been for one day chief justice of the supreme court of the state of North Carolina, though he had never been in North Carolina.

Going east one winter the man from the coast stopped off at Laramie to renew his troubles with Nye, who was then justice of the peace. The court was busy with a legal hearing, and when Davis appeared in the doorway Nye immediately called him forward.

"Gentleman of the bar," he said, addressing the two attorneys, "it affords me pleasure to introduce Chief Justice Witherspoon of the North Carolina supreme court. Judge, your arrival is most opportune, and I want you to sit here with me and advise me on this case. Join me on the bench." Then in a whisper, "Back me up, you outlaw, or I'll commit you for ten days as a vagrant."

Never was a case argued with more vigor. This was the first time these Wyoming lawyers had ever confronted a real chief justice, and they made the most of it. At intervals of about 30 minutes the eminent forensic light from the south would request that the court be cleared so that he might confer with his distinguished colleague, Judge Nye, upon some abstruse point. Then, while the lawyers and others went down stairs by the front hallway, these two false pretenders would retire by the back stairway to the market of wet merchandise. When the last attorney had finished his oration, another conference was held, after which Nye calmly looked down upon the litigants and said:

"A serious doubt has arisen. This is an assault case such as I have frequently dealt with for months past. I have fined some defendants and released some. But I find I am in the wrong. Judge Witherspoon tells me that by the common law of England the defendant is subject to capital punishment, banishment, fine, imprisonment or liberty. But he very properly says that there is doubt as to whether or not under territorial government we are working in the purview of this law. Maybe we are; maybe not. He promises to look it up on his return home. If I have erred in previous decisions, the county is liable to heavy damages as indemnity. In the meantime the eminent judge requests that we all go down and take a drink on him."

In Laramie they are still waiting for that decision of Judge Witherspoon's.—Chicago Record.

WALRUS LEATHER.

Used For Making Wheels For Polishing. Other Polishing Leathers.

Walrus leather is used for making buffer wheels for polishing brass, steel and silver. It has a peculiar, coarse grain that holds the emery or polishing powder well. It takes about five years to tan a walrus hide. Some walrus leather is made in this country, but the bulk of it is imported from England. Leather made from the hide of a cub walrus would be about half an inch thick. The hide of an old bull might be two inches thick. The value of the leather depends upon its thickness. Half inch would sell for about 50 cents a pound; 1¼ inches would be worth $1.40 a pound, and walrus leather from 1½ to 1¾ inches thick, smooth and well trimmed, would be worth $2 a pound, and a side of such leather would cost about $300.

Walrus wheels are made in a variety of shapes, depending upon the work on which they are used. They are made with a flat face, grooved, cone shaped or of any shape that may be desired, and by cementing layers of leather together wheels of any desired thickness are made. Walrus leather is also used for valve packings.

Bull necks are used also for polishing purposes. Three-quarter inch bull necks sell at about 50 cents a pound. Leather made from the hide of the sea lion is used for polishing purposes. This is a smoother and softer leather used for softer metals. Sea lion leather of an average thickness costs about 50 cents a pound. Built up wheels of any thickness are also made of sea lion and of bull neck leather.—New York Sun.

The Lost Purse.

"I have had my pocket picked!" exclaimed a middle aged woman as she hurriedly entered a suburban police station a day or two ago.

"Where did it occur?"

"In a shop in the High street, and I know it was a man who stood near me took it."

"How much was in it?"

"I can't say, sir. You see, it was this way: I came out to do some shopping. I put my purse in my pocket when I left home. When I went to pay for the goods, it was gone. I think I had about 30 shillings."

"Did any one have an opportunity to pick your pocket?"

"I suppose they did."

"Sure you brought the money with you?"

"Yes."

"Are you certain you did not lose it?"

"Do you think I'm a fool, sir?" she indignantly exclaimed. "When I say I had my pocket picked, I know what I'm talking about."

"I hope you do, ma'am, but"—

At this moment a boy entered the room with the purse in his hand and said:

"Here's your money, ma. We found it on the piano after you left the house, and Sarah sent me down to the shop after you."

The woman and the sergeant looked at each other for a few seconds. Then he smiled. Then she got red. Then he said he was glad she had found her money, and she retorted:

"I don't believe it! You wish I had lost it! I'll never come here for help again, never!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Valencia Fans.

Aside from the Japanese fan, those of next importance in commerce are made in Valencia by poor Spanish working people, working in garrets, there being no large factories there, but despite this fact there exists a subdivision of labor exactly similar to that of a great manufactory, each workman becoming skilled in some small part of the construction of the article. These fan sticks of ebony, olive or sandal wood or bones, are beautifully carved, and their coverings are painted by artists of some skill and shipped to Paris.

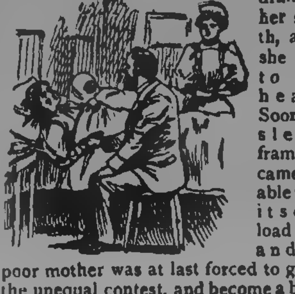
NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

Dr. Williams Pink Pills Cure After Hospital Treatment Failed.

From the Fort William Jounral.

In the town of Fort William lives a brave widow, who for years has by dint of constant labor kept the wolf from the door and her little family together. From morning till night she toiled to provide comforts for her loved ones until nature at last protested against such a constant drain on her strength, and so she began to lose health. Soon the slender frame became unable to bear its daily load of toil, and the poor mother was at last forced to give up the unequal contest, and become a burden where she had once been the chief support. Nervous prostration, heart disease, consumption and other names were given to her malady by physicians, but but months passed, during which she suffered untold agony, without finding any relief from her sufferings. Palpitation of the heart, dizziness, extreme pain in the chest, loss of appetite and nervousness were some of the symptoms of the disease, gatherings that caused excruciating pain formed at the knee joints and other parts of the body, and at last she became perfectly helpless and unable to walk or even sit up. At this stage she was advised to enter the hospital, that she might have the benefit of skilled nurses as well as best medical treatment; but after spending some time there without obtaining any relief the poor woman gave up all hope of recovery and asked to be taken home. So emaciated and weak had she become that her friends were shocked at her appearance, and so utterly hopeless was her condition that it was like mockery to speak hopefully of her ultimate recovery. What then was the astonishment of all who had known her dreadful condition to hear that she had at last found a remedy whose magical power at once demonstrated the fact that where is life there is hope. The name of this remedy that worked such a wonderful change in such a short time was Dr Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking five boxes she was able to walk about and visit her friends. Her strength gradually but surely returned, and in a few months from the time she began using the medicine she was able to resume her work. The subject of this article, Mrs. Jane Marceille, is well known, and her appearance to-day causes people to exclaim—wonders will never cease. She attributes her restoration solely to the virtues to be found in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and her experience she hopes may put some other sufferer on the right road to health.



NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

Mr. P. Lapointe, proprietor of the St. Louis Hotel, St. Anne de Beaupre, Que., says:—"My daughter Josephine is another of the many whom Dr. Williams' Pink Pills restored to perfect health. She became very weak, lost her appetite, was plae, had no energy and was not able to do any work about the house. I called in a doctor, but he did not help her, and I feared that we would lose her. One day I read in a newspaper of a young lady whose symptoms were the same, who was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to employ them in my daughter's case. After using three boxes she was decidedly better, and after four more had been taken her health was fully restored, and she now enjoys as good health as any young girl can do."

THE EFFECTS OF LA GRIPPE.

Mr. Peter McAvenny, of Clarktown, P. E. I., says:—"I consider my deliverance through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills little short of miraculous. I was taken with a severe attack of la grippe which lasted for six weeks, and which left me completely broken in health. I was subject to night sweats and sleeplessness. My appetite had vanished; my stomach was disordered, and my blood had turned watery. Finally I was forced to take my bed, and recovery seemed almost an impossibility, and nothing the doctor did for me seemed to produce beneficial results. One day a friend who had received benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, induced me to try them, and I am more than happy to say they have completely restored my health. I look upon Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a blessing to mankind."

CONSTIPATION AND PILES—CURED.

Mr. C. H. Clark, Scotchtown, N. B., says:—"My occupation is partly that of a farmer and partly fishermen, but both expose me to all sorts of weather, and one case of exposure brought on a severe cold which left me in a precarious condition. To add to my trouble I was badly constipated and this gave rise to piles, which caused me great pain, and at times left me helpless. I tried quite a number of medicines without getting better and I was beginning to be discouraged. About this time some one sent me a pamphlet advertising Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them, and to make a long story short, my troubles including the constipation and piles have disappeared and I am as well and strong as ever I have been, and feel it my duty to add my tribute to the merit of this wonderful life-saving medicine."

A CLERGYMAN'S LIFE.

Has More Worries than the Public are Aware of—Nervous Exhaustion the Frequent Outcome.

There is more worry connected with the routine life of the average clergyman than most people imagine. His duties are multifarious, and it is little wonder that he frequently becomes the victim of nervous exhaustion, insomnia, etc. In this condition Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act more speedily upon the nervous system than any other medicine, and promptly restore the user to a normal state of health. Rev. Wm. Clark, a rising young Methodist minister, stationed at Orono, Ont., says:—"I have derived great benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I found that when I attempted to study I would become drowsy and could not apply myself to my work. My digestion was very bad, and my nervous system seemed to be out of gear. At first I paid but little attention to the matter, but found myself growing worse. At this time I was stationed at Fort Stewart, Ont., and was boarding at the home of a storekeeper, who advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to do so, and thanks to this medicine, I am again restored to good health. Under these circumstances I feel it my duty to say a good word for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Weak and Depressed

That is the way thousands of people feel during the Spring month's. It is one of nature's signs that humanity cannot endure months of indoor life in imperfectly ventilated buildings with impunity. Those who feel thus may not realize that there is anything seriously wrong with them. They doubtless think "Oh I'll be all right in a few weeks."

But will you?

Breathing daily the poisonous gases arising from impure air your blood has become poor and watery, your nerves unstrung, your appetite fickle, the least exercise tires you, and you feel—as it is often expressed—"all out of sorts." In this condition your system is very susceptible to disease.

What you require is a tonic to help nature fight your battle for health. There is only one always reliable tonic, and that is

Dr. Williams Pink Pills

These pills do not purge and weaken like other medicines They make rich, red blood, build up the nerves, and make weak, depressed and easily tired people cheerful, active and strong.

But you must get the Genuine

Imitations are always worthless, often positively dangerous. You can protect yourself against imposition by seeing that the wrapper around each package you buy bears the full name "Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People," printed with red ink on white paper. Don't believe any dealer who says he has something else "just as good" He is only looking to the greater profit the imitation gives him. Sold by all dealers in medicine, or sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

It is proved that

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills CURE

Rheumatism.
Sciatica.
Locomotor Ataxia,
Anaemia, (lack of blood,)
Heart Troubles
Indigestion and Dyspepsia
St. Vitus' Dance,
Paralysis,
Incipient Consumption.
All Female Weakness,
Dizziness and Headache,
And all Troubles arising From Poor and Watery Blood.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

Mrs. Chanley Thompson, Housey's Rapids, Ont., says:—"I was pronounced by a Peterboro physician to be in consumption. I was fearlessly emaciated and looked and felt as if I had not a drop of blood in my body. I had scarcely strength enough to walk across a room. I could not sleep at nights for the pain in my lungs and the cough that racked me. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they have restored me again to health and strength. They are the best medicine I know of and I believe they saved my life."

Y. M. C. A. Entertainment

The Y.M.C.A. promises two grand entertainments for Thursday and Friday evenings of next week. The gymnasium class, uner Mr. Buxton, will furnish the major part of the program both evenings—the balance to be contributed by local talent not connected with the Association. In addition to this there will be an exhibition of the bicycle models of 1898 in Association Hall. An invitation is extended to those interested in the work. There will be no fee of admission, but those who attend will be supplied with refreshments at a small cost if they so desire.

A New Trial Ordered

Osgoode Hall reports in yesterday's Mail and Empire contains the following legal note of local interest. The plaintiff is Mr. Adam R. J. Hall, of town:

"Hall v. McPherson.—W.R. Riddell and R.H. Hall, Peterborough, for the plaintiff, appealed from judgment of Ferguson, J., dismissing the action, which was brought by an infant to recover damages for false representations alleged to have been made by defendants to induce plaintiff to purchase five shares in the capital stock of the Bay of Quinte Hedge Co., for the price of which plaintiff gave his promissory note, guaranteed by his father. The defendants denied making the false representations, and set up that, as plaintiff was an infant when he signed the note, he was not liable thereon and suffered no damage. The plaintiff contended that he was entitled to maintain the action, and that he was entitled to prove damages by reason of the misrepresentations. S.H. Blake, Q.C., for defendants, contra. Appeal allowed, and order made directing a new trial. Costs of appeal and former trial to be paid by defendants."

A War Scare in Apsley

About 6.30 a.m. Tuesday those of our villagers who were still in their beds were suddenly awakened by what seemed either an earthquake or the bombardment of New York by the Spanish gun boats. Those who were up rushed excitedly into the streets, anxiously enquiring "What's up?" and were surprised to hear that the shock was due to neither of the above-mentioned causes. It seems that two of our heavy-weight citizens had by some means got possession of a bicycle and were determined to learn to ride or die in the attempt. Uncle —— was the first to try, but after a few unsuccessful trials said it was not his day for learning, and besides did not think it healthy exercise before breakfast. Korntassal then boldly mounted, and after a few slight mishaps found he was making such good progress that he asked Uncle —— to open the gate (these first lessons taking place in the yeard) and he wheeled out, making a good run to the north end of Queen street. Then he got off—to rest, he said. Mounting again he made a 2.10 gait to the blacksmith shop. As he passed Uncle —— he was heard to remark, "it's awfully easy, Uncle, when you know how." Thinking he had full control of the machine, he attempted to turn at the shop, and there is where the trouble began and the first lesson ended. The bike turned all right, but Korntassal missed the combination, and consequently took a header, alighting on his shoulders, causing a jar that was felt clear down to the residence of the Secretary of State. Several who had been looking on with envy at his previous success immediately ran to his assistance. After turning him over and pouring several pails of water on him, they finally brought him back to consciousness. His first words on opening his eyes were, "Did anyone catch the horse?" as he still maintains that it was one of those Bucking Broncho's that threw him, for of course you know anyone with a little practice can ride a bike. The Dr. says that with care and a liberal fish diet he will be able to resume his bicycle practice about the 24th of May.

Uncle —— went home, and after a severe lecture from his better half on the folly of one of his age attempting such tricks, made him solemnly promise never to mount a bicycle again until he insured his life, but stick to his one wheeled velocipede (better known as a wheelbarrow). Still, I don't think he will keep his promise, as I notice that when such men catch the bicycle fever they hardly ever get over it until they succeed or are crippled. I have no doubt that as soon as his friend Korntassal is able to be about the two of them will make another attempt. It is said the jar broke several panes of glass in the blacksmith shop. Can't vouch for that part of it.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Council Meeting To-night

The committee of the Whole Council will meet in the town buildings to-night. A number of matters of public interest will come before the committee.

The Servant Girl Question

The servant girl question is likely to be solved by the action of the Hon. Mr. Sifton, who has, as Minister of the interior, sent Mrs. Livingstone to the Old Country to bring women servants to Canada. The Government will advance the passage money for servants who will repay it. This will be good news, not only to many in Peterborough, but generally throughout the country.

Horse Thief in Chandos

Tuesday seems to be our day back here for startling events. Between 8 and 9 o'clcook p.m. a man entered Rev. Mr. Gould's stable, Chandos, and cooly led out his horse. Mrs. Gould saw him but thought it was Mr. Gould taking it out to water, until a few minutes later her husband coming in it was discovered that a stranger had taken the horse. Mr. Gould immediately started in pursuit. The man was seen passing through Apsley going north about 10 o'clock, but no one suspected anything wrong until Mr. Gould, accompanied by Mr. Wm. Hales, came a little later enquiring about a stolen horse. From a peculiar shaped shoe Mr. Gould was enabled to track it plainly, and has a pretty good idea of the destination of the theif and is gone up north with the hope of recovering his property. A stranger, supposed to be the party who took the horse, was seen in th neighborhood on Tuesday.

THE NORWOOD BURGLARY

James McDonald Who is Suspected Committed for Trial

The preliminary investigation into the charge against James McDonald, of Toronto, of being implicated in the burglary of the Norwood post office, was resumed yesterday morning before County Magistrate Edmison at the Court House.

The prisoner sat in the box in the same stolid and immovable manner he has shown since he was brought to Peterborough. He sat with his hands over his face in order that no photograph of it could be taken. He seems to dread identification.

The evidence of Detective Parkinson, of the Dominion Police was to the effect that he had been sent up by the department at Ottawa to act on the case. At Havelock he had found the person under arrest in charge of Constable Williams, of Havelock, and Warden Pearce. The witness aslo described the satchel and its contents found on the train. He also corroborated the evidence of Mr. Pearce regarding the condition of the safe and store after the burglary.

Mr. Jas. Calder, assistant postmaster at Norwood, gave important evidence. He identified a 50c. Jubilee stamp taken from the small canvas bag found on the prisoner as one which was in his possession before the burglary. It was the only one of the kind in the office and had a margin outside the perforated edge on one side which was torn in a peculiar manner. This the Magistrate considered an important piece of evidence. Pieces of wood wrenched from the casing of the door of the office were also produced. These showed marks of having been forced off by some instrument, and the marks in the wood corresponded exactly with the indentations in the edge of the burglars' jimmy" found in the satchel which the prosecution will endeavor to prove was in the prisoner's possession. After considering the evidence of these two witnesses and that of Mr. Pearce taken last Saturday the Magistrate committed the accused to await trial at the next sessions.

Chief Keeper Constant, of St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary, Montreal, was in attendance to see if he could identify the prisoner. He was suspected of being Eddie Johnston, who was liberated from St. Vincent de Paul last summer after serving thirteen years for burglary, but Mr. Constant had never seen the prisoner before. His identity is as yet a complete mystery.

There is one mark about McDonald which the detectives epxect to be able to make use of in identifying him. He wears a side-bar whisker and under it on the right cheek has been found a deep scar fully two inches long and completely hidden by the beard.

Detective Parkinson has sent down to Ottawa for analysis the bottle of chemical found in the valise on the train and which is supposed to be nitro-glycerine. It is believed that it was this bottle that was used to blow open the safe at Norwood and which set fire to the store.

Fire Sale at Mason's

The recent fire at E. F. Mason & Co's has had the effect of slightly damaging by smoke the immense stock of groceries and provisions carried by this firm, and in order to facilitate renovation and make room for new goods, a clearing sale has been inaugurated and is now in full swing. Everything must go, and at almost your own price. Don't procrastinate! Call to-day!

Peterborough is all Right

The local committee in charge of the provincial C.W.A. meet, which is to be held here, have received a few useful pointers from Mr. Cairns, a leading member on the Chatham committee last year. Mr. Cairns was shown about town and said that our track and grounds were first class, and with the improvements to be made, grand stand erected and other matters requiring attention looked after the meet would be amply housed. He was positive as to the large number that would attend and that the amount of money left in town would be large.

HEALTH IS BETTER

"I had no appetite and could not sleep at night, and I was so tired that I could hardly walk. I saw Hood's Sarsaparilla advertised and procured four bottles. My healt is now better than it has ever been since I was a child, and I have not been sick for a long time.' Miss Jessie Turnbull, Cranbrook, Ont.

HOOD'S PILLS are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Easy and yet efficient.

A STRANGE STATE OF AFFAIRS

The Bensfort Bridge Caretaker Refuses to Work Unless Paid

We learned from Commodore Calcutt late last night of a very strange state of affairs in connection with the swing bridge at Bensfort. The caretaker claims that he has not been paid for past services and simply refuses to work until the Dominion Government whacks up.

In the meantime steamboat men have opened the bridge and will leave it open until other arrangements are made. They have also reported the matter to Mr. R. B. Rogers, T.V.C. engineer, who has charge of all Government structures on these waters, and it is expected that he in turn will report the affair to the Ottawa authorities at once.

We were always of the opinion that a Government job was worth 100 cents on the dollar—sometimes more—but this one apparently is an exception to the rule, at least so far as the information at present to hand is concerned.

In any event the bridge is open and is a source of much annoyance to steamboat owners and of grave danger to the travelling public.

Prompt action is very necessary under the circumstances.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Mr. A. Murty made a business trip to Lindsay on Thursday.

Miss Eva Sradd, daughter of Dr. Bradd is visiting friends in Omemee.

Mrs. Alex. Brodie, of Hespeler, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Edmison, Rubidge street.

Mrs. F. M. Thompson, Montreal, is in town to attend the funeral of her brother, the late Robert Elliott.

Mrs. W. H. Robertson and her little daughter, Mattie, of Peterborough, are visiting at Fenelon Falls.

Mr. John Whyte, of Campbellford, spent a few days in town this week.

Mr. Will. Dunday is visiting friends in Port Hope.

Mr. John Leeson, of the Mayor's Department, Toronto, passed through town yesterday on his wheel bound for Montreal. He favored the Times with a call.

The many friends of Rev. Father Chidwick will be pleased to learn that he has been raised to the rank of lieutenant in the United States Navy by Secretary Long, and has been placed for active duty on the cruiser Cincinnato. Father Chidwick was presented with a handsome set of vestments by the newspaper correspondents at Key West.

For the Klondyke

The local Salvation Army corps tendered the party of officers bound for the Klondike a grand farewell demonstration last night.

Calcutt Brewing and Malting Co.

Special Telegram: Send one thousand (1000) barrels of your Porter to build up our sailors before leaving for Cuba. (Signed), McKinley.

The Market Committee

The Market Committee of the town council met last night. They will, among other things, recommend the purchase of an extra pair of scales for the market.

St Luke's Easter Concert

The annual concert under the auspices of the Girls' Guild will take place in the Opera House on Thursday evening, April 21st. Admission: Reserved seats 25 cents, back seats 15 cents. Plan of hall at Ormond & Walsh's. Secure your seats early before the crush.

A New Boat for Chemong

"Lady of the Lake" is the name of a new boat which will ply on Chemong this season. She was launched this week and Mr. Donnelly, the Government hull inspector, gave Mr. Hickey great credit for his good work—saying that it was but seldom that he inspected as neat and well put together a boat. The trial trip was a success in every respect, and no doubt Mr. Kelly will have one of the fastest boats on the water.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia., Lyman Sons, & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Positively refuse all substitutes.

PLAIN, HONEST WORDS.

Catarrh and Cold in the Head are Quickly Cured by Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder—It's Painless—It's a Cure.

Says Alex. Edmison, of Roseneath, Ont.: "I have been troubled with catarrh for several years and suffered very much. No end of remedies were used, but I can honestly say that Dr. Agnwe's Catarrhal Powder is the only remedy I have used that has given permanent relief. It has in my case cured the disease.

—The Grand Trunk has written the Lakefield Council stating that the changing of the railway from a steam to an electric road would have a tendency to reduce freight rates. Evidnetly the Grand Trunk are anxious to have Mr. Starr's scheme go through.

Evangelistic Services Concluded

Mr. Varley concluded a successful series of evangelistic services in the George Street Methodist Church here last night. The church was crowded to the doors and many professed conversion. He goes to Belleville from here where he will conduct similar services.

A Captive Doe

Mr. Chas. Westlake has a two-year old doe in his livery barn on Water street. It was captured in the northern part of the county after it had apparently been chased a long distance by dogs. Although only in its nwe quarters since yesterday it is already quite tame.

Police Court

Yesterday morning six boys were before the Magistrate charged with throwing stones on the streets. The offence took place near the corner of George and Antrim streets, where the boys seem to make a practice of throwing missels at cyclists and people driving. After impressing upon them the gravity of their offence the Magistrate allowed them to go. Any others caught at the same practice will be punished.

Mayor Bennett of Lowell

Heartily Endorses This Testimonial--Hood's Sarsaparilla Triumphant in a Severe Test

The testimonials in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla are worth reading because they tell things worth telling. Just spare a few moments to read this statement below:

No man is more favorably known in and about Epping, N. H., than Mr. Joseph Stokes, the husband of the lady referred to. His word is as good as a U. S. bond, and every statement from him or his family may be most implicitly relied upon. Read this:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—For fully twenty years my mother has been seriously troubled by a sore on her nose. For some time we thought it of a cancerous nature, and it was removed three times. A physician in Boston said the sore was not a cancer, but

"A Catarrhal Sore."

It discharged and was, of course, very annoying as well as painful. Sometimes it was as large as a half dollar, and it was necessary to keep it bandaged and protected most of the time. About two years ago the sore seemed to be spreading over her face, and was larger than when the Boston physician removed it. There is no question but that its origin was in

The Scrofulous Humor

with which my mother has always been troubled. Two years ago she decided to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a faithful trial, also using, as an outward application, Hood's Olive Ointment. It was soon noticed, to the joy of the family, that the sore was diminishing in size and was becoming less troublesome. This encouraged her to continue the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. She took 11 bottles, and now

Her Face is Well.

The sore has entirely disappeared, leaving not a scar, but only a slight mark, which we think may in time totally disappear. It is such a comfort to her and such a joy to the rest of the family that we feel indebted more than we can express, to Hood's Sarsaparilla, that she has been cured after twenty years of suffering." MISS E. A. STOKES, Epping, N. H.

From Mr. Stokes.

"I am glad to say that the cure of my wife is exactly as stated in my daughter's letter above." JOSEPH STOKES.

Hon. J. W. Bennett,

Mayor of Lowell, takes pleasure in voluntarily adding his endorsement to the above testimonial, as follows:

"I know the parties referred to in the letters above, and endorse them as thoroughly reliable. I have known about this case for some time, and am glad this testimonial has been sent to C. I. Hood & Co." J. W. BENNETT, Lowell, Mass.

YANKEE TROOPS HURRYING EAST

Spain Will Strike Hard to Cripple the States

ENLISTING 100,000 MEN

United States Will Give Spain 48 Hours Notice to Quit

Powers Agree upon the Nation of the Czar as a Mediator Between the United States and Spain—An Endeavor to be Made to Have the Americans Adopt a Middle Course to Avoid War—Queen Victoria Interested

(Special to the Times.)

Washington, April 16.—The orders issued some days ago excluding the public from the navy yards are being more rigidly enforced than heretofore, and to-day the sentries at the gates refuse even to forward a request for admission. It is stated that the Government has reason to suspect danger to the works from persons in the pay or in sympathy with Spain. Some days ago a bomb was discovered in the coal supplies at the navy yard, and this has led to the exclusion of all visitors. From New York comes a report that Admiral Bunce has received an anonymous letter warning him that Spaniards were waiting in that city to strike a blow for Spain as soon as hostilities were opened, and that the operation of these spies would be on the Brooklyn Navy Yard and on the powder magazines at Dover, N. J., and on several ship yards. Secret service detectives have been instructed to take preventive measures.

SPAIN'S MAIN HOPE.

New York, April 16.—The most interesting feature of the Spanish situation to-day is the frantic efforts the Sagasta Ministry is making to induce the powers to exert pressure on the Washington Government. Spain is evidently beginning to fear the consequences of war with the United States, and is attempting to avert it. France, Austria and Italy are willing to help her out of the difficulty, but England, Germany and Russia are firmly opposed to taikng any positive action. Even Austria has announced her intention to remain neutral.

Spain is massing a big fleet at Cape Verde and will stake all on one powerful blow. She hopes that a fortunate stroke or two by her torpedo boats may place the American fleet at her mercy.

At Washington war is considered on all sides to be the inevitable outcome, whatever action Congress may take. The only question is what shall be the form of the declaration which Congress shall announce to the world as the ground upon which the country is to fight.

Recognition of the present so-called Republic of Cuba is still the bone of contention.

When the Senate adjourned last night therte was every prospect that there would be a dead-lock between the two Houses which might delay final congressional action until early next week.

United States war vessels were sighted by a sentry at Morro Castle yesterday and a panic in Havana followed. The search lights of vessels at Key West can be seen at night and keep the people in a state of alarm.

General Miles says, that the army is not making a spectacular display to intimidate Spain, but is engaged in serious business. It will be prepared to cross to Cuba when the navy shall have cleared the way for the landing of troops.

CUBAN CABINET LOYAL.

Madrid, April 16.—The Cuban Cabinet has addressed a manifesto to the Queen Regent offering unconditional assistance in defence of Spain and in behalf of the regeneration of Cuba. Senor Sagasta, the Premier, presented this manifesto to her Majesty as soon as it was received. It expresses the warmest and most enthusiastic adherance to the Spanish Government.

CUBANS LEAVING THE ISLAND.

New York, April 16.—Senor Leopold Dolz y Arrango, professor of law at the Havana University, who arrived last night with other Cubans on the steamship Seneca from Havana, gave out an interesting statement regarding affairs in Cuba. He says: "I left Havana with my family because I believed the opening of hostilities means the massacre of all the Cubans and Americans. All of the Americans, or very near all, have left Havana, and those remaining either profess to believe that there will be no war, or even if there shall, that they are safe as if in the United States."

Senor Arrango also stated that military preparations were going forward in expectation of a possible war with the United States, two large magazines having just been completed at Morro Castle.

CALLING HOME SPANISH PATRIOTS

Paris, April 16.—Spain has begun calling home all able bodied Spaniards.

TROOPS HURRYING EAST.

Washington, April 16.—From nearly every source east of the Rockies the army of the United States, foot, horse and artillery, are hurrying to the Department of the Gulf, in response to the orders issued yesterday.

WAITING FOR THE FIRST BLOW.

Washington, April 16.—The Spanish Minister has not yet received orders to leave Washington, but he is ready to go at a moment's notice. The Administration realizes that, while hostilities have not begun, war is virtually on. Each side is waiting for the other to strike the first blow.

PLAN OF ACTION OUTLINED.

Washington, April 16.—The Washington Post's summary of the situation includes the following statement: "Immediately the President is empowered to use the army and navy he will issue an ultimatum to Spain, giving her 24 hours, possibly 48, within which to answer whether she will peaceably withdraw her troops and flag from Cuba. eHr refusal to evacuate the island—which is of course expected—will be the signal for action on the part of this Government and that action will be the vigorous use of both of our naval and land forces. The Post makes this staement upon the highest possible authority, the course of action indicated having been decided upon at yesterday's Cabinet meeting.

"Should the resolution reach the President accompanied by the amendment recognizing the people of Cuba, the President will sign them, but in a brief message to Congress he will hold that the constitutional perogative vested in the President to recognize other Governments cannot be taken away and that amendment is therefore void and inoperative."

RALLYING AROUND THE FLAG.

Madrid, April 16, 8 a.m.—An official despatch from Havana says: "Perfect tranquility prevails on the island. All political parties are more united than ever, and are rallying around the Government and the flag. The newspapers are printing patriotic articles.'

RUSSIA AS AN ARBITER.

Rome, April 16.—The Foreign Office declares it absolutely untrue that the powers have even discussed any proposition of concrete action in the Hispano-American dispute. So far they have merely decided for the moment to offer no further intervention as a body.

Italy, however, has proposed that Russia, a recognized disinterested nation, should use its offices to induce the United States to accept a middle course—one less vigorous in its actions. This the other powers have heartily approved.

EUROPEAN AMBASSADOR ANNOYED.

London, April 16.—According to the Washington correspondent of The Daily Chronicle the European Ambassadors, except the British, are so annoyed at Congress for ignoring Spain's offer of armistice that they are conferring with a view to concerted action.

THE QUEEN'S INTEREST.

London, Eng., April 16.—Queen Victoria has watched with deep concern the course of the American-Spanish crisis, special service telegrams having apprised her Majesty of every turn of the diplomatic campaign, between the arrival of the London papers on one day and th[illegible] of th[illegible] day fol[illegible]. Her Majesty has consulted the Marquis of Salisbury as to the possibility of averting war, and, it is announced here, "when the secret pages of our Foreign Office are made public, it will be found that her Majesty's personal mediation reached both the Queen Regent of Spain and President McKinley."

TO ENLIST 100,000.

New York, April 16.—A new bill has been drafted by the War Department for introduction in Congress at once authorizing the President to enlist volunteers to the number of 100,000.

HOUSE TAKES A RECESS.

Washington, April 16.—At 1.40 p.m. the House took a recess until ten o'clock Monday morning.

ANOTHER SPANISH FLOTILLA.

Southampton, April 16.—A Spanish torpedo flotilla is reported to be in the channel.

AMERICAN CONSULATE GUARDED.

Cadiz, April 16.—The American Consulate is now under guard, owing to attempted disturbance.

The students of the School of Medicine, carrying a flag, attempted to make a manifestation here yesterday evening. The police interfered and arrested two of the students. As a result, the United States Consulate has been placed under guard.

POPE PRAYS FOR PEACE.

Washington, April 16.—Archbishop Ireland left last night on the midnight train for New York, accompanied by Prof. Pace of the Catholic University. Mgr. Ireland is convinced that any further efforts to induce the United States to postpone action would be in vain. Yesterday a message was received expressing the profound regret of Pope Leo XIII. at the prospect of war and containing a prayer that hostilities might yet be averted.

WAR SHIPS GOING WEST.

Island of St. Thomas, West Indies, April 16.—A number of warships are said to have passed here yesterday going west.

PONTON IS ALL THE WAY

Dominion Bank Oppose Trial of Suit at Napanee

A CHANGE OF VENUE ASKED

Long Argument at Osgoode Hall—Ponton is a Corker

The Motion of the Dominion Bank to Change the Venue of W. H. Ponton's Suit Against It, from Napanee to Toronto, Argued at Osgoode Hall Saturday Morning

Special to the Times.

Toronto, April 16.—The motion of the Dominion Bank to change the venue of W. H. Ponton's $50,000 suit against it, from Napanee to Toronto, or such other place as might be deemed suitable, was argued before the Master-in-Chambers at Osgoode Hall this morning.

Mr. A. B. Aylesworth, Q. C., appearing for the bank, said that a fair trial was impossible at Napanee because of the intense feeling there against the bank and the wide popularity of young Ponton. There was a general feeling in the town and county that a vindicative verdict should be rendered against the bank as a lesson to them. With the public it was simply a question how much the bank should be assessed. It was in Napanee where the feeling was bitterest, that the jury would have to live during the trial, and he thought it was unfair to expect any jury to be uninfluenced by the pro-Ponton feeling throughout the whole county. The bank, he said, was willing to pay the extra expense of having the trial in some other place, where a fair, unprejudiced hearing was possible.

TELLING OF THE ROBBERY.

Before reading his affidavits, Mr Aylesworth recited briefly the circumstances of the robbery in August last and the subsequent movements and alleged discoveries of Pinkerton and other detectives, which culminated in Teller Ponton's arrest. He explained that Ponton's writ, which was originally issued against Inspector Bogart, and the two Pinkerton detectives, Doherty and Wilkes, had been altered so that it was now against Mr. Bogart and the Dominion Bank. The writ alleged malicious prosecution, trespass, conversion of goods, defamation of character, libel and false arrest, all of which the plaintiff had an inalienable right to have tried by a jury, but not, he contended, by a jury selected from a panel in Lennox and Addington counties.

PONTON'S POPULARITY.

Coming to his material, Mr. Aylesworth read the affidavit of H.W. DeRoche, solicitor for the Dominion Bank at Napanee. It set forth that Ponton was an extremely popular young man, played many games, was constantly invited by the best people in Napanee. The feeling in town and county was very strong in his behalf. The local newspapers had reflected the general sympathy in their reports of the trial. During the proceedings before the Police Magistrate bits of evidence favorable to Ponton had been cheered to the echo, and after he was discharged there was a public demonstration, the like of which Mr. De Roche had seen only once before in his life.

"There was,' says the affidavit, "a torchlight procession with Ponton as the chief figure, carriages, bands playing, speeches by Ponton and his counsel. In fact, a stranger coming to Napanee that night would have thought that a great victory was being celebrated."

A SORT OF TERRORISM.

Mr. DeRoche's affidavit alleges that he interviewed several prominent men with a view of having them make affidavits that a fair trial was impossible in Napanee, but they refused to do so because they did not wish the community to be prejudiced against them by such action. He concludes from this that the feeling against the bank is still bitter.

THREATS OF VIOLENCE.

Another affidavit is that of Clarence Bogart, inspector of the Dominion Bank, who also alludes to the torch light procession and the demonstration on the night of Ponton's acquittal. He says there were threats of violence against himself, the Pinkerton detectives and the bank. He was subjected to "hissing, groaning and other insults."

Mr. Aylesworth made extensive quotations from the Napanee papers to show that a pro-Ponton feeling still existed. They had all openly jubilated over Ponton's release and had acknowledged the presence of "a very fine box of rotten eggs' in Napanee on the night of the demonstration. Alluding to the most important piece of evidence against Ponton at the trial—the impression of the key found in his drawer—one paper asked, "Who put it in Ponton's drawer?".

THE OTHER SIDE'S AFFIDAVITS.

Mr. Aylesworth acknowledged the many and influential counter affidavits—thirty-two of them—on Ponton's side of the case, but argued that the very ease and facility with which Ponton could secure these affidavits from the most prominent people in the county was the best evidence of his contention for a change of venue.

Mr. Aylesworth would not impugn the veracity of the affidavit makers, but he thought that in some cases the

ONTARIO'S ELECTION PROTESTS

Sixty out of ninety-four of the seats in the Ontario Legislature are being contested in the courts. While in a good many cases there are, no doubt, ample grounds for such action, it is fairly certain that in a good many more the petitions are speculative, and only entered for the purpose of compelling the withdrawal of actions for which there is real ground. If this is not the case, Ontario must be electorally the most corrupt of the provinces. An amendment to the law forfeiting the deposit required with every petition, if it is not pushed to trial would be in order.

THE EXPERIENCE OF SHEFFIELD

On Monday, aMrch 21st last, the city of Sheffield, Eng., municipalized the electric light and power service by buying out the property of the private company operating in that city. Sheffield now owns its own street railway, its own waterworks, its own gas works and its own electric light.

In referring to the purchase of the latter by the city, the Daily Telegraph "rejoices in this further extension of municipal control over great public affairs." The experience of Sheffield ought to be conclusive as to the advantages to be gained by the municipalization of public services. The more of these services it has the more does it seek to acquire. The city is making money from its gas works, its street car system, its water suppln and it expects both to make money from supplying electricity, and to sell current cheaper than any private company in Great Britain.

WAR WILL BENEFIT CANADA

The old saying that "it's an ill wind that blows nobody good" seems to apply to Canada in the event of war between the United States and Spain. A despatch from Halifax says that, according to information received there from Moncton, the Intercolonial Railway authorities are receiving enquiries from large transatlantic steamship companies operating between England and New York relative to the facilities at Halifax for handling ocean passengers and freight which might be landed there in case of hostilities between the United States and Spain. The steamship companies are no doubt preparing for the worst, and in case of war many of the ocean greyhounds would make Halifax their port on this side of the Atlantic instead of New York and other American ports. It is understood that one of the enquiries referred to comes from the Cunard line. On the other hand, Mr. Thomas Harling, manager of the Elder-Dempster Company at Montreal, is credited with saying that the war talk in the United States had already affected shipping at that port. "We have received numerous enquiries," said Mr. Harling, "chiefly from shippers in the Western States, asking for freight rates via the St. Lawrence. This freight has formerly gone by United States ports, and in case of war it will to a great extent come by way of Montreal." In that case I think Montreal will have more freight than it can handle, as it has not facilities at present for handling large quantities quickly." Quebec can handle any amount of it.

GREAT BRITIAN IS THE BEST FRIEND OF THE REPUBLIC

Spain in Cuba has sinned grievously against humanity, but the great powers of Europe which allowed the Turk to work his will in Armenia would not recognize humane considerations as a reason for the destruction of Spanish sovereignty in Cuba.

Great Britain, and Great Britain alone, stands between the United States and the danger of a European alliance in defence of Spain.

France is identified with Spain by financial interests and racial sympathy, and Russia and Germany would follow the lead of Austria in an effort to prop up an ancient member of the European family of states.

If Russia, France and Germany decided that Spain should stay in Cuba the United States would simply have to abandon its policy of interference in the face of a united naval demonstration by the European power.

And there would be a united naval demonstration off the coast of Cuba by the European powers within a fortnight, if Germany, France and Russia were no afraid that the fleet which they could muster to support Spain would be overshadowed by the warships which would be assembled to demonstrate Great Britain's sympathy with the United States.

The United States could not enforce its Cuban policy against the hostility of a second or a third rate naval power, and if Great Britain remained neutral, the European powers would be able to show the great Republic that it is too weak to interfee with Spain in Cuba.

Another crop of pensioners and another series of war articles in the magazines, will make the American people wish that their politicians had left Cuba to rot in slavery.

• • •

Pope Leo is appalled by the thought that the United States may start in tot crucify Spain, and yet for three years his Holiness has patiently endured the sight of Spain crucifying humanity in Cuba.

• • •

A curious but not unimportant point in connection with the impending war is that the yellow fever season commences in Cuba in a week or two. Perhaps there will be a general suspension of operations for a time save on the part of the yellow journals.

Railway Notes

General Baggage Agent Quick, of the G.T.R. has completed the new baggage rules, which went into effect on April 1st over the entire system. The greater number of the rules refer to the improved methods of checking. Prefaced to the regulations are several important directions to employees, whom is impressed the necessity of exercising constant and watchful care over the property of travellers, and of trying to give general satisfaction to the public, and of establishing a reputation for courtesy and civility. The concluding paragraph reads: "You are expected to be polite at all times and answer civilly all questions addressed to you."

people had mercenary interests in wanting the trial at Napanee, and in others they were ignorant of what a fair trial meant. Mr. Aylesworth quoted from the cross-examination of one of these, in which the witness stated that he thought "a fair trial meant a fair amount of damage to Ponton."

WHERE THEY'D LIKE TO GO.

In favor of Toronto as a place of trial, Mr. Aylesworth pointed out that at least eleven material witnesses either live in Toronto or must pass through it to reach Napanee.

"How does Hastings county suit you?' asked the Master.

"That is much preferable, although Belleville is Ponton's home. If we can't have Toronto we would like to have any other town not in Lennox and Addington county."

In reply, Mr. Holman, for Ponton, said that the preponderance of convenience for having the trial at Napanee was shown even by the affidavits on behalf of the bank. On the possibility of a fair trial he remarked that the ovation to Ponton was no more than would have been given to any hero of the hour. Mr. De Roche's affidavit, he alleged, was the only one the bank could get.

Judgment was reserved.

SERVANTS' LIVERIES.

They Had Their Origin During the Reign of King Pepin of France.

So far as the present writer is aware, the earliest mention of "liveries" made in history was during the reign of King Pepin of France, who flourished about the year 750 A. D.

A form of amusement to which King Pepin was partial was what were termed cours plenieres. These were assemblies at which, upon the king's invitation, all the lords and courtiers of France were expected to be present. They were held twice in each year—at Christmas and Easter—and generally lasted for about a week at each time. Sometimes these gatherings took place at the king's palace, sometimes in the neighborhood of one of the largur French cities and sometimes in some rural district. While the festival lasted the king took all his meals in public, bishops and dukes alone being privileged to sit at the royal table. A second table was provided for abbots, counts and other leading men, and at both tables there was shown more profusion than delicacy, both in the quality of the meats and drinks and the manner in which they were served. Flutes, hautboys and other musical instruments were played before the bearers of each course as it was removed from the tables. When dessert was served, 20 heralds, each holding aloft a jeweled goblet, shouted thrice, "Largesse, largesse from the most potent of kings!" As they shouted they scattered among the crowds handfuls of gold and silver coins. Then the trumpets were blown, while the better class spectators shouted and the meaner sort scrambled and often fought vigorously for the money scattered by the heralds.

Charles VII of France put a final stop to the cours plenieres, alleging that the expense attendant upon his wars with England made it impossible for him to continue them. One of the severest causes of expense, it was explained, arose from the fact that, beginning with King Pepin's time, etiquette and custom alike demanded that the king should upon these occasions give an entire suit of new and gorgeous clothing not only to his own servants and retainers, but also to those of the queen and all the princes of the blood royal. These garments were said to be livres—that is, "delivered" at the king's expense—and from this word the English word "livery" was derived, as was the custom of providing servants with "livery," from the above mentioned practice of certain of the French kings.—London Society.

AMERICAN HEIRESS IN PARIS.

Impecunious Titled Parisians Drew Lots to Decide Who Should Marry Her.

Lilian Bell, in a letter from Paris to The Ladies' Home Journal, writes that the most shameless thing in all Europe is the marriage question, and proceeds to narrate the experiences of a rich American girl who came to Paris with letters to friends. On account of her wealth she was invited everywhere by mothers of marriageable sons, but being unable to speak French was not much of a success. She went to a convent to learn French, and was shown much attention by the Duchesse de Z——, who was determined that her son should marry her. "Suddenly, to the amazement of everybody, the heiress sailed for America without a word of warning. The duchesse was furious. 'You must follow her,' she said to her son. 'We cannot let so much money escape.' The son said he would be hanged if he went to America or if he would marry such a monkey, and as for her money, she could go anywhere she pleased with it, or words to that effect. So that ended the affair of the Marquis de G——.

"When the other impecunious young nobles heard that the duchesse no longer had any claims upon the American's money, they got together and said: 'Somebody must marry her and divide with the rest. We can't all marry her, but we can all have a share from whoever does. Now we will draw lots to see who must go to America and marry her.' The lot fell to the Baron de X——, but he had no money for the journey. So all the others raised what money they could and loaned it to him, and took his notes for it, with enormous interest, payable after his marriage. He sailed away, and within eight months he had married her, but he has not paid those notes. His wife won't give him the money!"

Austrian Christmas Customs.

In Austria they are particularly thoughtful of the bringer of the gifts and joy. The people place lighted candles in their windows, that the Christ child, in passing through the city or village or along the country road, shall not stumble or fall.

A belief in the special presence of evil spirits during Christmastide and in their efforts to interfere with and lessen the joys of the season prevails throughout Europe.

The bugbear "ruprecht," under different names and in numerous varying disguises and in strange antics, plays a conspicuous part among the Germans and surrounding peoples. In Tyrol the terrible "klanbauf" accompanies St. Nicholas, and is continually hovering about his path ready to kidnap naughty children.

In Austria this monster is very terrible in appearance, going about with clanking chains and hideous devil's mask. He is frequently heard at night as he flies through the air, and his rattling chains are giving notice of his presence.

In many places there is the belief that wolves roam the earth on the night before Christmas and create great havoc in destroying vines and other property and even human beings. This belief has made an excuse for a means of mischievous frolic. Men and boys frequently disguise themselves as wolves and go about frightening the people.—Chicago Times-Herald.

He Had Forgotten.

Sir W. R. Hamilton, the great mathematician, had a very promising boy whom he reared with true parental triumph, so Aubrey de Vere tells us. When he was going to bed one night, his father said to him: "Tomorrow Aubrey de Vere will be here. Shall you not be glad to see him?" He mused for some time and then made reply remorsely, "Thinking of Latin, and thinking of trouble, and thinking of God, I had forgotten Aubrey de Vere."—San Francisco Argonaut.

An Appreciable Difference.

"The chief difference between the man with a lot of new made money and the gentle zephyr," said the corn fed philosopher, "is that the gentle zephyr blows itself quietly."—Indianapolis Journal.

In 1680 the Duchesse de Fontanges had the misfortune to have her hat blown off at a hunting party, and she tied her hair with one of her ribbon garters. Hairdressing with ribbons remained a fashion for seven years.

No fewer than 26,826 doors and windows in London have been found open at night by the police in one year.

EDWIN BOOTH.

Story of the Great Actor and Lawrence Barrett's Death.

The sudden death of Lawrence Barrett was a great shock and a great surprise to Booth. His friend had recovered from the serious operation performed a year or two before, and he was seemingly in robust strength, likely long to outlive Booth, who was beginning to become conscious of his own physical decay. They were playing together a successful engagement in New York when Barrett was taken ill and was obliged to leave the theater before the close of the performance. The next night he did not appear, and the third night his name was taken out of the bill. Booth, who had no thought of anything serious, asked Mr. Bromley, the manager, to call at the Windsor hotel and see how "Lawrence was getting on."

An hour later Booth was sitting at his supper of bread and milk in the grillroom of The Players when Mr. Bromley entered and said simply and seriously, "Mr. Barrett has gone." Booth, still suspecting nothing, asked, "Where to?" supposing that Mrs. Barrett had carried her husband off to their home in Boston. He was naturally very much depressed for some time. Indeed he never fully recovered from the blow. He closed his theater at once, although he continued the salaries of his company, and finally he played a short engagement in Brooklyn, which proved, as so many of his friends feared, his last.

During this engagement a copy of the death mask of Barrett was sent to the club. It came in as Booth was starting out for the theater. He saw it in the hall, learned from whom it had come and told the boy in charge to "carry it up stairs." The lad, not understanding the order, took it to Booth's own room, removed the wrappings and placed it on a small table by Booth's bed. And there when he went up stairs and turned on the electric lights, in all the ghastly whiteness of the fresh plaster, he found it. This was, if possible, a greater shock to him than was the death of Barrett itself.—Laurence Hutton in Harper's Magazine.

Trees and the Air.

According to a reliable computation, a single tree is able through its leaves to purify the air from the carbonic acid arising from the respiration of a considerable number of men—as many as a dozen or a score. The volume of carbonic acid exhaled by a human being in the course of 24 hours is estimated at 100 gallons, and a single square yard of leaf surface, counting both the upper and under sides of the leaves, can decompose about a gallon of carbonic acid in a day.

Dancing In France.

France has already arrogated to herself supremacy in the terpsichorean art, but this proud position, according to M. Desrats, an acknowledged authority on dancing, is being rapidly lost. He has penned a report on the subject which, for dignity and despondency, might rank with the result of a royal commission. At the opera and the conservatoire, he points out, since the disastrous reign of Perrin, men have practically vanished from the "corps de ballet," and the noble traditions of the great corypheus, who could quote Cicero and Quintilian to their classes, have perished utterly. Women are all very well in their way, but they lack classical grace and refinement. Dear, dear! In society matters are still worse, and the dance as a fine art hardly exists, owing to the English and American influences. As a remedy for this crying evil M. Desrats suggests that nobody must be allowed to set up as a professor of dancing until he has received a diploma from the state or some competent body, a salutary provision which he declares to exist in Germany, Great Britain and the United States. We were certainly not aware of this provision and had no special desire to see it enforced. —London Chronicle.

Told Enough.

"Oh, don't worry about Mrs. Chattuer! She knows a good deal that she doesn't tell."

"My! What a wise woman she must be!"—Chicago Journal.

250,000 CURED.

Thousands of young men are made nervous wrecks, unfit for business, social pleasures or home duties by evil habits in youth, later excesses, or private diseases. W. C. Andrews, of Akron, O., says: "I read this paper and have seen many reports of remarkable cures made by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan. I decided to treat with them. Indiscretion was the cause of my trouble. I was weak and nervous; no ambition; back weak, pimples on the face; thin and haggard; eyes sunken and cheeks hollow; dreams and drains at night; memory poor; varicocele and weak parts; irritable; sinking spells; specks before the eyes; lack of confidence; no energy; and many other complaints. I had tried fourteen doctors, bought four electric belts took scores of bottles of patent medicines—all failed. I tried the New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, and it cured me. I am a Man Again. I have gained twenty-six pounds and am strong mentally, physically and sexually. It is a wonderful treatment."

WOMEN IN FRENCH FICTION.

Distorted Portraitures of French Wives and Mothers Presented by Novelists.

Miss Anna L. Bicknell, who lived for some years in the Tuileries as a governess in the household of Napoleon III, contributes to The Century an article on "French Wives and Mothers." This is richly illustrated by drawings by Boutet de Monvel. Miss Bicknell says:

Those who have gathered their opinions as to the real character of the average Frenchwoman from the romantic literature of the present century, more especially that of the last few years, would necessarily bear a severe judgment, tinged with a considerable amount of contempt. Such an opinion would, however, be unjust and wholly undeserved, as any impartial observer, having been privileged to share French home life, could truly tell them. The average English woman is very graphically depicted in English novels, and a foreigner can form a fair estimate of her merits and demerits from the descriptions of English domestic life presented by popular writers. But it is not so in France or in French literature. The real French gentlewoman deserves to be better understood, for she is totally unlike the heroines of modern novels, whose writers know about as much of aristocratic life as the author of "The Lady Flabella" in "Nicholas Nickleby." The pictures presented in Octave Feuillet's writings are perhaps the truest to nature as it is seen in some melancholy cases. But he himself certainly would have been ready to admit that the women he met in daily life had nothing in common with his morbid heroines. As he belonged to a good old family of the upper bourgeoisie, he had better opportunities of knowing the society which he depicted so powerfully in his novels of fashionable life than have the upstarts who describe salons of which they have never crossed the threshold.

But even in the works of Feuillet, although the frame is accurate, the portraits are those of exceptionally diseased minds. Women like Mme. de Champallon in "M. de Camors" or the dreadful Julia de Trecœur may exist in France or elsewhere, but those who know French society will certainly recognize more readily women like Mme. de Camors and her charming mother or the Suzanne of "La Clef d'Or," with the home of Sibylle and the dear old people so delightfully described there. Many examples might be quoted equally sweet and pure among the heroines of Feuillet's impassioned narratives, and one is convinced that these have been more faithfully copied from nature than the others.

The fact is that the great majority of French novelists belong to the Bohemia of literature and are not admitted within the precincts either of aristocratic circles or of the less refined but equally strict burgeois homes. They know only the borderland, peopled in general by the wealthy and adventurous foreign set which budded and expanded during the second empire and has now taken its place by the side of French society, but not within its pale.

A Realistic Scene.

"Realism is the thing," insisted the garrulous actor while they were taking their night lunch after the show. "Nothing takes like the real sawmill, the cotton mill, train of cars, fire engine, burning block, genuine horse and all that sort of thing.

"I discovered that when I was a kid getting up amateur performances. That's where I learned human nature before we youngsters knew anything about the ways of the world and had a comb with a piece of paper over it and a jew's harp and a mouth organ for the orchestra. I'll never forget when we gave 'Red Handed Antonius' in the barn—3 cents for adults, 1 cent for children over 5 and free seats for the balance. Everything was real. I had a corn knife for a sword, and there wasn't a soldier in the squad that didn't have a musket longer than himself. When we fought, the anger of battle flamed from our eyes, and when one fell he went down so hard that it took weeks to remove the bruises. The audience would get on their feet to cheer, and it took half a dozen husky marshals to keep them from going after the villain with pitchforks.

"When it came time to behead Antonius, the excitement was intense. The music of the orchestra was slow and dismal. The children had to be carried out, and they whooped as they went. The people held their breath as I ground the corn knife on a real grindstone and hissed my vow of vengeance. When I removed my coat and rolled up my sleeves, the breathing stopped. Just here my father entered by way of a granary door and carried me kicking off the stage. If he had not, I would have decapitated the youngster who was playing Antonius as sure as I am alive. If the whole thing hadn't been so realistic, we couldn't have held our audience for ten minutes. It's the same way the world over."—Detroit Free Press.

Laughed Himself to Death.

Among the historical incidents connected with the rathhaus is one relating to an old judge who laughed himself to death. One sultry day, reads the record, during a recess of the council the members were leaning from the windows of the rathhaus in the hope to catch any stray wind. It was the period of hoops and voluminous skirts, and maid shared with mistress the mania for distended attire. On this pulseless summer day a pretty servant girl in a wide hooped skirt and a gay bodice made her way through the loitering groups up to the fountain. She filled her tub and lifted it to her head, but in this movement, lo, the wonderful skirt was wrested from its fastenings and it dropped to the ground. The judge had seen the maid approach the fountain like a ship under full sail, and when he now beheld her, collapsed and abashed, he was filled with such humor that upon the spot he laughed himself to death.—"Stuttgart," by Elsie J. Allen, in Harper's Magazine.

She wanted to look at baskets, and for that purpose the clerk took from the shelves a large assortment until all but two were scattered over the counter. The woman did not want to buy, so she turned away, making the excuse, "I only came in to look for one of my friends." The clerk felt rather exasperated and replied, "Madam, if you have the slightest idea that your friends are in either of these two baskets on the shelves, I shall be pleased to take them down for you to examine."—Springfield Republican.

The Rabbit Industry.

It doesn't take much to start the rabbit industry—a few rabbits and a turnip patch or some other pasture—but it takes a mighty hustling to check it after it gets a good start. We kill about 14,000,000 of them in North Carolina every winter, but there are more here now than there were when Mr. Raleigh brought his immigrants over.—Wilmington (N. C.) Star.

Can't Hurt a Reporter.

That newspaper men are full of resources was well illustrated recently. One of the craft who lives on the south side is fond of seeing a chicken fight, and he has some good chickens. Recently he attended a cocking main and took one of his game chickens with him. There had been several lively bouts when a policeman appeared and gathered the crowd in. The newspaper man had hold of his chicken when the policeman arrived, and in his excitement held on to it.

At the hearing the policeman told his story, and no one denied being present or declared that the story was not true. The police magistrate turned to the newspaper man and said, "How does it come that you were there?"

The culprit looked puzzled for a moment, and then a smile broke over his face, and he said: "Why, you know, I am always after news. I heard about this main and got a tip that it was going to be raided, and I went there to get the news."

"That's all right," said the magistrate. "But what were you doing with a chicken in your hand?"

The newspaper man hesitated but an instant and said, "Well, you see, I wanted to clinch my news item as being true, so I just grabbed the chicken to show there was a chicken fight."

The magistrate looked at him a moment and said: "Well, you'll do. You are discharged."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Black Cap.

There is one particular part of the dress belonging to the order of the coif—the black cap—which the judges in England always put over their wigs when passing sentence of death. Little is known concerning this black cap, and many mistakes have been made about it. Mr. Sergeant Pulling, in his work "The Order of the Coif," says: "The black cap, or sentence cap, of the judges and sergeants is certainly not the coif, as Lord Campbell repeatedly states. It is, on the contrary, the covering expressly assigned to veil the coif on the only occasion when the coif was required to be hidden. By the ancient privileges of the sergeants the coif was not to be taken off even in the royal presence. The chief insignia of the order was to be so displayed when sitting on the bench or pleading at the bar, but this rule seems always to have been departed from in passing sentence of death.

"The head of the administrator of justice was then covered, as a token of sorrow, by the black sentence cap. This cornered cap, black cap, or sentence cap, as it is sometimes termed, is a piece of limp black cloth, which is put on the top of the wig. The cap is rarely put on, except when a prisoner has been convicted of murder, and then the judge places the cap on the top of his wig and passes sentence of death."—Gentleman's Magazine.

Analogous Reasoning.

A poet proffering his work to an editor said:

"This is a small poem, but quality is the main thing. I venture to think you'll find it true poetry."

Having read it the editor put it into a drawer and, handing the poet a 10 cent piece, said:

"This is a smallish coin, but I am so bold as to hope that you will be pleased with its purity. It is nearly all silver."—San Francisco Examiner.

"Lay" Plates.

In caring for the table during a dinner party it is customary to reserve the most valuable or artistic plates for the "lay service." The scheme of providing does not permit the guest to be without a plate before him, and between the courses plates are laid at each cover, one laid down while the used plate is removed. Cauldon Copeland and Royal Worcester china are much liked for "lay plates."—Philadelphia Press.

PROTECTION FOR AUBURN

Minister of Railways and Canals Sits On the T. V. C. Deputation Idea

The Water Works Company Object to Laying Mains on Private Property—Contract Closed for a Dumping Ground.

The Town Council met in the Clerk's office Saturday night in committee of the whole to discuss with the Peterborough Water Co. and the Auburn Woollen Mills Co. the question of better fire protection for Auburn.

There were present: Mayor Davis, in the chair; and Councillors Best, McWilliams, Robertson, J. M. White, W. H. White, Langford, Hamilton and Dawson.

The Peterborough Water Works Co. was represented by Messrs. W. H. Hill, G. W. Hatton, E. H. D. Hall, R. A. Morrow, G. Matthews and Supt. Henderson.

Mr. John Carnegie and James Kendry, M. P., represented the Auburn Woollen Mills Co.

Mayor Davis stated that Auburn was sadly in need of better fire protection. The Auburn Woollen Mills Co. had recently added to their plant a powerful steam pump and were prepared to give this protection under certain conditions which would be explained by the company's representative. He was of the opinion that the town should deal liberally with the Auburn people. The Water Works Co. would also be asked to open their hearts.

Mr. Carnegie, representing the Auburn Woollen Mills Co., stated that 1,000 feet of water mains would be required for efficient fire protection. As the town could insist on the Water Works Co. laying their mains across the river and furnishing this protection at a great cost, to let all parties out of the difficulty as cheaply as possible, he proposed that the Water Works Co. lay the mains, his company furnishing the water and power and the town paying them for the two hydrants necessary to protect their property, and the Water Works Co. for the one hydrant necessary to protect Auburn residences.

Mr. Hall, of the Water Works Co., was opposed to laying water mains on the property of the Auburn Woollen Mills Co. and the G. T. Railway, and the other representatives of the company present took the same view.

Councillor McWilliams thought the town and the Water Works Co. were sufficiently interested in Auburn and the Auburn Woollen Mills Co. to carry out the propositions of Mr. Carnegie. These mills stood first among our industries.

Other councillors expressed the same views but the Water Works Co. representatives would not yield an inch.

As there appeared to be no possibility of arriving at any definite plan of action owing to conflicting interests and the great diversity of opinion, it was suggested that the whole question be referred to a committee—this committee to meet a committee from the Water Works Co., and arrange some way out of the difficulty. This suggestion met with approval, and

On motion of Councillor W. H. White, seconded by Councillor Dawson, Councillors McWilliams, Langford and White were appointed a committee to confer with the Water Works people and, if possible, arrive at a satisfactory arrangement.

The Council then adjourned.

DUMPING GROUND.

Immediately after the Council's adjournment the Property Committee met and opened the tenders for a dumping ground, which were as follows:

R. Arnott	$150
Wm. Foster	125
W. H. Jackson	120
Robt. Nicholls	105

Mr. Robt. Nicholls' tender being the lowest he was awarded the contract.

THE T. V. C. DEPUTATION.

The question of sending a deputation to Ottawa to urge on the Government the necessity of a larger appropriation to the Trent Valley Canal then appeared in the estimates was then taken up by the Joint Committee and a committee from the Board of Trade.

J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., said that he had communicated with the Minister of Railways and Canals, asking him to name a date when he would receive a deputation re the Trent Valley Canal, and that he had received a discouraging reply.

Mr. Stratton then read the letter, in which the Minister stated that $600,000 had been placed in the estimates for this work and that he was almost certain that the Government would not increase this amount, but that the canal would be completed as rapidly as the finances of the country would permit. The letter also referred to the work as a comparatively local affair—one lacking national importance.

Mr. Stratton said that he had replied denying that the enterprise was a local one, but asserting on the contrary that it was one of vast imtance to the Dominion and deserving of speedy completion.

Mr. Dumble was of the opinion that the recent opposition to the work was all due to the Toronto Board of Trade condemning the scheme. Toronto was afraid that the T.V.C. when completed would divert traffic from her doors, as the Parry Sound Railway had done, and hence their kick.

Jas. Kendry, M. P., said that there was a stronger feeling in the House to-day against the scheme than ever, and that it was all owing to the action of the Toronto Board of Trade. He was strongly in favor of a deputation interviewing the Government.

Mr. McWilliams had been informed that there were not six persons present at the meeting of the Toronto Board of Trade at which the canal had been condemned. He believed that the proper course to pursue—now that the Government had shown its disinclination for a visit from a deputation—would be to draw the attention of the Toronto Board of Trade to the injustice of its action and ask for a retraction.

On motion of Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. McWilliams, it was decided to have a meeting of the Board of Trade called for the purpose of considering the stand taken by the Toronto Board of Trade.

The intention of sending a deputation was dropped—for the present at least—it not being considered wise to urge the point in view of the stand taken by the Minister of Railways and Canals.

Blind Tom.

Blind Tom, although otherwise an idiot, had a remarkable musical memory, and wonderful ability to reproduce compositions which were played in his hearing. When repeating what he had heard he imitated even the blunders and mistakes of the players, sometimes in a most comical fashion. He could play by ear, having no knowledge of the scientific side of music, over 400 different compositions.

The Consolations of Religion.

Mr. Bryce relates an amusing anecdote which he got from a missionary. A Basuto had returned to his native country from the diamond mines. He described to the missionary his experiences there. On one occasion his eye had fallen on a valuable diamond in the clay he was breaking into fragments. While he was endeavoring to pick it up he perceived the overseer approaching, and having it by this time in his hand he was for a moment terribly frightened, the punishment for the theft being very severe. The overseer, however, passed on. "And then," said the Basuto, "I knew that there was indeed a God, for he had preserved me."—London News.

He Had a Record.

A person who was bargaining for a mule in southwest Georgia asked the youth who owned the mule:

"Is he a good, lively creetur?"

"I reckon he air," replied the young man. "He kicked dad through a circus tent, broke Uncle Bill's leg in two places and throwed a preacher three times on a Sunday mornin!"—Atlanta Constitution.

AN INQUIRING LAD.

Personal Adornment Which Appeared to Be Unnecessary.

"When I was down in the Tennessee mountains doing my turn in that peculiar and primitive section," observed the special pension agent, "I had at various times such glimpses of life as you pampered children of the luxurious capital never get. I remember one June morning I arose from my simple bed of clapboards on the loft floor of a log cabin and proceeded down a ladder to the earth, thence a hundred yards down to the creek, where I was afforded ample opportunity for my matutinal ablutions, as the stream was big enough to run a sawmill with.

"As I splashed my face in the clear water and spluttered over it after the usual fashion of a man who likes to wash his face I was joined by the 10-year-old son of the family with which I was stopping. He stood on the shore watching me with much interest, which I am glad to say I returned with zest, for he was a picture boy. He was sandy and freckled and didn't look as if he had had a bath in the memory of man. His clothes were simple enough, consisting of a cotton shirt, and there was no hat to hide a head of hair which I am positive never felt the penetrating and persuading influence of a comb. He was too much interested in the mysteries of my toilet to say anything until I took out a comb and began to use it on my tangled locks. After a tug or two at it, looking at him meanwhile, he spoke.

"'Say, mister,' he said curiously, 'have yer got to do that there?'

"'Do what there?' I smiled in reply.

"'That there that yer doin.'

"'You mean combing my hair?'

"'Yes.'

"'Of course it has to be done.'

"'Every mornin this erway?'

"'Certainly.'

"'Well, geewhillerkins, mister,' he said, with much feeling, 'yer must be a heap of trouble to yerself.'"—Washington Star.

A STORY OF NAPOLEON.

He Liberated a Scotchman at Oberkampf's Request.

Napoleon had at one time many admirers in England, especially among the commercial classes, who suffered deeply from the war, but he alienated the sympathies of all such by his cruel arrest of the English who were in France at the time of the rupture of the peace of Amiens, in 1803. Some 12,000 English of both sexes were thus detained in irksome captivity till the close of the war, and hardly a family in the middle and upper classes but had to bewail the absence of some friend or connection.

Yet in individual cases Napoleon showed some magnanimity. A young Scotchman, one Robert Hendry, from Glasgow, a scientific dyer and chemist, had taken advantage of the peace to visit the great manufacturing houses of France, and he was staying at Jouy, where Oberkampf has established a huge cotton printing factory, when war suddenly broke out. Hendry was thereupon constituted a prisoner by the authorities, but allowed to remain on parole at Jouy.

Napoleon one day visited the factory unexpectedly, accompanied by Josephine. He made a rapid progress through the works. Villagers and work people, the latter numbering 1,400, assembled to witness his departure, cheering the cortege, and cheering still louder when the emperor was seen to take the cross from his own breast and affix it to that of the modest Oberkampf. Isabey painted the scene, and the picture is still to be found upon the walls of Versailles. But Oberkampf had still something to ask. Napoleon smiled propitiously, but made a wry face when he heard the petition, which was for the release of the prisoner. "An Englishman!" "No, sire, a Scotchman! His mother—his sisters depend on his labors." "Well, he shall be free, then!" said the emperor.—Household World.

that we had marched down years before—night again, it was, too—with a band of music, with fireworks flying everywhere, and with crowds on the sidewalk cheering, to the town hall, where there was a banquet, with a speech from the mayor, and so on. When this was nearly over, my father and my brother, who had come to meet me, went home to tell my mother I was coming.

"Home was half a mile or more away. A bunch of us, men of the regiment, started from the hall together. They fell off one after another, until finally I went on alone along the familiar street. It was bright moonlight. Far ahead, at the corner of the street down which I must turn for home, I saw her. She was waiting.

"When I had come to her, she lifted up her hands and pronounced my name, that was all, and then her arms were about my neck, and my old blue overcoat was wet with her falling tears. Her son had come home."—New York Sun.

The cravat was originally a large shawl worn around the neck, not for show, but for comfort, by a nation of eastern Europe called Cravates or Croats.

During the reign of Elizabeth English dudes wore shoes three feet long, the toe pointed and fastened up to the garter with golden chains, to which little bel were attached.

Bad Blood is a Good Thing

to be rid of, because bad blood is the breeding place of disfiguring and dangerous diseases. Is your blood bad? It is if you are plagued by pimples or bothered by boils, if your skin is blotched by eruptions or your body eaten by sores and ulcers. You can have good blood, which is pure blood, if you want it. You can be rid of pimples, boils, blotches, sores and ulcers. How? By the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

It is the radical remedy for all diseases originating in the blood. Read the evidence:

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me by my physician as a blood purifier. When I began taking it I had boils all over my body. One bottle cured me."—BONNER CRAFT, Wesson, Miss.

"After six years' suffering from blood poison, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and although I have used only three bottles of this great medicine, the sores have nearly all disappeared."—A. A. MANNING, Houston, Texas.

English Jacobite Societies.

To judge from the list of Jacobite clubs and associations given in the "Legitimist Calendar For 1895," which includes the order of the White Roses, the Devon White Rose club, the Legitimist Jacobite League of Great Britain and Ireland (ponderous title!), the Eastern Counties' (shade of Cromwell!) White Cockade club, the Forty-five club of Grimsby, the Glasgow Jacobite club, the Oxford University Legitimist club, the St. Ives (Hunts) Jacobite club, the Jacobite Restoration league, the Surrey White Rose league, the Mary Stuart club of Lanark, the Legitimist Registration union, the National Royalist and Jacobite association, the order of St. Germain and the Hemingford Grey Royal Oak club, not to mention our old familiar Thames Valley Jacobites and two or three foreign legitimist bodies, it ought not to be difficult for the supporters of the lost house of Stuart to put several hundred adherents in the field (or even Ludgate circus) if they so decide.—London Mail.

CORNWALL CANAL AND RIVER REACHES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvements at Upper Entrance of Cornwall Canal and River Reaches" will be received at this Office until 16 o'clock on Saturday the 30th day of April, 1898, for the works connected with the widening, straightening and deepening of the Upper Entrance of the Cornwall Canal and the River Reaches between Cornwall and Coteau Landing.

Plans and Specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 15 h day of April, 1898 at the Office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Cornwall. Printed forms of Tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $17,000 must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the condition requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of November, A. D., 189-, will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Street Inspection

The Street and Bridge Committee will make a tour of the town to-day for the purpose of inspecting the streets and bridges. The hour fixed for starting is 9 a.m. sharp.

Hiawatha Encampment

Mr. Herb. Snowden, S.W., of Hiawatha Encampment, No. 66, desires a full attendance of the Patriarchs at the regular meeting of the Encampment on the 27th inst. The first degree will be conferred on two candidates.

An Exciting Race

Saturday morning the steamers Eclipse and Beaver had an exciting race up the river. The Eclipse arrived in port first but her crew had to work hard for the victory, both vessels whistling for the locks at the same time. The Str. Sunbeam, although not in the race, brought up in the rear, arriving half an hour later.

Insure the Firemen

The proposition to insure the firemen against accidents looks like a sensible one and the councillor who brings the sheme to a successful issue will certainly earn the gratitude of the entire brigade. Some two years ago a half-hearted attempt was made in this direction. The cost would not be great, and, as long as our fire brigade is not a paid one, we believe this protection should be granted—and granted without quibbling.

A Run for the Fire Laddies

About eight o'clock last night an alarm was sent in from the Snowden block on Simcoe street. The brigade made a lightning turn-out, arriving on the scene in considerably less than a minute from the time the alarm was sounded. Their services, fortunately, were not required. A lamp had exploded in Mr. Mosley's apartments and a couple of blankets had been found sufficient to smother the flames. The damges were slight.

THOSE T. V. C. RESOLUTIONS

Col. Sam Hughes After the Scalps of the Toronto Board of Trade

When the Toronto Board of Trade adopted a resolution opposing further expenditure on the Trent Valley Canal, the members evidently forgot that the fire-eating colonel of the Victoria Warder would have his bile stirred by such action. If they had realized that he would get even by giving to the world his estimate of the Toronto Board of Trade and City Council, they would no doubt have paused ere they incurred such danger. In the last issue of the Warder he gives the following pen picture of the Toronto bodies:

"Reader, have you ever seen a committee of Toronto City Council or Toronto Board of Trade? If not, then you have missed much. Importance! nay, presumption; self-sufficiency, dignity, a superior lordliness, a bearing indicating a touch from some magic wand, in short, a sort of "hell-of-a-fellow' appearance, an aspect leading one to approach with uncovered head, bated breath and abject humility, saying, 'Please, gentlemen, aren't you somebody of importance?'"

St. Luke's Easter Concert

The annual concert under the auspices of the Girls' Guild will take place in the Opera House on Thursday evening, April 21st. Admission: Reserved seats 25 cents, back seats 15 cents. Plan of hall at Ormond & Walsh's. Secure your seats early before the crush.

First Run of the Season

The Canadian General Electric Co. Bicycle Club held the first club run of the season on Saturday afternoon. Lakefield was the destination, and about twenty riders participated. It proved quite a proposition to some of the new members—particularly the home stretch. At the time of going to press this morning, however, we were led to understand that all—or nearly all—had reached town.

A New Study for the Local Police

James McDonald's connection with the robbery of the Norwood post office will be definitely determined at the June sessions, which commence on the second Tuesday in June. The prisoner's identitty still remains a mystery, and, so far, all efforts to secure his photograph have proved abortive. McDonald is an enigma to the authorities—particularly to the local force.

Fire Sale at Mason's

The recent fire at E. F. Mason & Co's. has had the effect of slightly damaging by smoke the immense stock of groceries and provisions carried by this firm, and in order to faciliate renovation and make room for new goods, a clearing sale has been inaugurated and is now in full swing. Everything must go, and at almost your own price. Don't procrastinate! Call to-day!

Resume Work To-day

The Collegiate Institute and Public and Separate Schools resume work today after the Easter vacation. This short holiday constitutes an important breathing spell between the Christmas and midsummer vacations and pupils return to their work with increased vigor and determination. The old saw, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," is out of order so far as the studious portion of the rising generation is concerned.

Must Have Been Thirsty

Early Saturday morning County Constable Cochrane received a telephone message that a man had been attempting to break into the pump house of the water company on the river bank north of the town. At daylight he went up and with some difficulty arrested a man whom he found sleeping under the bushes near by. The man was brought down to the gaol and will appear before the Magistrate this morning charged with attempting to break into the premises. What under the sun did the man want in the pump house?

A Novel Advertising Scheme

Nearly every other man on George street Saturday night had conspicuously displayed in the band of his hat a small, light-colored, square card, much the same as those used by railway conductors to distinguish "through" passengers. The fellow who wore one was not at all curious, but smiled blandly at the nervous inquisitiveness of the fellow who hadn't one. It was simply a novel advertising scheme, devised by some cool, calculating cricketer to advertise the club's minstrel show on the 26th inst. The card bore the following legend: I have it on my list—Minstrels—Opera House, Tuesday, April 26th."

An Honorable Company

Minden Echo: "Our village was thronged on Wednesday last with settlers from Lutterworth, and all the way north to Sherbourne, and east to Guilford, it being "settling day" with the Rathbun Lumber Co. Our merchants benefitted very largely by the crowd and the large amount of money that came into the hands of the settlers on the occasion. We did not hear a single grumbler in the crowd, all seemed satisfied with the fairness of their settlement and a large quantity of summer supplies and goods were carried back to their homes by the settlers. It seemed like old times here to see the lumbermen paying out large amounts and the settlers looking happy, but unlike the old times, nearly every body went home sober."

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

"Jack" Haultain, an old member of the 57th Batt., is in town renewing old acquaintances.

Mrs. Bertram Orde and daughter, of Toronto, are visiting Miss Calcutt, Ashburnham.

Mr. J. W. Ridpath, of the Lakefield News, favored the Times with a call on Saturday.

Mrs. Jas. F. Crowley, of Peterborough, says the Lindsay Post, who was summoned to town a few weeks ago owing to the death of her death of her mother, Mrs. Dennis O'Donoghue, left for her home last evening. Mr. J. F. Crowley was also in attendance at the funeral, and returned on Monday last.

IS IT NOT ABOUT TIME?

Tenders are Being Asked for in Reference to Street Watering

To citizens compelled to walk about town with their eyes, ears and nostrils filled with dust and flying sand, this question of street watering, if not timely, will at least cause them to remove their knuckles from their eyes, temporarily forget their troubles and cease uttering maledictions on the councillor in charge of the Street and Bridge Committee.

For weeks past we have been living in a veritable Soudanese sand storm until life—on the streets at all events has become a burden, and we have been mentally asking ourselves when and how it was all to end.

True, some few blocks have been watered, but owing to no street scraping having been done it simply means to a large proportion of our citizens "out of the frying pan into the—mud." Mud; not ordinary mud, but a deep black surface accumulation of filth, leavened with a little decent old-time earth its only redeeming feature.

Surely things were not always thusly. Last year we think the Street and Bridge Committee did things decently and in order.

No excuses, gentlemen! We have reached the limit of human endurance. We can stand this infernal paradox—sand, dust and mud—no longer.

Drunk and Disorderly

A drunk and disorderly peanut vendor spent Saturday night in the cells. He was released yesterday and will come up before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning to explain how it all happened.

Funeral of the Late R. F. Elliott

Sorrowing friends yesterday accompanied to their last resting place in Little Lake cemetery the mortal remains of R. F. Elliott, who dropped dead on the street last Thursday. The funeral cortege was an exceedingly large one—the employees of the Peter Hamilton M'f'g. Co. turning out in a body.

To-Night's Opera

The merry, melodious Japanese comedy, "The Geisha," with all its alluring effects, its pretty and catchy airs and beautiful scenery, will be presented at Bradburn's Opera House to-night. Successes of "The Geisha" are marked with every move on the stage. Mr. Duffy's extravagance is in scenery and costume, which were all brought from the Land of Chrysanthemums and are as beautiful as that flower. A large number of seats are agready taken. The lovers of opera should secure their seats at once.

IMPURE BLOOD IN SPRING.

This is the almost universal experience. Diminished perspiration during winter, rich foods and close confinement indoors are some of the causes. A good Spring Medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla is absolutely necessary to purify the blood and put the system in a healthy condition at this season.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best family cathartic and liver tonic. Gentle, reliable sure.

Wholesale Ash Dealer

Mr. Chas. Stevens, of Napanee, the wholesale dealer in hardwood ashes, is in town. For some years past Mr. Stevens has been buying ashes in Peterborough and surrounding country through his agent, M. M. Stevens (Mrs. Geo. Stevens). Mr. Stevens informed a Times reporter that until further notice his business in Peterborough will be under the management of his nephew, Chas. Manson Stevens, who arrived in town yesterday. The highest price in cash will be paid for dry hardwood ashes, rags, bones, old copper, and in fact all kinds of old junk. His storehouse is located on the Grand Trunk siding, Ashburnham. See advt. in to-morrow's issue.

Does Any Belong to You?

The Postmaster General's report of the dead letter branch up to the year ending June 30., 1897, shows the number of letters received there containing money or other enclosures of value, the amount and nature of their contents. The latter make a rather queer assortment and include money, bills of exchange, bonds cheques etc. to the value of over $200,000; certificates, accounts, baby bibs and clothes, barometers, botanical specimens, butterflies, button-hole lamp, coyote skins, chewing gum, dress coat, Prince Albert coat, deer's horns, elk skin, false teeth, four peacock feathers, fishing flies, fountain pens, garters, glove stretcher, gloves, hair brush, hair switch, straw hat, honey, maple sugar, night shirt, plum pudding, pocket books, porous plaster, rubbers, shawl, silver and gold articles galore, rat skin, trousers. The total number of these letters is 17,406, of which 15,884, have been disposed of.

Young Joly Wounded

Lieut. Joly de Lotbiniere, son of the Minister of Inland Revenue, and brother of Mrs. Greenwood, Peterborough, arrived on Friday on the steamship Lake Superior. He is returning from India, where he was on active service in the frontier trouble. He was seriously wounded, and is on his way to his home near Quebec to recuperate.

The greater includes the less. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures scrofula, and may be depended upon to cure boils and pimples.

Spring Medicine

Is made a necessity by the impure condition of the blood after winter's hearty foods, and breathing vitiated air in home, office, schoolroom or shop. When weak, thin or impure, the blood cannot nourish the body as it should. The demand for cleansing and invigorating is grandly met by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives the blood just the quality and vitality needed to maintain health, properly digest food, build up and steady the nerves and overcome that tired feeling. It is the ideal Spring Medicine. Get only

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Interesting Items of Local and District Happenings in Brief

—Additional local matter on page 5.

—Saturday's market was not so large as usual.

—The fakir element appeared to be out on the market in force on Saturday, there being no less than eight shouting at the same time.

—Maskalonge are said to be almost as plentiful this season as suckers. A couple of fine 'lunge were scooped up in a sucker net at the locks on Saturday.

—Suckers are up, and the small boy is devoting his spare moments to "jigging' for them. The board of health should see that the fish are not left lying about the piers and locks to putrufy in the hot sun.

—Arrangements have been completed for the game of basket-ball between Peterborough Y.M.C.A. and the Lindsay team. The match will be played this evening in the Lindsay skating rink. The Citizens' band will be in attendance, and will furnish music before the game.

—Orillia Times: A mail bag lost since last November turned up this week. During the erection of the new depot a bag containing the mail from Barrie was thrown off the night train and fell below the platform, where it lay unnoticed until this week, when it was discovered by a workman. Fortunately the contents were small and not very valuable.

A Free and Easy Translation

A countryman wandering about a churchyard came upon a stone having the inscription, "Sic transit gloria mundi." "What does it mean?" he asked of the sexton, who had been explaining the inscription to him. The sexton peered toward it and not wishing to show any ignorance, replied: "Well, it means that he was sick transiently, and went to glory Monday."

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia., Lyman Sons, & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Positively refuse all substitutes.

For Sale or To Rent.

That valuable property situated on the corner of Bethune and Edinburgh streets, for sale or to rent. Parties intending to purchase or rent a handsome and commodious residence should not fail to inspect this place. The house is a four story brick, 32 x 42, fitted up in modern style, with every convenience, such as city water, bath room, electric light, first class outbuildings, including stable for three horses, driving shed for six rigs, ice house, etc. There is a fine lawn and vegetable garden attached to the house, also a number of fruit trees and shrubbery. The above property will be sold cheap or leased for a term of years. For further particulars apply on the premises to J. R. Donell.

ULTIMATUM TO SPAIN GOES TO-MORROW

There Shall be No Deadlock in Regard to a Message to be Sent to the Cortes.

CONGRESS VOTES ON AN IMPORTANT AMENDMENT

The Recognition of Independence of Cuba struck Out on Motion of Representative Dingley—Tremendous Crowd Besieges the Capitol.

Special to the Times.

Rome, April 18.—Commander Bronson, the United States special envoy, has left Italy without concluding any definite arrangement for the purchase of warships. It is stated here on good authority that the United States do not so much desire to purchase ships as to prevent purchases by Spain.

GUNS FOR SPAIN

TWO QUICK-FIRING FORTY POUNDERS SECURED IN LONDON.

London, Eng., April 18.—The quick-firing forty-pounders that have been on exhibition at the Covent Garden halls this season, and are owned by the Maxim-Nordenfeldt Company, have been removed in a hurry, having been sold to the Spanish Government.

A SILLY CANARD

A REPORT THAT HAS EXCITED ALL LONDON YESTERDAY.

London, Eng., April 18.—Half-penny papers are selling on the streets this afternoon with flaming placards "Canadian gunners help the United States,' based on a Toronto dispatch fifty Quebec, Toronto and Kingston artillerymen left the Canadian service with official leave to enter the service of the United States.

SPAIN'S WAITING GAME

TO THROW THE BLAME OF PROVOKING WAR ON THE UNITED STATES.

New York, April 18.—No unusual program has been arranged by Speaker Reed and other leaders of the House for disposing of the Cuban resolutions passed on Saturday night by the Senate. Both the Senate and House resolutions will undoubtedly be sent to the conference committee, as there is no probability that the House will yield and agree to the Senate resolution as it stands.

ANOTHER AMENDMENT PROBABLE

Senator Teller's amendment disavowing any intention of annexation, armed occupation, or a protectorate for Cuba strengthens the cause of the United States in Europe, and deprives Spain of a formidable weapon. It places the action of the United States upon the highest moral plane and the indications are that all the influence of the Administration will be employed to secure the adoption of the House resolution with possibly the Teller amendment added.

The opinion is gaining ground, especially among army men, that the prospects for peace are better, and that as soon as the President's ultimatum is tendered, seeing the magnitude of the armament, and the hopelessness of resistance, Spain will haul down her flag.

The European powers will not renew their attempt to mediate. The action of the United States Senate is also likely to paralyze any possible mediation by the Pope.

AMERICA'S PRETENSIONS.

It is believed in Madrid that President McKinley will lay the American pretensions before Spain, demanding a reply on the principal points of settlement and a cessation of all land and naval reinforcements implying the possibility of a renewal of the struggle in Cuba. All such pretensions are sure to meet with a firm refusal on the part of Spain, which, however, will say nothing aggressive in her reply, as the Government is determined to fix on the United States the responsibility for provoking war.

THE FLYING SQUADRON

A RUMOR THAT IT WILL SAIL TO SOME DISTANT POINT AT ONCE.

Fort Monroe, Va., April 18.—Rumors are in circulation here that the flying squadron will sail for some distant point to-day. The bunkers of several of the vessels are being filled with coal.

ULTIMATUM ON WEDNESDAY

UNDERSTOOD THAT LEADERS HAVE DECIDED THERE SHALL BE NO DEADLOCK.

Washington, April 18.—A crowd large enough to take Havana besieged the House end of the Capitol this morning. Of the gallery in the House only twelve rows will be open to the public, the balance being reversed, each member receiving two tickets.

It is now understood that the leaders have decided that there shall be no deadlock. No matter which side has to recede, it would be unfortunate to force upon the President the clause for a recognition of a Cuban Republic, owing to his strong stand against it. Resolutions will probably be passed so that the ultimatum can be sent to Spain on Wednesday when Cortes meets.

TO NURSE THE WOUNDED

THREE HUNDRED SISTERS OF CHARITY TO GO TO THE FRONT.

New York, April 18.—Three hundred Sisters of Charity, from Roman Catholic institutions in this city and vicinity will go the front to nurse the sick and wounded soldiers and sailors when hostilities begin.

THE CLIMATE A FACTOR

SPAIN TO PROLONG THE CAMPAIGN BY GUERILLA WARFARE IN CUBA.

Washington, April 18.—The report has been received here that Spain will back down as soon as Congress takes action, but officials connected with the Spanish legation deny it and say that Spain will prolong the campaign into the unhealthy season by guerilla warfare in Cuba.

PASSED THE HOUSE

DINGLEY AMENDMENT CARRIED BY A VOTE OF 179 TO 157.

Washington, April 18.—The House took up the Senate resolutions at noon. Reed and the Administration were working hard and the vote was large enough to strike out the independence clause in the Senate resolution. It will go to Conference Committee and may be there till to-morrow.

Dingley moved the concurrence with the Senate resolution with the amendment striking out recognition of independence of Cuba clause and the final vote sustained Dingley by 179 to 157.

LABOR UNION FOR WAR

SPANISH STEAMER LADEN WITH 10,000 BARRELS OF FLOUR.

New York, April 18.—By voting down the resolution to approve of the peace speech yesterday the Central Labor Union has put itself on record in favor of war.

The work of placing Long Island Sound in a good defensive condition has proceeded rapidly for the last two weeks and the coast cities are now reasonably safe.

The Spanish steamer Panama is loading ten thousand barrels of flour here for Spanish army in Cuba, and will endeavor to get away before the Government takes action to stop her.

ALL HOPE GONE

MOB LAW SEEMS TO RULE IN BARCELONA AND MALAGA.

Madrid, April 18.—The press here is furious on account of the action of the United States Senate. It demands a forcible rebuke to "American impertinence." Guards around the American legation and consulates at Barcelona and Malaga have been increased, as outbursts of the mob are feared. There is practically no hope of a settlement of the differences with America.

TO CUT OFF SUPPLIES

WILL PREVENT EXPORTATION OF COAL AND PROVISIONS TO SPAIN.

Washington, April 18.—Congress will almost immediately pass a resolution at the request of the President prohibiting the exportation of coal, provisions and other supplies to Spanish ports. Entrance papers will be refused to all ships of whatever nation carrying contraband of war to Spanish ports. The State Department will probably ask the South American Governments to observe the law concerning the sale of coal to Spanish vessels. This would cut off supplies to Spanish vessels from all ports except those in Cuba and Porto Rico.

LUCERNE HAS BEEN SOLD

ALLAN LINE STEAMER PURCHASED BY THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

Montreal, April 18.—The Allan Line people here this morning received a cable from the office in Liverpool announcing that their S.S. Lucerne had been sold and that the vessel was to be given up at St. John, N. B., on her arrival there. It is understood that the purchaser is the United States Government.

BONDS FOR A REPUBLIC.

Washington, April 18.—Gen. Grosvenor will make a speech in the House to-day, in which he will declare that a million Cuban bonds have been offered in the United States to secure influence for the recognition of a Cuban Republic.

CAN'T BUY THE O'HIGGINS

UNITED STATES GIVES UP HOPES OF SECURING ANY MORE WAR SHIPS.

Washington, April 18.—It was stated at the Navy Department this afternoon that the efforts to secure Chilian battleship O'Higgins have been practically abandoned, and that there is no longer any prospect that the United States desires, or will be able to secure, any more ships either belonging to foreign nations or being built in foreign ship-yards.

SENATE VOTES IT DOWN

HOUSE RESOLUTION DEFEATED ON A VOTE BY THE SENATORS.

Washington, April 18.—In the Senate Mr. Davis, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, urged that the House Resolution be accepted in order to avoid further delay. He moved that the House resolution be concurred in. His motion was defeated.

TRIED TO HOLD UP AN OTTAWA TRAIN

Single-Handed, Henry Eskrigge Ordered Passengers to Give Up

Flourished a Revolver and Demanded That the Passengers Hand Over Their Cash to Him

Special to The Times.

Ottawa, April 18.—What to all appearances was an attempt to "hold up" a train occurred on the C.P.R. express between Montreal and Ottawa in broad daylight late on Saturday afternoon. Among the passengers boarding the Soo train at the Windsor station that afternoon was a stylishly dressed young man about twenty-two years of age, who gives the name of Henry Eskrigge, and his address as Boston, Mass. Nothing strange was noticed in the conduct of the passenger until about an hour after the train left Montreal.

MONEY OR THEIR LIVES.

When the train was some distance from a stopping place Eskrigge rose from his seat and went into the vestibule of the car. In about five minutes he came through the door flourishing a 32 caliber revolver and calling for passengers to fork over their cash or suffer death. The sight of the man caused tremendous excitement among the passengers. The scene can be better imagined than described. The male passengers became as pale as death and hid under the seats, the ladies screamed and fainted, and there was general consternation on all sides.

ROBBER OVERPOWERED.

The commotion attracted the attention of the train officials, who rushed to the car and succeeded in surrounding the man and taikng the revolver from him before anybody had been injured. He was bound hand and foot and taken to the baggage car, where he was closely watched until Ottawa was reached. He is now lodged in the police station in this city.

A CANADIAN HONORED

DR. BEAUSOLEIL THE RECIPIENT OF A FRENCH EDUCATIONL TITLE.

Montreal, April 18.—Dr. Beausoleil president of the Canadian Medical Association, has received from the French Government the decoration of Officier d'Academie, in recognition of his services to education.

ILLNESS AND MANIA

INFLUENCED PETER CHANTLER, OF WOODSTOCK, TO TAKE HIS OWN LIFE.

(Special to the Times.)

Woodstock, April 18.—His mind unsettled by long bodily weakness and inflamed by recent religious mania, Peter Chantler, a laborer, told his wife he was going fishing, and went to a barn and hanged himself. He leaves a widow and two grown children.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 19, 1898

LENGTH OF THE WAR

Looking upon the war between Spain and the United States from a seat in the grand stand, we Canadians are interested mainly in knowing how long the fight will last. The tone of New York comment would indicate that the States expect Spain to yield so soon as Cuba is taken from her. But there is no reason for supposing that such will be the case. The fleet of the Republic could not blockade Spanish ports, because there are no coaling stations held by the United States in the Mediterranean. And from the coast of Spain an innumerable fleet of privateers, at no cost to the Government of the country, would issue forth to plunder the commerce of her enemy in the four quarters of the globe.

Neither power is strong enough upon the sea to bring the war into the other's country. It would be an indefinitely prolonged guerilla warfare, in which the States would be the greatest loser, and Great Britain and Germany the principal gainers, since the shipping of the world would have to be carried in British and German bottoms.

It will not be a war of armies. When the Spaniards have been driven from Cuba, the Spanish Government will have but so much more money to expend upon the naval operations. They will fatten on the rich plunder of the commerce of the States. The other powers may intervene, but unless they do, the war might well go on forever.

The Toronto World asks: "How can we prevent the downfall of American women?" Teach them to face toward the front when leaving the street car.

• • •

We trust that the American Government, in purchasing a ready-made fleet, will not overlook the Knapp roller boat. It will not absorb the war vote of fifty millions.

• • •

Uncle Sam will not get much good of his crews of amateur sailor men if the Spanish cruisers heave in sight before the naval militia gets its stomach adjusted to a life on the ocean wave.

United States vessel owners have been notified that they render themselves liable to a fine of $1,000 if they employ Canadians on Lake Michigan steamers; but in spite of this ruling, our noble, kind-hearted, generous Uncle Sam is still willing to employ Canadians in places of danger on board Yankee warships.

Our local boiler plate contemporaries have decided to give their readers some news that doesn't come through the Toronto boiler plate factory. They are dishing up a small amount of war news daily and "setting up" the same in type in their own offices. The Times always supplies its readers with matter of this kind.

Flooded Otonabee Land

Mr. George H. Pope, Trent Valley Canal Valuator, was in town yesterday, looking into the matter of the flooded Otonabee lands. Nothing, Mr. Pope says, can be done in the matter until the water falls. The Minister of Railways and Canals, he says, stated on the floor of the House some time ago that the flooding of the lands was not caused by the Hastings dam. The water is lower on the sill of the dam this year than at the same time last season, or the season before. This year it measures 8 feet 4 1-2 inches; in 1897 it was 8 feet 7 inches, in 1896 it measured 9 feet 4 inches.

Against the Cramming System

The London school board has passed a resolution against the evil of cramming for examinations. The resolution went through unanimously. It was a lengthy recital of the case. It is declared wrong, unfair and unjust to judge the ability and character of a teacher by the results of examinations. Reference is made to the severe injury to health growing out of the system. Confidence is expressed in the present staff of headmasters, and the recommendation follows that "at the next midsummer examinations candidates only be sent up such as by reason of age, physical power and mental capacity would, in the judgment of the headmaster, be capable of going forward with higher work to their own advantage." Others they are advised to restrain to their ultimate profit and real education. In consequence, the board urges parents to assist the board and headmasters to curb the present inordinate desire to have pupils pass.

THIS TIME IN QUYON

Hundreds in the Town Can Vouch for the Truthfulness of the Story.

Mrs. Rass is Cured by the Great Spring Medicine PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

She Suffered for Long Years from Frightful Neuralgia

She Says:
"No Tongue Can Describe the Agonies I Suffered."

Paine's Celery Compound the Great Medical Prescription for Neuralgia, Sciatica and Rheumatism.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS:
"PAINE'S" IS THE KIND THAT CURES

The quiet little town of Quyon, situated on the Ottawa river, has furnished many a strong and convincing testimonial for earth's most popular medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. One of the latest letters received from Mrs. David Rass, a lady well known and highly esteemed; she writes as follows:

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO.,

DEAR SIRS:—I have much pleasure in testifying to the worth of your life-saving medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. I was a victim of neuralgia in its worst form for many years, and no tongue can describe the agonies I suffered. A friend recommended your Compound to me, and after using two bottles I am completely cured. I cheerfully recommend Paine's Celery Compound to the world, especially to all who suffer the agonizing tortures of neuralgia.

Yours very truly,
MRS. DAVID RASS, Quyon, P. Q.

Toot Your Own Horn

It is an old and a true saying that a man is known by the company he keeps. It is also true that if you don't blow your own horn no one else will do it for you. Get out of the old rut and recognize the fact that a little "tootin' of your own horn" is the road to more business. A good, up-to-date ad. in the Times is sure to pull trade. Our daily and weekly has, we claim, over forty thousand readers. Just think of it! Everyone of this vast number a money spender! It is only dead men who don't use our columns. As an instance of what an advertisement will do in the Times, Mrs. Caldwell, of 20 Queen street, a few days ago, inserted a small ad. for boarders. She secured three young men in less than as many days as direct result of advertising. Mr. Wm. Snowden advertised in the evening papers for a couple of servant girls, but got none. An ad. in the Times brought him a grist of girls.

HIS BUSY DAY.

It Is Easier to Forget Some Things Than to Remember Them.

The business man was very much occupied when one of his acquaintances came in.

"I want to ask you"— began the caller, but the other, without looking up, waved one hand back of him and reduced the friend to silence. After waiting half a minute the visitor tried again.

"I won't take much of your time," he said. "This is something too important to be neglected or I'd go away and come again."

"I suppose there's no use of my trying to get through with this before dark anyhow," was the rejoinder, with a sigh.

"I'm sorry it's necessary to interrupt you."

"Oh, it's all right. When I come to think of it, I wouldn't know whether I had the right answer when I got through."

"You could easily have the bookkeeper verify it, couldn't you?"

"No. I tried the bookkeeper on it. He didn't know any more about it than I did."

"Isn't it anything connected with business?"

"No. If it were, I'd be comparatively serene. Business isn't the only thing in life."

"It's a great deal of it, though."

The calculator rang for the office boy, and when he appeared said, "Thomas, you take this $2 bill and buy me as many works on arithmetic as you can for it." Then turning to his friend with the air of a cross questioner he said:

"Why do men engage in business?"

"To make money."

"And what do we want with money? We want independence and respect. We want to feel that we can hold up our heads in the world and not be obliged to face humiliation. The purposes of this calculation, distant from business though they may be, are the same. I have a boy who has done well in his studies and who does me the honor to ask my advice every once in awhile. Most boys don't do that. They think it's impossible for their fathers to know very much owing to the misfortune they labored under in not having the same schoolteachers. This boy of mine remarked yesterday that he was going to take up cube root today. Have you tried to extract any cube roots since you left school?"

The caller answered in the negative.

"Then you don't know how much you have forgotten. It's a heap easier to learn to extract a cube root in the first place than it is to remember it again after you have got out of practice. But I'm going to keep at it. Tonight he'll come home with some examples to do and Napoleon when he started for St. Helena didn't feel a bit worse than I will if I have to lay down my lead pencil and paper and own up that I can't do them."—Detroit Free Press.

Borrowing and Lending.

In old times, when the country was new and shops and stores were a day's journey from the door of the householder, borrowing appeared sometimes a necessity. The good man or woman of the house came to an emergency where nothing but a call upon the neighbors seemed to meet the case. In most instances lending was a cheerful courtesy, and the borrower merely felt under obligations to reciprocate if occasion offered. But every community had what might be called its professional borrowers—families who perhaps were not as improvident as they were greedy and selfish. What they borrowed they didn't have to buy, and anything obtained in this way was clear gain. They would borrow anything that the neighbors would lend them, from the carving knife to the family carriage, and it was a fortunate circumstance indeed if the things came back in good condition. No matter what the breakage, the entire family would testify that it was cracked and came to pieces almost immediately.

Borrowing with some people is almost equivalent to a peremptory demand for one's property without the slightest idea or intent of compensation. There is one kind of borrower, however, who is more difficult to get along with than all the rest. It is the man who comes on one's premises in the absence of responsible persons and takes away what he wants, telling his neighbor afterward that as nobody was home he took the article, for he was sure the owner wouldn't mind. Possibly the owner might not mind so much if the thing were returned promptly and in good order. But it is likely to be something of everyday necessity, the lack of which causes its owner great inconvenience, if not serious loss.—New York Ledger

The Criminal and the Villain.

"I was shadowing a well known criminal one evening," said a detective, "and was rather surprised to find that he made straight for an east end theater. I followed him into the gallery. He settled down comfortably, and it was soon clear to me that he had come out that evening for no other than the innocent purpose of enjoying the play. Nobody in the gallery was worth robbing. I staid on for the fun of the thing.

"The play was a heavy melodrama, in which the usual kind of villain tried to rob the common or garden order of hero of untold wealth and to marry his sweetheart at the same time. He committed one murder and instigated a couple of others.

"I was less interested in the play than I was in the demeanor of my friend.

"He gnashed his teeth at the villain's villainy and hissed him with mighty energy. He was loudest in his applause of the hero's platitudes. Toward the end of the play, when the villain was getting criminal whistled in his thrillest tones—whistling constitutes the most effective applause of the east end gods—and went into ecstacies when the villain was finally handcuffed.

"I could not help thinking that there must be some good in the most hardened criminal and that his life might be very different if his training had only been in the right direction and scope had been given for the development of the better side of his nature."—Strand Magazine.

TRAINMAN'S TOOTH ACHED

So He Decided to Get a Freight Train to Pull It.

"Say, did you hear about my friend Bill?" said a trainman. "Well, that fellow has made me laugh more times than once. Not long ago Bill gets a jumping toothache. He wants to have that tooth out, but he don't want to pay the money, nor he ain't got the nerve to have the thing done. All the same that tooth is keeping him up at night, and Bill he almost goes wild. 'Either me or that tooth,' says Bill; 'one or the other. I ain't going to stand this sort of life.'

"All the same, when Bill starts to go to the dentist his knees begin to bend, and he is so scared that the tooth stops hurting. But when he turns back and reaches the house the tooth is plugging him again. Now, Bill thinks of a great scheme. What does he do but buy a piece of strong string (say, you know this kind of silk thread?), and he waxes that and ties it to his tooth so tight that it cannot come off. Then Bill walks down to the railroad station. You see, it was his idea to tie the string to a freight car, and then when the train started it would jerk the measly tooth out.

"He finds a freight and ties the string to the coupler of the last car and stands around to wait until the train starts. Well, sir, he begins to feel chilly about the gills. The more he thinks of the time when the train is going to move the worse he feels. Every time a whistle blows he jumps. 'Well, I guess I'd better untie,' thinks Bill, 'and come again another day,' but when he goes to loosen the string he finds that it's no go, and he can't jerk the thing loose because the other end is on the tooth.

"Well, sir, that train begins to start, and Bill he doesn't have the nerve to stand back, so he just trots on behind like a little pup on the end of a chain. 'Where are you going, Bill?' hollers out a feller. 'You seem to be in a hurry.' Well, sir, Bill starts to swear like mad, but the train is beginning to go a little fast, and he has to commence to lope like a jack rabbit. You see, the train had been going through the city, but now it started to get outside. Bill didn't have the nerve to stand still, so he just humped himself after the train like it was something that he wanted bad.

"'Say, mister, why are you running that way?' asked a brakeman who got on to the thing. Of course that sort of guy made Bill madder than ever, but he had to lope on. Lucky for Bill the train had to slow up for a crossing, and while it stopped he borrowed a knife and cut the string. But, say, it was funny to see Bill chasing the freight."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Catching Thieves by Code.

"Most folks think an elevator starter has a very easy job, but they're wrong," said the man who has charge of the elevators in a La Salle street skyscraper.

"It seems to keep you busy, but the work looks easy," remarked a bystander.

"You think just what the others do—that we have nothing to do but tell the conductor of each elevator when to start up," replied the starter. "Seeing that the elevators are not overloaded and that they are not all either at the top or bottom of the building at once is the easiest part of our work. The hardest is stopping thieves. Pickpockets and overcoat lifters work the skyscrapers regularly. I've spoiled their game in this building, though."

"How?"

"I have arranged a code of signals by which I can, without attracting the attention of anybody else, warn the elevator conductor to keep his eye on certain persons while in the car, see them if they do any pocketpicking and notice at which floor they leave the car. For instance, if on a cold day like this two men well dressed, but without overcoats, come in here, as soon as they step into an elevator I say, 'That's all right, No. 7.' All you see is that the elevator starts up at once. The elevator man, however, knows that I suspect the last persons entering his car may be overcoat thieves, and it is his duty to notice at what floor they leave the car and, if possible, which room they enter. If instead of saying, 'That's all right, No. 7,' I had said, 'Go ahead, 7,' the elevator conductor would have known I suspected the last two men—for pickpockets work in pairs—in his car were pickpockets, and he would keep a constant watch on them."

"How does your system work?"

"Well, we've caught four pickpockets and seven overcoat thieves already this winter, and the season isn't half ended. The public doesn't realize how much it owes to the elevator starters, who are generally considered a lazy lot of fellows with an easy job."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

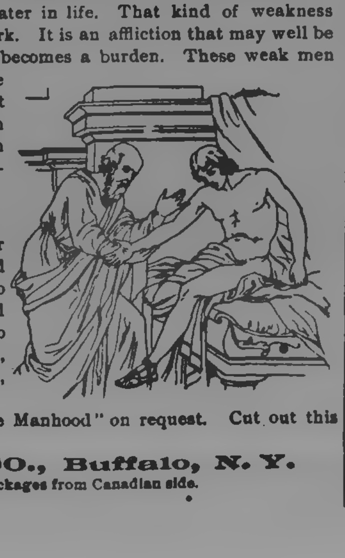
NEARLY ALL MEN

experience a sexual weakness sooner or later in life. That kind of weakness comes both from abuses and from overwork. It is an affliction that may well be dreaded. It destroys ambition, and life becomes a burden. These weak men can be cured—no question about that. The flight of years can not be stopped, but healthful, natural feelings and powers can be restored. If those powers have been lost, our treatment and appliances will restore them beyond a doubt.



OUR FREE OFFER

In order to show our implicit faith in our treatment, we will send our medicines and appliances for a free trial of ten days to all men whose sexual vigor is gone and whose organs are small. Not a dollar is to be paid for the trial. If it is satisfactory, then we are to be paid. If unsatisfactory, send the outfit back to us.

We will send our free book, "Complete Manhood" on request. Cut out this notice or mention this paper.

CANARIES

They Are Subject to Many Diseases—How They Should Be Treated.

To neglect the cleanliness of food, cage or water is a sure means of bringing on disease. The cups should be so arranged as to be easy of access for the bird's head, and the bathing dish should be shallow and large enough to prevent the bird from injuring his plumage in his vigorous plunges.

Perches which are too small are a source of misery to the bird. They should be—when of the same size throughout—about twice the diameter of a common lead pencil.

If a young canary is observed to sleep more than usual or if it has the appearance of a puff ball, it should be taken in hand at once. Probably it is suffering from indigestion, arising from unwholesome or stale food, or from being given too many delicacies. The bird should be caught and a couple of drops of castor oil dropped down his throat, or the drinking water may be removed from the cage for a couple of hours and then put back with a few drops of cod liver oil floating on the top.

Either of these remedies will probably afford relief. The bird should then be removed to a dry, warm place and fed on crushed hemp for a few days.

Diarrhoea is caused by giving too much green food, food which is wet or decayed or stale seeds. Bad drinking water is another frequent cause.

When the first symptoms of moult are observed, give a little magnesia in the drinking water, 10 or 15 grains to a wineglassful, or put in the fountain a senna leaf, changing it every day.

To catch cold when moulting is almost always certain death to the bird. Therefore avoid drafty places for the cage.

At this time an abundance of food is necessary, and must be given by additions of a little hemp seed, white bread soaked in milk and lettuce or endive. The bird should also be kept warm.

Canaries are subject to many diseases. A common complaint is asthma. This generally arises from indigestion and yields to plaintain and rape seed moistened with water as the sole food. In very bad cases leave off hemp seed and use rape only; give abundance of bread soaked in water and pressed; lettuce or watercress, according to season; twice a week give a boiled bread and milk ball about as large as the end of the thumb.

This is made by throwing a piece of the crumb of bread into a cup of milk, boiling and stirring with a wooden spoon till it is of the consistency of pap. It must be given cold and always freshly made. If allowed to sour, it will give indigestion. This paste acts as a purge and its effects must be watched.

For overgrown claws and beak use sharp scissors and take care to avoid drawing blood. The long claws are a source of discomfort and danger, especially when the female is nesting.

A bird which is egg bound needs immediate treatment. Give coarse brown sugar and drop some sweet oil into the duct.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Singular Pet.

In a "Tour Around Hawaii," written in 1825, is this amusing description of an odd pet, the favorite of two native women:

When we reached the house of our host, the head man of Kapapala, we met a cordial reception.

Few of the Hawaiian females are without a pet, usually a dog. Here we observed a species of favorite that we had not seen before. It was a curly tailed hog about a year and a half old, three or four feet long and in tolerable order. He belonged to two sisters of our host and joined the social circle around the evening hearth.

During the evening he closely followed every movement made by his mistresses, and at supper put forth his nose and received his portion at their hands. According to custom, they washed their hands after the meal, and then passed the bowl to the hog.

At the usual time for retiring to rest these two ladies spread their mats and tapas on the ground in one corner, and, as is the usual practice, lay down to sleep with their clothes on. The hog waited very quietly till they had taken their places, when he marched over their tapas and stretched himself between them. The large tapa that covered them all was then drawn up by one of them to his ears, after which she reclined her head on a pillow by his side.

I could not forbear smiling broadly at seeing the three heads in a row. This disconcerted the women a little, and they raised their heads and the hog grunted.

The brother said that his sisters had a great attachment for the hog, having fed it since it was a few days old, and did not like to have it sleep out with the other hogs in the cold, adding that if it were put out it would make such a noise all night at the door that no one in the house would be able to sleep.

Klondike Gold.

He had spent two or three winters in the Klondike country, or said he had, and he was telling his friends about it.

"It isn't so awfully cold up there when one gets used to it, is it?" asked a listener.

"Well," he hesitated, "I don't really suppose it is; anyhow, it isn't to the one that's used to it. He don't know a thing about it. He's been froze to death a month by that time."

"Oh, indeed," stammered the inquirer, who seemed to be disturbed by the sad fate of the person accustomed to it.

"Yes, and I've seen it so cold that a bullet shot up in the air would freeze up there and not come down till the spring thaw. But that isn't as bad as it was last winter. By jingo, I'm a liar if we didn't have a Boston girl up there last winter teaching school and the weather was so cold that that Boston girl actually set the schoolhouse on fire by spontaneous combustion—she was that warm by comparison. Cold? Well, if we could only ship the cold down to this country like we can the gold you would be playing golf on snowshoes all summer long right here in the city of Detroit."—Detroit Free Press.

The Worst Part.

"I hear that burglars got into your house the other night and stole jewelry worth $500," said Collingwood.

"That wasn't the worst of it, either," replied Camperdown.

"What else was there?"

"Well, they lighted the gas all over the house and left it burning until we came home from the theater and extinguished it."—Harper's Bazar.

THE FIGHT AT LEXINGTON.

Senator Lodge's Account of the First Battle of the Revolution.

When Major Pitcairn got to Lexington green, about half past 4, thanks to Bowman's warning, there were some 60 or 70 men assembled to meet him. "Disperse, ye rebels, disperse!" cried Major Pitcairn, and rode toward them. There was much discussion then, and there has been much more since, as to who fired first. It matters not. It is certain that the British poured in a volley and followed it up with others. The minutemen, not yet realizing that the decisive moment had come, hesitated, some standing their ground, some scattering. They fired a few straggling shots, wounded a couple of British soldiers and drew off. Eight Americans were killed and ten wounded. One of the eight had carried the standard when American troops captured Louisburg, and thus redeemed for England an otherwise ineffective war. One was wounded and bayoneted afterward. One dragged himself to the door of his house and died on the threshold at his wife's feet.

What matters it who fired first? The first blow had been struck, the first blood shed. The people, in obedience to the orders of a provincial congress, had faced the soldiers of England in arms. They had been fired upon and had returned the fire. It was not a battle, hardly a skirmish; but it said to all the world that a people intended to govern themselves, and would die sooner than yield; a very pregnant fact, speaking much louder than words and charged with many meanings. A wholly new thing this was indeed to have people ready to die in battle for their rights, when a large part of the rulers of the civilised world did not recognise that they had any rights to either die or live for. A great example to be deeply considered, and destined to bear much fruit, was given by those brave men who died on Lexington green in the fair dawn of that April morning.—From "The Story of the Revolution," by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, in Scribner's.

MOST WHOLESOME MEALS.

Mrs. Rorer Tells the Best Foods For Different Times of Day.

In The Ladies' Home Journal Mrs. S. T. Rorer writes at length to show that Americans eat too much meat, but says she does not want to be understood as condemning meat entirely. Individually she uses "all (with the exception of pork and veal) in moderation and toward the close of the day. From long experience," she says, "I have found that a heavy morning's work can best be accomplished on a breakfast composed of a well cooked cereal and fruit, with perhaps a cup of French coffee or cereal coffee and a piece of well toasted whole wheat bread. The noonday meal, especially if work is to be continued in the afternoon, should be composed of a cream soup, with whole wheat bread, an omelet, some of the lighter forms of nitrogenous food, in the proportion of one-third to two-thirds carbonaceous food. Fruits, again, may be taken, if they agree—a baked banana, a baked apple, peaches, pears or any of the very ripe, subacid fruits.

"After the day's work is over and one can take time to rest and thoroughly digest a meal dinner should be served. A warm beef soup, stimulating rather than nitrogenous, should form the beginning of the meal. This may be followed by some light entree, either of fish or vegetable, then the red meat, either boiled, broiled or roasted (never fried), with its accompanying vegetable. With beef serve potatoes or macaroni as the starchy food, with mutton or chicken rice. A green vegetable should be added for its salts, and this may be onions or young peas, beans, cauliflower or spinach. The salad should follow, and with it a tiny bit of cheese, with a piece of whole wheat bread, a bread stick or a water biscuit. Then a simple, light dessert may be served."

250,000 CURED.

Thousands of young men are made nervous wrecks, unfit for business, social pleasures or home duties by evil habits in youth, later excesses, or private diseases. W. U. Andrews, of Akron, O., says: "I read this paper and have seen many reports of remarkable cures made by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan. I decided to treat with them. Indiscretion was the cause of my trouble. I was weak and nervous; no ambition; back weak. pimples on the face; thin and haggard; eyes sunken and cheeks hollow; dreams and drains at night; memory poor; varicocele and weak parts; irritable; sinking spells; specks before the eyes; lack of confidence; no energy; and many other complaints. I had tried fourteen doctors, bought four electric belts took scores of bottles of patent medicines—all failed. I tried the New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, and it cured me. I am a Man Again. I have gained twenty-six pounds and am strong mentally, physically and sexually. It is a wonderful treatment."

SCURRILOUS PLACARDS

WRITTEN DOCUMENTS DEFAMING PRIESTS POSTED ON BILL BOARD.

(Special to the Times.)

Ottawa, April 18.—Persons who were wending their way to work down Bank street before eight o'clock Saturday morning, had their attention attracted to the bill board, corner of Gloucester street, on which was posted a lengthy document, written in a plain female hand, attacking the reputation of two prominent priests of the Catholic church. Many scores of Ottawa's toilers were in consequence a few minutes late for their work this morning. The ordinary human being likes scandal, and those who read this posted document absorbed, as much as ought to last an ordinary appetite for a very long time to come. By 8.30 it was impossible to get near the board, so eager was the crowd to devour its contents. The affair was a general outline of the alleged conduct of the two priests in question, who are well known and highly respected in Ottawa, and were charged with all manner of improper acts. The names of a married lady, and also a young woman, with that of a prominent judge and lawyer, were also given. The screed ended up as follows: "And now let those who preach the gospel of love, and who also unscrupulously slander away an innocent character, in turn which they have so richly deserved; taste a little dose themselves of that future to try and carry into practice and let it be also for them in the themselves what they preach to others, both as regards charity and chastity." Then comes the signature, in plain bold letters, "M. A. O. S."

Another such document was posted on the wall of Belanger's drug store, corner of Rideau and Nicholas St.; and a large crowd was attracted there, too. The police were telephoned for and Chief Powell at once sent men to Bank street and Rideau street to tear down the documents. The news spread like wild fire, and was the talk of the city to-day.

The police have succeeded in ascertaining the name of the party who wrote the circulars.

LIGHTNING STRUCK

TWO RESIDENCES AT HAMILTON VISITED BY THE ELECTRIC FLUID.

(Special to the Times.)

Hamilton, April 18.—During the thunderstorm last night the residence of John McCoy, 70 Victoria avenue south, and Frank L. Wanzer, corner Victoria avenue and Stinson street, were struck by lightning, but not much damage was done. The firemen were called to Mr. Wanzer's house, where the lightning set fire to a partition between two rooms, besides melting the gas and water pipes.

THAT SEDAN CHAIR.

"I repeat it," said Jacques d'Ebllgnac, with an emphasis so curious that all turned to look at him; "it gave me the fright of a lifetime."

"A sedan chair?"

"Yes. Listen, if you would know all about it." And he told us the following story:

"A love tale," said he, "of the city of Lille, of my twentieth year, and my pastry cook's daughter, a mere child, but so pretty, so sweet, so adorably coquettish; moreover, so admirably skilled in all pertaining to her father's business. Nowhere else could I buy such cake, such buns, such sugared almonds. And the stacks and stacks of rich confections that I devoured each day to prove my devotion!

"The fire of my love—which she returned between the smiles bestowed upon her father's customers—alone saved me from gastritis by consuming the heaviness of my stomach.

"This was the state of things, when, one day, I chanced to find the pass key of 'le pere,' who spent half his time in the wineshop across the way and the other half gossiping at his door with his equally idle neighbors.

"Determined to profit by this piece of luck, I managed to speak a word to Victoire, my little sweetheart, and to propose to her a visit to the theater that evening, if she could elude the vigilance of her mother and join me unseen. She could easily re-enter by means of the pass key.

"Victoire was charmed with my inspiration, and six hours after I had conceived the project we had carried it into execution. Although it was the middle of the winter the night was superb, a late rising moon, but thousands of brilliant stars shining from every quarter of the heavens. Victoire trembled like a leaf in the wind, but I was filled with such burning ardor that it mounted to my head like a drink of wine.

"We were young, you see; the theater for us a scene of enchantment, in love with each other and more than happy. Our hearts, like the strings of some delicately tuned instrument, vibrated to the slightest touch. In fact, we forgot everything but each other and never thought of moving when at last the final curtain fell until the lampist appeared to turn out the lights.

"Hurrying then to the street, we found that the night had changed. The stars were gone, the moon hidden under a canopy of clouds, a cold, penetrating rain beginning to fall and all the sedan chairs gone with the stars.

"No, I was wrong; one was left standing by the roadside a little way below us. At sight of it a fatal idea popped into my brain. It was not yet very late, and I had still so many beautiful things to say to Victoire. Why not get into that chair, a refuge from the chilly rain, and talk everything all over again?

"The clock at the corner was just striking 12 as we slipped into our movable apartment, rather cramped, to be sure, but both of us were light and thin; so, drawing close and snug like birds in a nest, we awaited the passing of the shower—cheerfully awaited it, too—when all at once something very strange occurred.

"The door of the house near which the chair was standing opened noiselessly, as if hung on velvet, and two men looked out, evidently desiring neither to be seen nor heard.

"Assured of solitude and a clear coast, they descended to the street, bearing in their arms a heavy burden. Just at that instant the moon slid from under the clouds, and we distinctly saw that this burden was a human being wrapped in a long cloak closely muffled about the face and shoulders.

"This was startling enough, but fancy our horror when the bearers of this strange load moved straight to the chair where we crouched in terror, and one of them already had his hand on the door when Victoire uttered a stifled shriek, answered by a frightful oath, and quick as a flash the men were gone as they had come, and the door reclosed as softly as it had opened.

"The whole thing had passed so quickly that we might have believed it some fearful vision, only doubt was not possible—we had seen it—both of us had distinctly seen the same thing, and without a spoken syllable were filled with the same blood freezing thought—murder—a murder doubtless committed in this very house, from which the murderers were now seeking to carry away and to conceal all traces of the crime with the victim's body.

"'Oh, let us go, let us go!' moaned Victoire tremblingly. 'Let us go at once, Jacques. I am so frightened!'

"Go? Yes, I was willing enough, but how? For as Victoire spoke, two men emerged from the darkness around us—we could barely distinguish them, as the moon had gone behind a cloud again—caught up the chair and were bearing us away into the dismal night.

"This was a predicament. We were stupefied. What must we do? Cry out, and make a dreadful scandal? Betray Victoire, and expose myself to the risk of discovery? Never! It was not to be thought of! It was not to be thought of! It was one of those times when trust in chance was the only resource, hoping by blind confidence to propitiate her favor.

"Perhaps this was our case; perhaps, and I am inclined to think the latter, we were both so frightened that we had neither the strength nor the courage to attempt anything. Victoire had unconsciously thrown herself into my arms. Her warm breath fanned my cheek. Her little hand held fast to mine. No matter what threatened us, it was something, at least, to have gained this happiness; we would die together, her last sigh on my lips.

"For these men—we were sure of it—were accomplices of the first two, and by a previous arrangement they had been engaged for the carrying off and concealing of the dead body. Deceived by our joint weight, they believed they had it, and we, instead of the murdered victim, were hurrying away through the shadowy gloom.

"True, so we were, but where were we hurrying? Where were we heading, as the men trotted on with swift, untiring steps, at times almost a run? What were they going to do with us—their sinister burden?

"Presently we saw that we were passing one of the city gates leading into the distant country. Again I was tempted to cry out, to call to the sentinel, but fear for Victoire deterred me, Victoire, whose mother believed her slumbering sweetly under her little white curtains.

"What should I do? What could I do? I was nearly distracted.

"By this time we were clear of the suburbs, but still swept onward. Another lightening of the sky, and I saw ahead of us a glistening sheet of water, the river Deule. I knew it well—a deep, rapid stream, the running of whose current we even now could hear.

"Undoubtedly the wretches were going to fling us into this seething vortex.

"This time I would have cried out, but Victoire, mad with fright, clung so tightly to my neck, clasping me with such force that my voice died in my throat, my eyes closed and the cry was strangled. * * *

"How long a time elapsed I never knew. I was brought back to consciousness by the chair striking the ground. They had set it down preparatory to—yes, but where, where? Decidedly not in the river. It was a room, on the contrary, the dirty, grimy chamber of a low country wineshop, where a crowd of rough, coarse men were drinking, swearing and rolling about a lot of boxes, barrels and packages, like merchandise.

"'Mme. Jervaise, Mme. Jervaise!' they shouted in chorus, as our bearers set us down. 'Have you brought us Mme. Jervaise?'

"'She is here," the bearers replied.

"'To work, to work, then! We have no time to lose.'

"And the chair door was thrown open.

"But scarcely had they caught sight of Victoire and me, crouching half dead in the bottom of the chair, when a wild stampede took place, a helter skelter rush for the outside. The lights were extinguished, the thud of feet was heard pounding away into the night, and then a deep, bloodcurdling stillness.

"We were alone in black darkness.

"Luckily I had noticed the direction of the door. To leap from the chair, seize Victoire's hand and make my way to it was the work of a second. The clouds had not deepened, the rain had ceased, and by the purest miracle we found the road back to the city. By daylight we were safe at home.

"A fortnight later perhaps an article in a morning paper gave me the key to the mystery of that hideous night in which we (Victoire and I) had been so strangely involved. The article announced the capture by the police of a band of smugglers who had installed themselves in an old, abandoned wineshop in the outskirts of Lille—a regular magazine, as it turned out, of contraband goods, which they had smuggled in and out of the city by means of a manikin representing a sick old woman, partly paralyzed, and which, muffled in wraps and placed in a sedan chair, they carried back and forth under the very nose of the gendarmes without the slightest fear of detection.

"'An invalid ordered by the doctor to take the steam baths,' they told the officers of the law, 'by name Mme. Jervaise.'

"'Mme. Jervaise!' The name told me all and explained everything that hitherto had seemed mysterious and inexplicable in our midnight adventure. Happily for us our nocturnal escapade had never been suspected, and Victoire and I escaped a summons to appear as witnesses before the court of assizes. All the same from that day to this the thought of a sedan chair gives me goose flesh down the spine."—From the French in Cincinnati Enquirer.

Dandruff is Dangerous

When dandruff appears it is usually regarded as an annoyance. It should be regarded as a disease. Its presence indicates an unhealthy condition of the scalp, which, if neglected, leads to baldness. Dandruff should be cured at once. The most effective means for the cure is found in AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It promotes the growth of the hair, restores it when gray or faded to its original color, and keeps the scalp clean and healthy.

"For more than eight years I was greatly troubled with dandruff, and though a young man, my hair was fast turning gray and falling out. Baldness seemed inevitable until I began to use

Ayer's Hair Vigor

The dandruff has been entirely removed and my hair is now soft, smooth and glossy and fast regaining its original color."—L. T. VALLE, Allenton, Mo.

TESTIMONIALS:

The following are a few from scores as testimonials the Sergt-Major has from people who have used this preparation:

I have used Kenny's Hair Restorer for dandruff and falling out of my hair. It has removen the dandruff, and a few applications prevented my hair falling out. Three bottles of Kennys Hair Restorer has restored the hair on my head to its original state. I can in justice to the manufacturer recommend Kennys Hair Restorer from my own experience as the best remedy I have ever heard of for the prevention and cure of baldness, and I am sure it will accomplish all that it is claimed for it if properly applied as directed.

CORNWALL CANAL AND RIVER REACHES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvements at Upper Entrance of Cornwall Canal and River Reaches" will be received at this Office until 16 o'clock on Saturday the 30th day of April, 1898, for the works connected with the widening, straightening and deepening of the Upper Entrance of the Cornwall Canal and the River Reaches between Cornwall and Coteau Landing.

Plans and Specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 15th day of April, 1898 at the Office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Cornwall. Printed forms of Tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $17,000 must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the condition requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of November, A. D., 1898, will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

The Dog Came Back

Mr. E. B. Edwards' valuable collie dog which disappeared some weeks ago on the same day as that of Mr. T. Hamilton's, which was afterwards traced to Windsor, has returned to its master, from where it is not known. This leads to the belief that it was kept by parties in town as, perhaps, the other dogs missing are. Mr. Jos. Yelland has a valuable bitch and two puppies missing.

Fire Sale at Mason's

The recent fire at E. F. Mason & Co's. has had the effect of slightly damaging by smoke the immense stock of groceries and provisions carried by this firm, and in order to faciliate renovation and make room for new goods, a clearing sale has been inaugurated and is now in full swing. Everything must go, and at almost your own price. Don't procrastinate! Call to-day!

Tasteful Lawns

This is the season of the year when the citizens who intend competing for the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society's special prize for lawns, are beginning to exercise their ingenuity and taste. Four prizes are to be awarded of five, four, three and two dollars and the test is to be taste, skill and quality displayed. Parties competing must notify the secretary before June 1st, and the inspection will take place the week prior to the Horticultural Exhibition.

Railway Notes

—The Times was yesterday handed a pretty little folder from the Grand Trunk entotled "A Highland Holiday." It displays the beauties of the Muskoka lakes to advantage.

—The Northwest Trading Company shipped a car-load of canoes to the coast by G.T.R. They reached their destination in 12 days.

—There are good reasons for believing that negotiations are now in progress for the transfer of the I.B. & O.R.R. line to the Grand Trunk railway. The matter will come before the house of commons railway committee in a few days.

DOYLE AND HARRISON MATCHED

The Peterborough Wrestler to Try Conclusions with Toronto's Crack

Editor Morning Times: I saw a recent challenge from one, Thomas Doyle of Peterborough, to wrestle any man in Canada, R. N. Harrison of Toronto preferred. Now, I am ready to meet above named man in Peterborough, four weeks from date of signing articles, at Greco-Roman, two falls out of three, for $100 a side, winner to take 70 per cent. and loser 30 per cent. of net proceeds. As a guarantee of good faith, I have deposited $25 cheque with Lem Felcher of Peterborough, who will act as final stake-holder, the balance of the stake money to be put up one week before match takes place. If this is satisfactory Mr. Doyle will kindly forward articles of agreement which I will sign and return.

R. N. Harrison, Toronto.

Mr. Doyle left for Toronto yesterday with articles of agreement for Harrison to sign. Harrison called for Greco-Roman style, which means that one man cannot touch the other below the belt. Doyle, however, never wrestled this style, and prefers the catch as catch can. He is willing, nevertheless, to sign articles, one bout to be in Greco-Roman style and the other catch as catch can, the third bout to be in the style of the man who gets a throw in the shortest time in the first two bouts. The contest, if closed, will take place in May.

I. O. O. F. Anniversary Services

The local lodges I.O.O.F. will celebrate the 76th anniversary of the institution of Oddfellowship in America by attending divine service in St. Andrew's church on Sunday evening next. The service will be conducted by the Rev. Bro. Potter.

Accommodation for Bicyclists

Arrangements are being made at St. Johns' with a view to establishing friendly relations with bicyclits. A "bicycle stable" will be established in the school house, the sexton taking charge of the machines during divine service. Next Sunday evening Rev. E. V. Stevenson will preach a special sermon on the subject of Sunday bicycling—its use and abuse.

Wholesale Ash Dealer

Mr. Chas. Stevens, of Napanee, the wholesale dealer in hardwood ashes, is in town. For some years past Mr. Stevens has been buying ashes in Peterborough and surrounding country through his agent, M. M. Stevens (Mrs. Geo. Stevens). Mr. Stevens informed a Times reporter that until further notice his business in Peterborough will be under the management of his nephew, Chas. Manson Stevens, who arrived in town yesterday. The highest price in cash will be paid for dry hardwood ashes, rags, bones, old copper, and in fact all kinds of old junk. His storehouse is located on the Grand Trunk siding, Ashburnham. See advt. in to-morrow's issue.

"The Geisha" Draws a Good House

The Japanese musical comedy "The Geisha" was presented at Bradburn's opera house last night to a fair-sized audience. "The Geisha" is the greatest comic opera of the past two years. It was written by Owen Hall and Harry Greenback, with the sparkling music by Sidney Jones. The theme is as light as the songs and score. It is a tale of a "Tea House," and it appeals to the galleries as well as the parquet. One of the most numbers in it is the chrysanthemum music with harp obligato, in Act II. Worthy of mention is the song of "The Amorous Gold Fish" and "The Jewel of Asia," but the song that caught the audience last night was "Jack's the boy for me." Mr. Bradburn is deserving of the highest praise for his enterprise in bringing a company of such unquestionable merit to the town.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Interesting Items of Local and District Happenings in Brief

—The schools re-opened yesterday morning.

—There are several weddings on the tapis for to-morrow.

—What has happened the electric railway is a question that is very general.

—The annual picnic in connection with St. Joseph's church, Douro, will be held on Thursday, June 16th.

—A citizen was committed to gaol yesterday as a dangerous lunatic, on the testimony of his wife.

—The Times' circulation is booming these days. Everybody will soon be reading the Times.

—Buy some fresh candies at the Spot Cash Grocery Co's "convincing" sale, from 5c to 30c per pound.

—The Street and Bridge committee of the Council made their annual inspection of the streets yesterday morning.

—It is said that lunge are being speared at the dams in town. The suckers get the go-bye when the big fellows are in sight.

—The fence behind the covered grand stand at the P.A.A.A. grounds has weakened and fallen out, but will be repaired within the next few days.

—A snuff of ammonia will break up the worst kind of a dog fight in short order. Besides it is more humane than attempting to part the brutes by dislocating their tails.

—The Orillia Lacrosse Club write inviting Peterborough L. C. to go to that town on May 24th, but the Peterboroughs intend putting on the biggest match of the year that day on their own grounds.

—The work on the sewers is progressing. The McDonnell street sewer is laid almost as far west as the railway track, while the Bethune street sewer is down as far north as London street.

—A bicycle scorcher figured in an ugly spill near the Edison works yesterday. The young man was hurrying to see how fast he could travel when his wheel got stuck in the mud. He was thrown about ten feet in the air and landed on his back in a pool of water. The wheel was slightly damaged and the rider's pantaloons will require a new seat.

How to Cure All Skin Diseases

Simply apply "Swayne's Ointment." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for Swayne's Ointment. Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Avoid substitutes.

Suspected House Breaker Dismissed

The man who was arrested early last Saturday morning, charged with attempting to force an entrance into the pump house of the Water Co. early the same morning, was brought before Magistrate Edmison yesterday morning. He was acquitted as there was no evidence against him. John Webber, who was in charge of the power house at the time, could not identify the prisoner as the man making the disturbance.

Announcement

In view of the fact that "The Robert Simpson Co., Limited," of Toronto, have distributed their catalogue throughout the town of Peterborough, the "Spot Cash Grocery Company" wish to say that they have compared the price lists of groceries therein quoted with their own popular low prices, and find that they are on an average equally as low as "The Robert Simpson Co.," and that the Peterborough citizens should feel no need to buy groceries in Toronto. The Spot Cash Grocery Co. further announce that they will meet the Simpson prices on groceries in every particular, quality and kind considered. In proof of this, save your price lists and compare with bills of goods purchased from the Spot Cash Grocery Co., 353 George street.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. DRESSING WELL

Is Quite Easy When You Know How to Do it

There are too many women who are careless about their home gowns. They imagine they are thrifty and economical because they put on from day to day a faded or dingy dress or skirt. Such women are neither economical nor wise; they are either misers or indifferent to the feelings of their family and friends when they act thus.

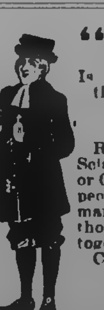
At an expense of from ten to twenty cents for one or two packages of D[illegible] Dyes any woman can make her faded gowns or skirts as good as new. This kind of home work is wisdom and true economy.

This spring thousands of wise and thrifty women are using the Diamond Dyes, giving new life to old and cast-off dresses and costumes, fitting them for another season's wear.

When you decide to dye, do not risk your materials with poor dyes or imitations of the Diamond Dyes; see that your dealer gives you the "Diamond" that work so easily and successfully.

Death of Mrs. Bedard

Mr. Jas. Bedard, of Schenectady, N. Y., is in town. Last week his wife died and was buried in Buffalo. Mrs. Bedard was a Peterborough lady, being a daughter of Mr. P. J. McNamara, of town. Friends here will regret her untimely demise.



"New Life"

Is the name of a medicine that we have never known a case of failure to cure.

Rheumatism of any form, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, or Gout. It has cured more people since it was put on the market one year ago than the thousands of remedies put together in twenty years.

Easter Millinery Booming

To say that we've started to be busy in Millinery hardly expresses the idea of the big rush of past days—so far trade is doubling up on last year, and though our staff of trimmers and saleswomen has been increased, we think it necessary to warn those who intend to order an Easter Hat or Bonnet here, that it will be the part of wisdom to see to the matter at once—this week if possible.

SPAIN'S FLEET ASSEMBLING

United States to Send a Strong Fleet to Seize a Cuban Port

Two Spanish Battleships from Porto Rico Have Joined the Torpedo Flotilla at Cape Verde Islands—Urgent Orders to United States Warships to Hurry Home—The U. S. Army and Even the Navy by no Means Ready for the Fight.

(Special to the Times.)

New York, April 19.—A special despatch received from Washington at 11.50 p.m. says that the President has signed the Cuban resolutions and the ultimatum will be sent to Spain immediately, with a forty-eight hours' notice.

"LEGATION OF SPAIN."

Washington, April 19.—The greatest importance is attached to the fact that the little brass sign of "Legation of Spain" has been removed from the 18th street house, now occupied by the Spanish Minister.

It is also given out that the Spanish representative will leave Washington as soon as the resolutions are signed.

RUBEN'S STATEMENT.

New York, April 19.—H. S. Rubens, of the Cuban Junta, has issued a statement heartily approving of the resolutions passed by Congress, and says should force be necessary by the United States the Cuban Government will co-operate most completely with the army. Coast pilots and practical guides will be placed unconditionally at the service of the United States, and in every practical way the Cubans will help in expelling a common enemy.

UNEASY STOCK MARKET.

New York, April 19.—The situation in the stock market this morning between the bulls and bears is that "one is afraid and the other dare not." The bulls are afraid to but stocks and the bears do not dare to sell. The liquidation of long stocks has carried prices down from 3-4 to 2 per cent. Trading was very dull and heavy. Brokers were waiting for the action of the President on the Cuban resolution. The chief declines were New York Central 1 1-4. Tobacco and Sugar 1 1-8, St. Paul 1 1-8, and Union Pacific Preferred 1 1-8.

THE ENGLISH MARKET.

The Evening Journal's special from London says: The feeling in London to-day is that the last hope of peace has vanished in view of the action of the American Congress. Financiers and merchants who clung to hope throughout are now despairing of anything but almost immediate war. The exchange opened gloomily. Brokers declined business in American or Spanish securities. Prices were slowly slumping. A special says: The last hope is gone; Spain will not yield.

The Sun says: Nothing stands between America and war but President McKinley.

VICE-PRESIDENT AND SPEAKER SIGN.

Washington, April 19.—The Vice-President and Speakker of the House have signed the resolutions and they go to the President for his signature at 1 o'clock.

The House has adjourned.

IN READINESS FOR ACTION.

Washington, April 19.—The bulk of preparations for action are about completed and the work is now reduced to perfecting details. The army is perfecting details. The army is being mobilized and all that remains is to insure the prompt supply of all classes of equipment.

As was stated at the Navy Department to-day, the market has been gleaned of available vessels, and it now comes to manning them and perfecting methods of communication and co-operation.

A novel departure in naval practice is the formation of a marine battalion to accompany the North Atlantic squadron. This is the project of Col. Hayward, who, being authorized to do so, has taken steps to put it into immediate execution.

The Quartermaster General's Department of the army is rushing work on tents and tent equipments. The War Department will need about two hundred men as packers for the mule teams now being collected by Captain Thomas Crusse at Jefferson Barracks.

Pack trains will be particularly useful in the mountainous parts of Cuba and where the roads are bad.

JOINED CAPE VERDE FLEET.

St. Vincent, Cape Verde Islands, April 19.—The first class Spanish cruisers Vizcaya and Almirante Oquendo, last reported at Porto Rico, arrived here at noon to-day to reinforce the Spanish fleet in these waters.

FIGHT TO SATISFY ONHOR.

New York, April 19.—The general feeling in Madrid is that the Cuban question has entered upon its last stage. Everyone appears to realize that Spain's actual hold on Cuba is lost, but at the same time the people are united in the determination to cling to the sentiment that all bonds between the Mother Country and the island are not broken. No one really hopes to keep these bonds intact should war break out, but all are determined to make the victory of America a dearly purchased one.

At Rome yesterday Gen. Canizo said that Spain should declare war, not to save Cuba, but to save the Monarchy. The situation of Spain was identical with that of Austria in 1866. Austria made war, but after the battle of Custozza—her military honor being safe—she was able to cede Venice. To-day Spain will meet the shock of an encounter with the United States in order to prevent an internal insurrection, but as soon as her military honor is safe, she will abandon Cuba, which is destined to be annexed to the United States.

Europe will soon see the significance of the United Staets placing itself at the gates of Gibraltar. Gen Canzio declared that the American fleet was able to smash not only that of Spain but also the fleets of some of the great powers.

The Spanish steamer Montevideo entered the Port of Havana yesterday loaded with explosives and other war material for the Spanish Government in Havana. The captain says that when he left Spain the belief prevailed that war would be declared between the United States and Spain before his arrival, and that his instructions were to sink the steamer before surrendering if attacked by American warships.

A number of retired British officers have offered their services to the United States.

There was another panic in Havana yesterday when the port was closed to lay a water main under the bay, and when an American merchant vessel appeared off the harbor many people prayed and cried.

FIGHTING AMONG THEMSELVES.

Key West, April 19.—The first United States troops to arrive here was a contingent from the Twenty-fifth Infantry, who were brought from Fort Missoula, Montana, and form part of a colored regiment. Their reception was anything but favorable, and some bad blood has been occasioned by alleged neglect. They were kept huddled on the steamer for twenty-four hours before a camping ground could be found, and then they had to forage for provisions. Last evening a number of the soldiers got into altercations with sailors and several lively fights on the street resulted. If white troops are treated with the same discourtesy as the colored soldiers there will be blood spilt.

The war fever here is most intense, and daily we look for the opening of hostilities. Although it is very hot, there is not much sickness, and reports from Havana say that the annual fever scourge has not appeared along the coast, although famine is carrying off hundreds of Cubans in the interior. The few people who live on the Tortugas Islands have been officially warned to leave, as the place will neither be fortified nor guarded, there being nothing but rocks to protect.

NORTH PATROL SQUADRON.

Washington, April 19.—A new squadron, called the North Patrol Squadron, has been placed under the command of Com. Howell, who has been detatched from command of the European squadron. The new squadron is composed of four Morgan liners and San Francisco as flagship.

ENGLISH SYMPATHY.

New York, April 19.—A despatch from London says: The agreement of Congress on the resolutions for immediate armed intervention in Cuba has been telegraphed to Lord Salisbury at Beaulieu. A despatch containing a full report of the action of Congress was received by the Foreign Office early this morning. The despatch was read to Balfour while he was still in bed. Ambassador Hay received a special despatch from Washington notifying him of the agreement of both Houses of Congress on the policy, which can mean nothing but war. Every one here expects war and that soon. There is a strong feeling of sympathy with America, and it is generally agreed by all classes that the punishment to be meted out to Spain will be fully deserved.

QUEEN REGENT'S SPEECH.

Madrid, April 19, 2.30 p.m.—The terms of the speech which the Queen Regent will deliver at the opening of the Cortes to-morrow are jealously guarded, but it is said that the speech will prove firm, convincing and satisfactory to the national sentiments. It is claimed here that perfect unanimity prevails in Spain to face war rather than yield to the demands of the United States.

INCREASING ARMY STRENGTH.

Washington, April 19.—Senator Hawley has introduced a bill to increase the military strenth of the United States. It is in accordance with the wishes of the War Department.

BOUND FOR FLORIDA.

Watertown, N.Y., April 19.—The Ninth Infantry, stationed at Sacket's Harbor, consisting of five hundred men, passed through this city shortly before noon to-day, on their way to Tampa, Fla.

A SPANISH APOLOGY.

Washington, April 19.—Minister Woodford has been advised of the developments, but of course is precluded from action until advised of the signature of the joint resolution. He informed the Department that the Spaish Government had made an ample apology for the indignities inflicted upon the American Consulate at Malaga by a mob last week.

SPAIN ON A NEW TACK.

Madrid, April 19, 2 p.m.—It is officially announced that negotiations are proceeding with the Cuban insurgents to obtain their submission, as a result of further concessions.

COLLISION AT KEY WEST.

Key West, Fla., April 19.—The torpedo boat Ericsson early this morning, while patrolling about ten miles south of Sand Key, in the Gulf, collided with the station pilot boat Hero, which had no lights displayed. The bowsprit of the pilot boat swept the Ericsson amidships and knocked over her ventilators and upper works. Ensign L. A. Bostwick was struck on the head, but not seriously injured. The injury to the Ericsson will not interfere with her usefulness in case of orders for active service being received.

HOSTILITIES ON SATURDAY.

Washington, April 19.—President McKinley's ultimatum to Spain, transmitting the demand by Congress that Cuba's oppressors quit the Island forthwith, will be cabled to Mardil to-night. Spain will reply by Thursday night. She will refuse to yield. Then the President will issue his proclamation and hostilities will begin by Saturday. President McKinley will not receive the joint resolutions until shortly after noon. They will be signed promptly. Spain's refusal will leave open to the President no course of action, save the use of the United States forces. Officials at the Spanish legation refuse to commit themselves to-day concerning the time of their departure from Washington. It is said that the House is now protected by an additional guard.

"TOPEKA" ORDERED HOME.

Falmouth, Eng., April 19.—The United States cruiser Topeka, formerly the Diogenes, has received urgent orders to sail immediately for the United States, without waiting waiting for the States torpedo boat Somers, which is being repaired here after encountering severe weather and springing a number of leaks owing to defects in her machinery.

EXPERIMENTING WITH WAR BALLOONS.

Fort Wadsworth, N. Y., April 19.—One of the war balloons which is to be experimented with at the fort here is now within the fortifications. Preparations are being made for the trial of the balloon, which it is reported will take place to-morrow.

A PLEBISCITE FOR CUBA.

London, April 19.—It is reported that the Dreibund, or triple alliance (composed of Germany, Austria and Italy) acting on the suggestion of Italy, has proposed to the powers the formulation of a plebiscite (the vote of a whole country, namely, Cuba in this case) to settle the Cuban question, meaning that the population of Cuba should be allowed to vote for the form of government most popular there.

THE VACILLATING M'KINLEY.

Madrid, April 19, 8 a.m.—The Imparcial to-day, commenting upon the commercial aspect of the war, which it regards as certain "so soon as President McKinley stops vacillating," says: "The Americans who are rushing into war will be surprised to find that it is not the affair of weeks, but of months. It will last until the commercials are more anxious for peace than they are now anxious for war."

Railway Notes

—Mr. Fred Haskill, although not fully recovered, is punching tickets once more on the Lakefield division. Fred. has hosts of friends who are glad to see him on deck once more.

—Mr. Mun, night operator on the C.P.R. has no easy berth of late. The freight trains follow each other so rapidly that he has no time for dozing over his keyboard.

—In an appeal from the court of revision of the village of Port Perry on behalf of the G.T.R., it was held by Judge Dartnell that water tanks and platforms are part of the structure of a railway. As such, they are not assessable. The assessment of a subtenant of a railway company should be deducted from the total assessment.

DELAY IN PONTON CASE

Gladstone Said to be Kept Alive by Drugs

AFTER BORDER SMUGGLERS

Toronto Shooting Affray Which Had its Origin in Jealousy

Two Young Men Wanted the Same Woman One Managed to Get Her, and the Other Became Desperate

(Special to the Times.)

Toronto, April 19.—This morning the Master-in-Chambers handed out his judgment in the application of the Dominion Bank to change the venue of Teller Ponton's $50,000 suit from Napanee to some other suitable place.

The Master grants the application, and fixes the venue at Belleville, the trial, however, not to come on at the first Assize sittings.

The Master thiks that the population of Napanee was aroused against the United States detectives employed by the bank, and against Inspector Bogart. The Master believes this feeling still exists, because they are witnesses for the bank, and it will only require their appearance on the scene to cause the same intense excitement as was shown at the trial.

"Napanee papers," says the judgment, "have since the trial printed everything that could be gathered relating to the matter, and I think it cannot be denied that the news so printed has been more favorable to the plaintiff than to the bank.

"One thing proven by the large number of affidavits filed is that the matters in issue are widely koown throughout the county, and discussion as to the same has been very free. The cross-examination of seven or eight of these deponents to my mind indicates that among a larger number of people the only question they consider should be decided is as to the amount of damages for which the bank should be assessed.

"Having read over the affidavits and depositions, I am of opinion that this is not a case where the bank would feel they were receiving a fair trial at Napanee. I suggested Hastings County; the defendants agreed, but the plaintiff objected, and said he would not care to go on trial on the first Assize sittings in Belleville. But, in my opinion, change should be made from Napanee to Belleville. The order will go, changing the venue from Napanee to Belleville, on condition that the trial do not come on at the first sitting, the bank to pay all extra costs of the change as agreed.

KEPT ALIVE BY DRUGS.

London, Eng., April 19.—The malignant growth from which Glastone is suffering has now begun to affect his right eye. An operation is out of the question, and it is only by constantly increasing the doses of morphine that the patient's sufferings are allayed. It is regarded as quite possible by his relatives that his illness may have a sudden termination. A curious effect of the drugs administered is that when they assert their influence Gladstone repeats some of his greatest speeches with marvellous accuracy and enters into old discussions and reminiscences.

SHOT AT HIS BROTHER.

Toronto, April 19.—A young Englishman named Percy Hudson, who has been employed at 819 Queen st. west, was arraigned before Police Magistrate Denison this morning on a charge of shooting at his brother, Edward, with intent to kill him. The affair took place last night at the lodging house of the latter at 36 McGill street, about 9 o'clock, and the motive is jealously. It is claimed by the prisoner that he lived for two years with the woman who is now the wife of his brother; that during this time Edward came from the States and took up his abode with them; that he alienated the lady's affections, and that Edward and she eloped, taking with them Percy's furniture. These circumstances have engendered bad feeling, which appears to have led the prisoner to go to McGill street, call his brother to the door and try to shoot him. Edward grappled him and the bullet went wide. Police Constable Wilby happened along and arrested Percy. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, and was remanded until Friday.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 20. 1898

THE GREATEST DANGER

The greatest danger that may result from a war between the United States and Spain is that the United States may win. If such should happen—and it probably would—there would be no controlling the infammable material which forms so large a proportion of the United States, an element so largely represented in the House of Representatives. With a President pandering to the mob, a Secretary of State with a leaning towards "shirt-sleeves" despatches, and a Congress hysterical and pugnacious, a further war would inevitably follow an American victory over poor old Spain. Already we hear Senator Teller declaring that "There must be no interference by the allied powers of Europe. If they attempted that we would fight the world. We should declare that with all the vigor of our Anglo-Saxon blood, and our millions of people, and if we did, the world would not attempt to lay its hands upon us." A telegraphic despatch from Detroit represents Mr. Flavins L. Brook, who is described as the "well known lawyer," saying, "It's all right to demand Cuba's independence, but I'd like to see this government go much further. I'd like to see the United States spend the next 10 years making its coast defences impregnable and its navy the strongest in the world. It should not only be the strongest, but overwhelmingly so. Then at the end of the 10 years I'd like to have Uncle Sam give notice to the world that the whole American continent from the Isthmus to the North Pole belongs to the United States. It would not be necessary to give any reasons, just say that Canada and British America logically belong to the United States." This man may not amount to a "hill o' beans," but his utterances are evidently considered of some importance by a great American news agency.

British sympathy is strongly in favor of the American side of this "controversy." An Anglo-American alliance has been for many years the dream of British statesmen, and this is a most favorable opportunity to bring about that alliance. It is not altogether brought about from sentimental causes. If Britain backs up the United States against Spain, the United States may back up Britain in certain enterprises in the Orient. For these reasons they sing "God Save the Queen" in American gatherings and references to the eagle and the stars and stripes are applauded in London Music Halls. Canadian sympathy with the United States is not quite as strong. It would be overwhelmingly in favor of our Anglo-Saxon neighbor were it not for a warranted suspicion that the failure of Spain to quell the Cuban insurrection was due to the "aid and comfort" given by American citizens to the Cuban belligerents in violation of international comity, combined with a feeling that the United States would be morally the better of a defeat then a triumph.

A serious tangle is often the result of a matrimonial knot.

The war talk has monopolized public attention to the exclusion of political matters. Mr. Hardy, however, still retains seven or eight of a majority. There is no question that he will stay until after the courts decide the protested election cases. It was a close call for the little Premier, and there is no doubt that the manipulation of the liquor licenses supplied the political machine with ball-bearings.

Several rosy-colored schemes have been floated in Peterborough during the past few years in which local capitalists have fared badly. One instane, the Carbon Works, over which upwards of $50,000 was "dropped," the Street Railway, which has eaten up over $80,000, and the Bridge Works, which is said to have helped to make several men poor. It's a pity a man can't dispose of his experience at cost.

The Toronto Star says that not more than ten protests will go to trial. It is not definitely known, but it is believed that the Liberals will protest West Hamilton, East Simcoe, North Toronto, South Ontario, and West Elgin, and one of the Waterloos. The Conservatives will protest Kingston, South Perth, West Huron, and perhaps London and West York. The protest against the leaders of both parties will be dropped.

Get More and You Get Less

Why is it every sarsaparilla which tries to sell itself, ranges itself against Ayer's as the standard? Why is it that all have to offer extra inducements — bigger bottles, fancy wrappers, cheaper price — anything, everything, but the one inducement of quality?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

has never been equaled by any cheap imitation of it, and quality tells, just as blood tells.

It is the Standard.

"I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla for more than twenty-five years, and have never heard anything but words of praise from my customers; not a single complaint has ever reached me. A preparation must possess great merit to maintain such a reputation. I believe your sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier that has ever been introduced to the general public. I often hear other manufacturers say that this is "as good as Ayer's," but no one ever yet heard it said that Ayer's was "as good" as any other kind. They always set Ayer's up as the standard of excellence."—S. F. BOYCE, Duluth, Minn.

Indifference sometimes wins where manifest desire stands no show. The truth of this is apparent on all sides. We know of men who have not only a manifest, but a burning desire to serve the people in some way or other. They are anxious to fill any ofice from that of a travelling inspector to Senator. What a pity we can't send them to Cuba. The woods are full of them.

Notes to the Sultan have been prepared by the Ambassadors of the Powers at Constantinople. These notes set forth that it is a requisite condition of the fulfilment of the Greek indemnity loan that the Turks should evacuate Thessaly within a month after due notification. Delegates appointed by the Powers shall oversee the evacuation. The Ambassadors are waiting instructions from their Governments before forwarding their letters.

On Saturday the Conservatives put in protests against the return of Guibord in Russell and Dr. Bridgeland in Muskoka. In the latter constituency Mr. George E. Langford, the defeated candidate, is the petitioner. This makes 63, of which one is a cross-petition, and another cross-petition is expected against Mr. Henry Hortop in South Wellington. Of these 63 petitions two have lapsed, so that 60 seats out of the 94 are in dispute.

A SONG OF LIFE

Weed the way for joy
  Ere life's morning closes.
Let not thorns destroy
  Sweets of all life's roses.

See on earth's green bosom
  Flowers, like stars of night.
See the desert blossom
  With a rose of light.

In the darkness one ray
  Shineth from afar,
Hope's unfettered sun ray,
  Love's immortal star.

See the black night riven
  By thy work—thy will.
Though the hills kiss heaven
  They shall throne thee still.

Weed the way for joy—
  Trample thorns of strife,
And be thy faith thy future,
  And be thy love thy life.

ERRORS OF INSTINCT.

Mistakes of Insects Which Seem to Deny Them the Power of Selection.

The opinion is still very generally entertained that with animals, especially those of the lower order, instinct is the determining guide that incites to the proper performance of action or function, and that as such it is far less liable to err than the reasoning of intelligence. Few scientific prejudices have been more difficult to overcome than that which removes from animals the reasoning faculty, and probably many years will yet elapse before it will be recognized that all animals which come under ordinary observation are endowed with the same kind of faculty, although developed in various degrees of a descending scale, which distinguishes man and the so called higher organisms. The bee and ant have been frequently held up as the best exponents of the instinct class, and more recently of the "exceptional" animals which developed reasoning powers, and it was a rude shock, not only to the layman, but as well to the scientist, when Sir John Lubbock, as the result of an almost endless series of experiments, announced a few years ago that these animals were "sadly wanting" both in their instinctive and intellectual traits. In other words, there were many times when both instinct and intelligence erred for them.

Some most remarkable instances of the erring of instinct among insects have recently been noted by naturalists, and they add an interesting chapter to the physiology of sense. One of these was the case of a butterfly, which persisted in visiting the artificial flowers on a lady's bonnet, mistaking them for the natural product. Another, and perhaps more striking, instance of fault is noted by the distinguished French entomologist, M. R. Blanchard, and concerns a species of sphinx moth, which entered a hotel room in the half obscurity of early morning, and was found to flit with direct intent to definite parts of the walls and ceiling. These were decorated with paintings of leaves and flowers, and to the latter the insect approached in repeated attacks, thrusting forward its proboscis as though intent upon intruding it into the opened cups of the beguiling flowers. After repeated failures and the resulting discouragement, the effort was given up, and the sphinx escaped by the window. This case of self deception is interesting in another way, inasmuch as it proves that it is not always the sense of smell, but at times that of sight, which directs insects to their flowers.—Washington Star.

The Phonograph In Russia.

Edison's phonograph has had a battle royal with Russian press censorship, says The Anglo-Russian. In the pavilion of the public gardens in Tagonrog the machine was exhibited, and attracted large audiences. It played and sang, and laughed and spoke for some time undisturbed, until a police officer heard the machine reciting one of Kriloff's famous fables—viz., "Demyan's Ukha" (soup or hospitality), but with some variations on the original text. The officer got suspicious, and not trusting to his memory, he ran at once and got Kriloff's book, and came again to listen to the phonograph's version of the fable. To his horror he found the fable reproduced not at all as it was passed by the censorship more than half a century ago.

An alarm was raised at once, the higher local authorities communicated with, and the manager of the pavilion, Mr. Parafinovitch, was called upon to explain the behavior of that speaking American beast. All the poor manager could do was to open the mysterious inside of the criminal machine and hand over to the authorities the indiscreet cylinder which threatened to tell the peaceful inhabitants so many undesirable things. But the arrest of the chief criminal was considered insufficient, as it could not have acted without a human accomplice. So, according to he Taganrog Viestnik, the affair has taken its official course, and the innocent manager of the pavilion has lost in the meantime his generally good appetite and sound sleep, as he does not know in what punishment the official proceedings will result, and how long he will have to wait until his fate is decided.—Invention.

Yule Dough.

The first authentic record of Christmas pie or pudding is that of the Yule dough. This was a paste made in the form of a baby and presented by the bakers to their customers as a Christmas gift. In ancient Rome on the vigil of the nativity sweetmeats in the form of images were presented to the holy fathers, and it is probable that Yule dough had its origin in this custom. A belief was prevalent at one time that mince pie, which is composed of fruits and spices grown in the east, was a survival in memory of the offerings brought by the wise men to Bethlehem, when they came to worship the infant Saviour. The pie in later years came to be a wonderful compound of fruits, spices and meats, eggs and sugar, and inspired the poet Herrick to write:

Come, guard this night the Christmas pie
That the thiefe, though ne'er so slie,
With his flesh hooks don't come nie
    To catch it.

Plum pudding, now the universal piece de resistance in England, was originally "plumb porridge," and was served from a tureen at all the Christmas festivals.—New York Tribune.

Luxurious Traveling.

The height of luxurious traveling has been reached by the czar and czarina. The empress' private car is upholstered in pale blue satin. The electric lamps are all in the form of lilies, and it contains writing and tea tables made of mother of pearl. The nursery is the next apartment, and is as comfortable and handsome as the same rooms in any of the czar's palaces. There are dining rooms and drawing rooms and several sleeping apartments. In fact, this train is a miniature palace. The wheels are covered with india rubber tires.—Philadelphia Ledger.

NYE'S FRIEND DAVIS.

HOW HE WORKED THE COSTLY DINNER JOKE ON THE HUMORIST.

A Sudden Advance In Price From 25 Cents to $22.70—How Davis Was Made to Impersonate the Chief Justice of North Carolina For a Day In Wyoming.

While Nye was not a mountain man to such an extent, there were frequent occasions when he got into the same horizon with Sam Davis, and when they associated there were hot times in the old towns.

After Nye had become famous and had taken to lecturing he had an odd adventure with Davis, whom often before he had met joyously and parted from sadly.

Davis was working on a San Francisco paper, and Nye, meeting him, asked if it were true that one could get a royal banquet in the Golden Gate town for the ridiculous prices mentioned by men who had been there. Davis said the stories were overdrawn, but still one could manage to exist on what was set before him even if he did not have a kegful of money in his possession.

"I'll tell you what," he said. "You come along with me to dinner this evening and I'll take you to a rotisserie—one of these French restaurants, you know, where you can get something for 25 cents, or if you prefer a 15 cent meal"—

"I guess not!" cried Nye, who was spending $15 a day for being allowed to breathe in the Palace hotel. "A quarter meal's cheap enough."

After they parted Davis hurried to one of the finest eating houses in all the coast country and had a brief but convincing conversation with the proprietor. He also called in to his aid a man with whom he knew Nye had had some pleasant correspondence and whom the lecturing knight desired to meet.

In the evening the three gourmets approached the lair of good eating. The menu card was presented. It was about as long as the Canadian Pacific's time table and made mention of wonderful things gastronomical. But Davis and the other San Franciscan behaved with ill temper when they saw it. There was no variety. It was no better than the 10 cent meals provided on Kearney street, and here they were prepared to pay two bits a head. Finally these two impatiently directed the waiters to bring everything that was on the bill, and they would select something fit to eat out of the lot. Mr. Nye had very little hair, but what he had rose in a spiky way.

"Do you mean to say," he gasped, "that the price of such a meal as you are ordering is a quarter?"

"Well," said Davis, in confusion, "of course 15 cents would be about the right price, but something seems to be wrong with the chef today. Try to make out a little, and we'll go somewhere else tomorrow. I am really filled with shame at bringing you here to such a poor, dismal excuse for a dinner, but I hadn't been in here for a month and didn't know it had run down so."

The two coastwise men objected to everything. It might be considered passable at a 20 cent place, but at a shop where the price was 25 cents it was inexcusable. The worst of it was that they had a guest with them, and he would carry away a poor opinion of San Francisco hospitality. They called the proprietor over and forced him to apologize to the visitor for the wretched food he had served. Then Davis

It Couldn't Be Worse.

Mrs. Millem is one of those inoffensive persons who are continually dreading that they may by some mischance hurt the feelings of others. Added to this she has had considerable trouble in getting a suitable cook and does not wish to offend her.

"John," she said to the manservant on the morning following the party, "do you happen to know whether—that is—I mean, can you find out, without asking the cook, whether the tinned salmon was all eaten last night? You see, I don't wish to ask her because she may have eaten it, and then she would feel uncomfortable," added the good soul.

"If you please, ma'am,' replied the man, "the new cook has eaten the tinned salmon, and if you was to say anything to her you couldn't make her more uncomfortable than she is." — Pearson's Weekly.

250,000 CURED.

Thousands of young men are made nervous wrecks, unfit fo business, social pleasures or home duties by evil habits in youth, later excesses, or private diseases. W. U. Andrews, of Akron, O., says: "I read this paper and have seen many reports of remarkable cures made by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan. I decided to treat with them. Indiscretion was the cause of my trouble. I was weak and nervous; no ambition; back weak. pimples on the face; thin and haggard; eyes sunken and cheeks hollow; dreams and drains at night; memory poor; varicocele and weak parts; irritable; sinking spells; specks before the eyes; lack of confidence; no energy; and many other complaints. I had tried fourteen doctors, bought four electric belts took scores of bottles of patent medicines—all failed. I tried the New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, and it cured me. I am a Man Again. I have gained twenty-six pounds and am strong mentally, physically and sexually. It is a wonderful treatment."

LOVE'S REINCARNATION.

Dear heart, did we meet long ago
  And walk and talk together then?
I think that it must have been so.
  If so, I wonder where or when.
Oft when you blush or smile for me,
  When your eyes droop before my gaze,
For one swift breath I seem to see
  Some dim, sweet scene from other days.

A gleam of gold on a stray tress
  Of hair on which the sun has shone,
A loving touch, a soft caress
  Or in your voice some minor tone
Brings back to me like the sweet chime
  Of silver bells on summer air
The memory of a bygone time
  Of life and loving otherwhere.

I know that I have loved you, dear,
  E'er since I first began to be.
My heart had missed you many a year
  When, at the last, you came to me,
And then I knew that I had met
  The one I sought, and by your side
I stay, with nothing to regret,
  Because my soul is satisfied.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE.

An Incident In Brescia During the Italian Revolution of 1848.

The Count de Hubner tells in his "Memoirs" a thrillling story of an adventure in the Italian city of Brescia during the days of the revolution of 1848. When the trouble began in the streets, he contrived to get into a house, taking with him two or three other persons, including the wife of a minor official who had intrusted the lady for awhile to the count's care, but who was to have certain news of her as soon as possible.

The firing grew heavier, and the rebels soon had possession of almost every house in the street.

On the 19th of March, Count de Hubner decided that he must do something toward bettering his position in case of an assault, and he forced his only remaining servant to make a dash across the street to the palace where the Austrian general, Rath, was quartered, two blocks away and on the other side. The man was merely to let the general know that De Hubner himself was coming, and to ask that the gates be held ready for him.

"Myself, prudence and my honor had a long and heated argument," says Count de Hubner. "Finally I pulled myself together. I had to let Prince Metternich know about myself, to make a last report, and to keep my word about poor Mme. M. I undid the door, drew a long breath, and plunged down the street.

"The bullets flew all around me, spattering leaden showers from the stone pavement. As I arrived at the gates of the palace, they swung [illegible]d, and in a second I was inside, u[illegible]hed. But only half my journey was done; I had still to go back again.

"A letter—my last report—was soon completed for Metternich and my message to the husband of Mme. M. was given. I had to return.

"Again the gates were opened and I bounded forth. A veritable fusillade followed. From every window and house top came the spurts of white smoke, and I tried to dodge 40 bullets at once. In a minute I had reached my own door, and as I did so I turned to look back.

"Another man left the palace gates at full speed, but before he had half crossed the street a puff of smoke shot out of a window, and he fell flat and was instantly lying like a log across the gutter. The fire stopped at once—what use would even an Italian see in shooting a dead man?

"But on the second that all became quiet to my great astonishment I saw this 'dead man' rise to his legs like a cat and dash across the street into the half open door waiting for him. The sharpshooters were taken by surprise and he escaped."

The Good Old Times.

"An increase of salary!" exclaimed the pompous manager of a small omnibus company to a clerk who had just made that request. "I am afraid, sir, that you are too extravagant."

He toyed with his heavy watch chain and looked severely at the young man, who returned his stare boldly. It was the set phrase on such occasions, and the applicant had heard it all before. He meant to have that rise or—go somewhere else.

"Excuse me, sir," he replied respectfully, "I haven't any chance to be extravagant on what I earn."

"Young man," continued the pompous gentleman, "I have risen from the monkey board. How? By being careful. When I was young, I made money by saving bus fares."

"Ah, that was in the old days," said the young man, with a knowing wink. "But with the bell punches and the present system of inspection you would find you couldn't save sixpence without being collared, however careful you were."

The manager nearly fainted, and the young man had to seek other employment. —Pearson's Weekly.

Egyptian Tombs.

These tombs, considered the oldest monuments of Egypt, are supposed to have been erected before or during the time of Joseph, and are profusely ornamented with a variety of colored figures, demonstrating ocularly that these ancient people were as gay and nimble as they were depicted, solemn and immovable in their usual sculpture. On some of the walls were hunting scenes, women playing the sackbut and dulcimer, or applying with cheerfulness the bastinado to those of either sex who stood in need of reformatory measures; glass blowers, brickmakers, barbers, plying their vocation and even a chiropodist attending to business. Over each picture was written what the artist intended to represent—an idea that might be employed to advantage by some of our fin de siecle painters.—Outing.

A Tiny Well Digger.

The mole is one of the thirstiest of animals. It never burrows at any great distance from water, and at times of drought when the supply of the needful element is diminished or cut off the "little gentleman in the velvet coat" counteracts the scarcity by digging wells until it comes to a depth at which water may be obtained.

Professional Interest.

Miss Antique (coyly)—Dear me! I wonder who that elderly gentleman is that has been following me round all the evening?

Miss Flatly—That is Professor Sniggings, the celebrated curiosity hunter.—London Tit-Bits.

Immigrants who come to this country in the spring have a great fancy for bringing with them birds from their native land. They appear to think that there are no birds worth the name over here. Irish immigrants bring linnets and thrushes and Germans bring their favorite bullfinch.

The isle of Man is to spend £1,000 a year in advertising itself.

FRUITS FOR THE TABLE.

Mrs. Rorer Tells the Best Kinds—How They Should Be Served.

Fruits are more appetizing and, perhaps, more easily digested if taken in the early part of the day—whether or not before the breakfast must be determined by the eater.

Grapes, oranges and shaddocks may be served before the cereal. Baked apples, peaches, baked bananas, figs, dates, prunes or stewed fruits should be served at the close of the breakfast.

Raisins, sultanas, dried figs and prunes should be soaked thoroughly, so that they may take up the same amount of water with which they have parted in the process of drying, and should then be heated just enough to soften the skins.

The subacid fruits, such as apples, figs, dates, peaches, persimmons, pears, prunes and apricots, are, perhaps, the best of the winter fruits and may be used to good advantage with animal foods.

Acid fruits must at all times be used most sparingly, especially by persons inclined to rheumatic troubles. The continued use of an orange or shaddock before breakfast will diminish the power of stomach digestion, for which reason they should be served with cereals or such foods as require only intestinal digestion.

The papaw and pineapple belong to a class alone. They contain a vegetable pepsin which assists in the digestion of the nitrogenous principles. These fruits, then, may be served with meats and will aid in their digestion. When served with bread and butter, they do not form so good a diet. They are more digestible raw than cooked, as the heat destroys the activity of the ferments.

Apples as a rule are more easily digested cooked than raw, although raw apples are more palatable.

The fashion of adding sugar to fruits should be avoided, as they have already been endowed with a sufficient amount of sugar, and as all the starch and cereals are converted into sugar any further amount would be stored in the system, to its detriment. If our bilious friends would throw aside their liver pills and with them sugar, they might be free from much discomfort.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer in Ladies' Home Journal.

Power of the Marseillaise Hymn.

Nothing of the kind in this world can be more impressive than the way in which an audience of 6,000 French radicals receives that wonderful air (the "Marseillaise"), says Colonel T. W. Higginson in The Atlantic. I observed that the chorus of young men who led the singing never once looked at the notes, and few even had any, so familiar was it to all. There was a perfect hush in that vast audience while the softer parts were sung, and no one joined even in the chorus at first, for everybody was listening. The instant, however, that the strain closed, the applause broke like a tropical storm, and the clapping of hands was like the taking flight of a thousand doves all over the vast arena.

Behind those twinkling hands the light dresses of the ladies and the blue blouses of workingmen seemed themselves to shimmer in the air. There was no coarse noise of pounding on the floor or drumming on the seats, but there was a vast cry of "Bis! Bis!" sent up from the whole multitude, demanding a repetition. The moment the first verse was sung through for the second time several thousand voices joined in the chorus. Then the applause was redoubled, as if they had gathered new sympathy from one another, after which there was still one more great applauding gust, and then an absolute quiet.

Nothing Remarkable.

Smith—Hear about the fire over on the West Side this morning? Nine persons barely escaped with their lives. Remarkable, wasn't it?

Brown—I fail to see anything very remarkable about it.

Smith—Why not?

Brown—Well, suppose they had escaped without their lives; then it would have been truly remarkable.—Chicago News.

Beware of Preservatives

Editor Morning Times:

Sir,—In building up the dairy industry of Ontario two things have been taught and urged, namely, purity and high quality of products and economy of production. Whatever set backs this great industry may have met in the past few years can be traced to a neglect of one or the other of these important points. The cheese industry of Ontario is now fairly well established, and the annual production of a large amount of well made, whole-milk cheese of uniform quality has given Canada a controlling influence in the British cheese market. Our creamery industry is now rapidly developing, and it is of vital importance that the strictest attention be paid to the turning out in an economical manner of butter of uniformly high quality, pure and unadulterated. This industry will, if properly conducted, assume very large proportions, since the average consumption of butter is much greater than that of cheese, and the British imports of butter greatly exceed those of cheese. In the British market our butter meets in competition similar goods from Ireland, Denmark, France, the United States, Australia and Argentina. Denmark has attained a chief place by studying the equirrements of the market, and now produces nearly all of her creamery export butter from pasteurized milk or cream with the use of special ferments. In some of the countries exporting to Great Britain—Australia in particular—it has become a practice to use some kind of "preservative" in butter-making. Sometimes this is added to butter as a salt; sometimes it is added to the milk. These preservatives are sold under various names, such names as preservaline, preservatine, prescrvitas, favorites. They are nearly all mixtures of boracic acid. The increasing use of these preservatives has alarmed the British consumer, and most radical measures are now proposed to exclude all butter in which traces of these preservatives are found. The British public has become alarmed, the press is actively discussing the matter, and public officials are now on the lookout for butter so adulterated. It must be carefully noted that all butter made from milk or cream to which anything but common salt has been added is adulterated. The butter producers of Ontario must make no mistake. The use of any of these preservatives is dangerous to the dairy interests of this country. Everything possible should be done to discourage the use of such substances, and the press should as far as possible prevent the advertising of them in this country. Ontario has earned a reputation for producing pure dairy goods of high quality. That reputation must be maintained, and every person interested in the dairy business of Ontario should assist in preventing these "preservatives' from getting a foothold in this Province. "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." We have a reputation now for making pure cheese and butter. Help to maintain that reputation. Do not advocate preservatives. Do not advertise preservatives. Do not use preservatives.

JOHN DRYDEN,
Minister of Agriculture for Ontario.
Toronto, April 15th, 1898.

The Summer Term at the Toronto College of Music

With a view of enlarging the sphere of usefulness of the Toronto College of Music by placing its unrivalled tuition—unsurpassed in respect to completeness and moderate charges—within the reach of many students who may be other wise engaged during the larger part of the year, a summer term has been instituted, to the advantages of which the attention of music teachers, advanced music students, and others having a vacation period, is particularly invited. The summer term opens July 1st and closes July 30th. There is little need of expatiating upon the advantages received by a course at this well established institution. Especial attention is given to teachers from out of town who wish to furnish anew their musical repertoire, every facility will be offered to them, the faculty being composed of the same members as during the fall and winter terms. Send for new illustrated catalogue containing full information as to terms, etc. F. H Torrington, Musical Director, 12 and 14 Pembroke Street, Toronto.

His Holiness vs. His Excellency

A story is going the rounds in social circles here which we think is too good not to be put in print. It seems that a recent dinner party at Rideau Hall, His Excellency, Lord Aberdeen, who had a mania for ventilation, ordered the window to be opened. Mr. Pope, the clever M. P. for Compton, turned to the lady beside him and said, "Don't you find it rather cold?" Upon the lady assenting he told the footman to close it. His Excellency noticing a few minutes after that it was closed told the man to re-open it. This, of course, made the room chilly and Mr. Pope beckoned the man and asked why it was opened. "Beg pardon, sir," replied he "but His Excellency the Governor-General ordered it to be opened.' 'Well," retorted the witty M. P., "you tell tell His Excellency the Governor-General that the Pope orders it to be closed.' There the story ends.

CORNWALL CANAL AND RIVER REACHES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for improvements at Upper Entrance of Cornwall Canal and River Reaches" will be received at this Office until 16 o'clock on Saturday the 30th day of April, 1898, for the works connected with the widening, straightening and deepening of the Upper Entrance of the Cornwall Canal and the River Reaches between Cornwall and Coteau Landing.

Plans and Specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 15th day of April, 1898, at the Office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Cornwall. Printed forms of Tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $17.000 must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the condition requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of November, A. D., 189 , will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

CLOSE CALL FOR CHINA HALL

A Disastrous Conflagration Narrowly Averted Last Night

About eight o'clock last night the fire brigade were summoned to extinguish a blaze at China Hall, corner of Simcoe and George streets. A stove in too close proximity to a window curtain was the cause of the fire and owing to the promptness of the brigade a Babcock was found equal to the emergency.

Mr. Wilson, the manager, was in the basement at the time of the occurrence. He was the only person on the premises and as the fire broke out in his private office on the main floor it was of course beyond his vision. Fortunately, however, the blazing curtain was noticed by some people who were passing and the alarm given just in the nick of time.

Had the fire occurred at a later hour—when the streets were deserted—a disastrous conflagration could scarcely have been averted, as the office is located immediately over the coal oil tanks and a very few minutes would have sufficed for the flames to have reached the oil. It was a close call.

Mr. Wilson estimates the damages at $25—covered by insurance.

The firemen have been distinguishing themselves at the recent fires by their alertness and promptness.

A BURNING CHIMNEY.

Shortly after nine o'clock yesterday morning the brigade had a run to Smith street and the cause was a burning chimney.

A little forethought in the way of ascertaining whether the fire in the chimney is apt to prove serious would save the brigade from many a long run. Almost every day a false alarm comes in for a blazing chimney, and if a serious conflagration should break out in some part of the town whilst the brigade was answering some such call, much damage might result before a return to the fire hall could be made and the men dispatched to the point from which the second alarm was sent in.

Interesting Items of Local and District Happenings in Brief

—The Times received yesterday another club of over 100 subscribers from the East Riding. Everybody reads the Times.

—"Yes,' said the fish to his shuddering family, "I got away; but just think how that man will lie about me!"

—Dr. Bryce, Ontario Medical Health Officer, Toronto, is in Lindsay in consultation with the civic authorities on sewerage matters.

—The Underwriters' Association are offering rewards of $250 each in the case of two incendiary fires that recently occurred in Belleville.

—Grandma used to spin, but now
Grandma doesn't care to;
Fact is wheels have altered so
Grandma doesn't dare to.

—"Doctor, who was that man that screeched and yowled so loud when you were pulling his tooth?" "That was a Christian Science friend of mine."

—Did it ever occur to you that the Morning Times is the most widely read newspaper in Eastern Ontario? If you doubt it just enquire of the village and country postmasters.

—Mr. Big Push Morgan has been engaged by Contractor Wade to assist in taking charge of the sewer work. Mr. Morgan is a "pusher," and understands how to build sewers.

—Mr. McQuay, confectioner, No. 406 George street, has just completed a fine new brick coal oven of Cassel pattern on his premises. It is of the latest design. Mr. McQuay has also engaged a first-class Toronto baker.

—Rats are sought for in Lindsay. Mr. A. Dulmage, fur buyer, of Belleville, visited that place about two weeks ago and secured a very large number of rat pelts. The price he offered was so good that since then two large sacks of pelts have been shipped to him, and the third was forwarded yesterday.

DEATH OF WM. BLETCHER

Proprietor of the First Stage Line Between Port Hope and Peterborough

William Bletcher, a prominent citizen of Port Hope and well-known in Peterborough and throughout this entire district, died yesterday from an attack of pneumonia after only six days' illness.

Deceased was proprietor of the first stage line between Port Hope and Peterborough and in character and disposition commanded high regard from all who knew him. He was sociable in his tastes, genial and obliging, and honorable in his business. He numbered friends in every walk in life and his demise will be learned with regret by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Tenders for Sidewalk

Sealed Tenders addressed "A Dawson, Esq.," and endorsed "Tender for Sidewalk," will be received at this office up to 4 o'clock p.m. on Wednesday, April 27th, 1898, for the construction of a footwalk from the Auburn bridge. Plans, etc., may be seen at the office of S. Belcher, Esq., Town Engineer. The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted. S. R. Armstrong, Town Clerk.

April Weddings

At St. Peter's cathedral yesterday morning at seven o'clock Rev. Father Scanlon performed the sacrament of matrimony uniting for life Mr. Stephen Corkery, of Peterborough, and Miss Johanna Meade, of Ashburnham. Mr. Jas. Mahoney supported the groom, while Miss Clara Meade, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. The bride received many handsome gifts from her friends.

Another interesting wedding was also celebrated at St. Peter's yesterday morning at eight o'clock, being the marriage of Mr. Richard J. Cavanagh and Miss Ida Reviot. Ven. Archdeacon Casey performed the ceremony, mass being also celebrated. The groom's best man was Mr. Gus White, the bridesmaid being Miss B. Phelan. After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served at the Snowden House, and the happy couple left on the 11.15 train for a honeymoon trip. The bride was the recipient of many very handsome presents.

A HARMLESS LOOKING PHIAL

That Contained Sufficient Nitro-Glycerine to Blow Up a Battleship

When McDonald, who is accused of burglarizing the Norwood post office, was arrested at Havelock, a small bottle of harmless looking liquid was found in his possession. The fluid was not esteemed dangerous and consequently was not handled with any particular amount of care. In fact when the case came up for hearing at the town buildings here the bottle narrowly escaped being knocked off the table by a witness and the prisoner, noticing the occurrence, asked that it be removed to a place of safety. In view of what is to follow the request will be recognized as having been a timely one.

On the conclusion of the preliminary hearing Dominion Constable Parkinson took the bottle to Ottawa for analysis. The analyst in Ottawa had an experience with the fluid which is related in the following despatch received from Ottawa yesterday:

An explosion took place this morning in the analysts' branch of the Inland Revenue Department. The analysts were experimenting upon the contents of a bottle that had been sent them for analysis. A pen was dipped into the bottle and a drop placed upon a piece of paper. A heavy weight was then let fall upon the paper, and the result was an explosion that knocked down the analyst. The bottle contained sufficient nitro-glycerine to have wrecked the West block, where it was tested.

The prisoner, McDonald, will now have to answer to the law for the danger in which he has placed life and property. The criminal code fixes the penalty for this crime at life imprisonment. The County Crown Attorney has been notified by the Attorney-General's Department to indite the prisoner under this section of the criminal code.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

—Miss Cahill and Miss Mahoney are in Toronto.

—Mr. J. H. Corcoran, of Norwood, was in town yesterday.

—Miss Ada McBain returned to the Whitby Ladies' College yesterday.

—Mr. J. Herbert Hall has assumed his duties as deputy Custom House officer.

—Miss Rudkins and Miss Howe went to Toronto on a business trip yesterday morning.

—His Lordship Bishop O'Connor attended the funeral of Cardinal Taschereau in Quebec on Monday.

—Mr. George Matthews, of Lindsay, and Miss Alice, who have been in town for a few days, have returned home.

—Mr. Percy Rubidge returned yesterday from a trip to Collingwood, Orillia and the Midland District, and will go into training for the lacrosse season.

—Messrs. Rich. P. Gough and A.G. Gough are in Montreal on business.

—Mr Art. Spellman, of the Clarendon House, Hastings, who was in town for a few days returned home yesterday.

Dr. Bell went to Perth yesterday to attend the funeral of his uncle, Rev. Dr. Bell, of Toronto, late registrar of Queen's University, of which he was the first graduate.

—Mr. H. D. Kennedy is conducting evangelistic services at Hiawatha. He has just returned from Grenville, Que., where he successfully conducted a series of evangelistic meetings for a month.

—Mr. G. D. Atkinson, of Caledonia, who is studying at the Toronto College of Music under Mr. F. H. Torrington, has been appointed organist of the Bathurst Street Methodist Church, Toronto.

THE BOYS IN RED

Will Decide on Tuesday Next Where They Will Celebrate the 24th

On account of the wheelmen's meet being held here on July 1st—the recognized date for the battalion's annual outing—the 57th have decided to take their annual trip on the 24th of May this year and remain at home on Dominion Day.

Lt.-Col. Bell has received several invitations from places desiring to entertain the 57th. Among these are Kingston, Ottawa and Napanee. The latter is to have a Dominion Day celebration, but Lt.-Col. Bell wrote and said that the Battalion would probably go away this year on the 24th of May, and not on July 1st, and he has not received a reply yet.

Tuesday evening next the list of invitations to hand will be submitted to the men and they will then choose for themselves. This decision was arrived at last night after drill.

Wherever the corps goes it must make a creditable showing in order to maintain the good reputation it has already made in these places. To do this every member should now make it a point to attend drill, and bring the Battalion up to its proper state of efficiency. There are only five weeks between now and the 24th of May, so that no time should be lost.

REV. JAS. G. POTTER

Receives a Letter of Condolence from His Congregation

Rev. Jas. G. Potter, pastor of St. Andrew's church, has received the following letter of condolence from his congregation:

To our Beloved Pastor:

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to call home to her reward your dear mother, we, the members of your church, desire to convey to you and to your esteemed father who is well known to us all, our heartfelt sympathy in your bereavement. We know the sorrow it causes to be called upon to part with our dear ones, but what a consolation it is when we know they are not lost to us, although removed, but only gone before.

Your mother's work on earth was finished according to God's plan, and she has now entered upon that blessed rest prepared for all who love the Lord. We sincerely sympathize with you in your bereavement, and we know that although the loss to you is very great, yet you can discern God's hand in it and know that "this also cometh from the Lord of hosts," who though "wonderful in counsel" is ever excellent in working.

Our earnest prayer to God is that this severe trial through which you are called to pass at this time may be sanctified to you all. "Yet a little while and He that shall come will come and will not tarry." Soon shall death-divided friends meet never again to know separation, and all the bitter tears and parting of a weeping world will be over. May you all be able to look forward to that blessed hope and that glorious appearing when "them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him," and may the great Comforter give you that grace at this time which He has specially promised, and may the thought reconcile you and enable you to bear all that has been permitted by a kind and loving Father who cannot err and who doeth all things well.

Signed on behalf of congregation.

R. W. Bell, Chairman Board of Man.; Alex. Campbell, for Session; F.A. Walden, Secretary.

Fire Sale at Mason's

The recent fire at E. F. Mason & Co's. has had the effect of slightly damaging by smoke the immense stock of groceries and provisions carried by this firm, and in order to faciliate renovation and make room for new goods, a clearing sale has been inaugurated and is now in full swing. Everything must go, and at almost your own price. Don't procrastinate! Call to-day!

A Narrow Escape

A couple of young lads engaged in catching drift wood on the western end of Little Lake had a narrow escape from drowning yesterday afternoon. While endeavoring to raise a log with a pike pole the boat upset, precipitating the youngsters into the water. Their screams attracted the attention of an Otonabee farmer who was coming to town and the result was their prompt rescue. Parents who allow children to engage in such dangerous work at any time, but more particularly in such weather as prevailed yesterday, are deserving of censure. Life should not be held so lightly.

The evidence in the case proves Hood's Sarsaparilla cures scrofula, salt rheum, boils, humors and all eruptions.

Easter Millinery Booming

To say that we've started to be busy in Millinery hardly expresses the idea of the big rush of past days—so far trade is doubling up on last year, and though our staff of trimmers and saleswomen has been increased, we think it necessary to warn those who intend to order an Easter Hat or Bonnet here, that it will be the part of wisdom to see to the matter at once—this week if possible.

WAR WILL BEGIN ON SATURDAY

United States Troops to be Transported to Cuba

WILL MAKE AN ATTACK AT CARDENAS

Spaniards Make Oath Before the Shrine of the Virgin that they Will Never Return to their Country if They are not Victorious Over the Yankees—England Spoils a Big Sensation

New York, April 20.—War between Spain and the United States will be on by Saturday morning, unless Spain backs down, and Spain will not back down, as her reply has already been practically given. It is no longer a question whether there will be war, or when it will come, but how long it will last? The first step to carry out the determination of Congress and the Executive will be the blockade of Cuban ports. This was finally determined at two Cabinet meetings yesterday. Orders will be sent, if they have not already been sent, to Captain Samson, commander of the North Atlantic squadron, to prepare for making an offensive movement against Havana and other ports of the island. The squadron at Key West will probably move from that place to Cuban waters on Saturday. Its first business will be to establish a protected landing-place on the Cuban coast, at which the military forces and marine battalions can embark. This may not be accomplished quickly, but until such a place has been secured the military forces will remain at the four points of mobilization—Chickamauga, Mobile, New Orleans and Tampa.

Volunteer organizations will be sent to these camps as fast as possible, and supplies will be hurried on to the coast. Great labor and time will be involved in shipping these supplies to the three stations on the gulf, and will probably cause some delay in the military movements. The landing-places, which are protected by the squadron, or part of it, will be used as the base of supplies and operations, and until the army forces arrive shore work will devolve on the marine battalions to be sent to Cuba on the auxiliary cruisers Panther and Badger, formerly the steamships Venezuela and Yumuri. It is apparently the intention of the Government to begin the land campaign in Cuba without regard to the climatic dangers of the approaching rainy season. Naval officers say that the report of the Maine Court of Inquiry is too convincing to be shaken in the least by the reports made by Spanish officials. Had the explosion been from an interior cause the officers would not have been absolved from blame by the American court.

It is not possible to mistake the attitude of Spain in the situation. The words of Senor Sagasta are equivalent to an eager and defiant taking up of the gage thrown down by that American nation. His words are calculated to arouse all those feelings which make for war in the Spanish breast.

It must be remembered that Sagasta's record shows him to be utterly unpromising as regards opposition to any suggestion for the termination of Castilian sovereignty in Cuba. Not long ago be stated emphatically that the sale of the island would be a sale of national honor itself; so that it is not likely he will consent to an absolute giving away of so rich a possession without an appeal to arms. The Cortes supports him enthusiastically in his stand, and all sections of the people over whom he presides have cast aside their too-apparent dissensions and united against aggression. Even the Carlists, through their leader, threaten dire results should Spain forget her honor. Spain presents a solid phalanx so far as sentiment goes, and it is a foregone conclusion that she is ready to make untold sacrifices to maintain the integrity of her territory.

There can only be one outcome of a war waged between a decaying Latin nation and a virile Anglo-Saxon one. From the days when Drake, Frobisher, Raleigh and other Elizabethan sea dogs ravaged the Spanish main, making prizes of rich Spanish galleons, finally breaking up the Armada, down to the deadly blows dealt at Spanish power by St. Vincent and Nelson, such contests have only had one result. The lesson of history teach that these results will be repeated. The close of the approaching conflict may, therefore, be characterized as the final act in the drama of war which has been played between Anglo-Saxondom and Spain during four hundred years, the only difference being that it has been left for the daughter to finish what the mother began—the utter destruction of Spanish prestige, and the erasure of Castile and Aragon from the list of great powers.

TO STRIP FOR THE FIGHT.

Key West.—April 20.—An official dispatch was received here this morning ordering the squadron to be prepared at an hour's notice to leave for Cuban waters. The monitor Puritan will soon be stripped for her fight, which is expected to take place in a few days.

FIRST LAND ATTACK.

New York, April 20.—A Washington special says that the President's ultimatum will go to Spain to-day, and that troops already sent south will on Saturday be transported to Cuban coast for a land attack in concert with an attack from the interior by the insurgents. Point of attack is expected to be at Cardenas, a poorly fortified place sixty miles from Matanzas.

U. S. ARMY AGENT AT OTTAWA.

Ottawa, April 20.—James Craig, supposed to be an agent of the United States army, was in the city yesterday. His mission is a mystery, but there are rumors that he was here buying stores from the Goverment; that his mission was to secure experts in the art of warfare from Canada; also that he was secretly organizing a regiment of Canadians to fight the Spaniards. As Mr. Craig only remained for lunch they could not be verified.

A SPANISH OATH.

Madrid, April 20.—8 a.m.—The crews of the Spanish squadron at Cadiz vowed before the shrine of the Virgin never to return unless victorious.

Minister Woodford is preparing to leave Madrid.

CORTES A SCENE OF TUMULT.

Madrid, April 20.—The Cortes met to-day amidst a scene of tumult. All around were crowds, who cheered wildly for war. The Queen Regent's speech aroused the war spirit of the people to fever heat.

A SCHEME THAT FAILED.

Madrid, April 20.—Via Bayonne, April 20.—There is much anger here against Great Britain, that Government having blocked a scheme which had been prepared to give the United States a tremendous scare. It was proposed that the European concert should make a big naval demonstration in New York harbor immediately after the presentation of their collective note, in which a warning was to be presented to the United States, Austria, Germany, France and Italy agreed to this plan, while Russia expressed a willingness to participate if Great Britain did, and not otherwise. Great Britain, after holding the matter under advisement for forty-eight hours, refused to be a party to any such demonstration, and the scheme fell through.

STOCKS GREATLY DEPRESSED.

New York, April 20.—Local operators gave support to the market this morning, and as a consequence stocks, while lower, were above parity in London. Trading was extremely dull, with only fifteen different stocks dealt in during the first ten minutes. International shares were weakest. Of purely local securities, Sugar was down one point and Tobacco 1 1-4. Second quotations were from 1-4 to 3-8 higher than the opening.

BOOM FOR HALIFAX.

Ottawa, April 20.—Lieut. H. Neilson has returned to the city after a month's absence, during which he inspected the different fortifications on the eastern coast of the Dominion. He says that there is no doubt but what all American steamship lines running into Boston and New York will land passengers at Halifax in case of war, thus making that port for the time being one of the most important on the Continent.

SPANISH MINISTER SAILS.

Washington, April 20.—The Spanish Minister, having obtained his passports, left for New York this afternoon. He will sail immediately.

The Secretary has notified Mr. Woodford of the departure of the Spanish Minister at Washington and instructed the United States representative at Madrid to leave the Spanish capital.

A SPANISH DIPLOMAT'S OPINION.

London, April 20.—The Daily News this morning publishes an interview with "a Spanich diplomatist, who is in the secrets of the Madrid Government." The diplomatist in question denied that Spain would appeal to Europe after making a show of fighting. On the contrary, he said, she would fight for years, if necessary, to retain Cuba. He repudiated the idea that the result of the war would be a Republic in Spain. The Carlists, he asserted, were the strongest party, and they would help the Government, while the Queen Regent was adored throughout the country.

"A Republic may come some day," he said, "but not unless Spain is defeated thoroughly, and her national honor as a kingdom defaced. The Spanish land and sea forces are perfect. Their armaments are the best. We will not criticize the American fleet or the American army, because we know their officers are well trained and that they are brave; but what material have they to work upon; the American navy is worked by a motley crew of black men, yellow men, and sailors of all nations. Well officered, it is true; but what is this to the crew of a Spanish ship, all of one nationality, under strict discipline, and fighting for their very Kingdom? The United States navy will, no doubt, fight well, but their drawback is that they are fighting for a cause not exactly patriotic, but for the independence of a rebellious party in an island which even the American Government refuses to recognize as capable of forming a Government.

"There will be hard sea-fighting. It is difficult to say on which side victory will lie. We are superior in torpedo boats; the Americans in battleships; but conceding the superiority of America in this respect, she will suffer a disadvantage in having her fighting hired for the purpose. There is no question of money. Spain is not so financially moribund as some people seem to believe. Our resources are enormous when the national honor is at stake. A suspension of payments on the debts of the country would only be last resource and would not go hard with anyone. Every man in the army is willing to wait for his pay until the war is ended. The Spanish resources of discipline and national honor are all on our side."

BITTER AGAINST THE YANKEES.

Havana, April 20.—Many of the residents of Havana do not believe war imminent, though doubtless they would like to think so. They are convinced that victory over the Americans is assured. Senor Ramon Galban, a leading merchant, said in the presence of this correspondent: "I wish there was war to-morrow, and I would give my life to see a victory over the Yankees." Others say, for instance: "The Yankees will not take Havana, but if they should, they will only find ruins." Some emphatically declare that they would prefer to blow up their own houses rather than have them taken by the Americans. There is a good deal said along this line.

Three British subjects, who were detained in Cabanas fortress under suspicion of taking notes as to the fortifications, have been released on the request of Mr. Gollan, the British Consul-General.

MEXICO STRICTLY NEUTRAL.

Mexico City, April 20.—Mexico will maintain a strictly neutral attitude in case hostilities begin. Spaniards generally here feel gloomily over the situation

GEN. WEYLER'S VIEWS.

Madrid, April 20.—In an interview last evening General Weyler said war will be chiefly naval.

"If Americans reach Cuba several hundred thousand men will be necessary,' he said, "fever will kill half of them and we will answer for the rest."

NOTHING TO DO BUT FIGHT.

Washington, April 20.—Secretary of State Sherman to-day expressed the following view regarding the Cuban situation

"We shall be at war soon enough to suit the most impatient of our country-men, for much as I have hoped that Spain would see the hopelessness of an armed conflict with the United States, I am now convinced she will not recede even in the eleventh hour. If Spain viewed the matter is the proper light, she would see at once that by withdrawing from Cuba no dishonor would attach to the act Great nations have frequently suffered the loss of territory for good reasons. I had hoped that Spain would see the error of her ways and the hopelessness of an armed conflict with the United States, but am to-day more than ever convinced she will fight. If Spain viewed the matter in its true light she would see that in yielding to our demands she was conserving her best interests, present and future. But for purely dynastic reasons she has, as I believe, determined to die in the ditch, and if she so wills it, die where she will. As to how long the war, when be gun, will last, is beyond my ken. It ought not to last more than a few weeks, if no foreign complication arises, and it may last some months.

REBELS AGREE TO A TRUCE.

Madrid, April 20.—An official despatch from Havana says Captain General Blanco has chartered a vessel to bring over 4,000 Spanish sailors, who have heretofore served in the United States Navy but who are now desirous of defending their own country.

The official despatch adds that the Cuban insurgent leader, Betancourt, has published a proclamation agreeing to a suspension of hostitities.

THE PRETENDER IN BELGIUM.

Ostend, April 20.—Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender, accompanied by a numerous suite, has arrived here. It is understood that the pretender will remain at Ostend for some time to come. Ostend is a sea port town of Belgium on the North Sea and only about sixty miles from England, where the followers of Don Carlos have been very active recently, under the leadership of the Earl of Ashburnham.

WANT TO FIGHT ALL THE TIME.

London, April 20.—The rush of applicants for enlistment in the United States army or navy was continued to-day between forty and fifty English and Irish sailors or soldiers having applied for enlistment at the United States Consulate this morning.

DENMARK ACTING CAUTIOUSLY.

New York, April 20.—A special from Washington says there is said to be a bitch in the plan of ending war orders by was of St. Thomas to an American fleet that may be in that locality. It is said the Danish Government has refused to permit it, fearing Spain might construe such a privilege as an unfriendly act.

AN INSURGENT ATTACK.

Havana, April 20.—The war is fiercely waged, and no attempt to conceal it is made. It is officially reported today that a large number of insurgents commanded by Lores, Aguilar, Rizo and Vengas this morning attacked the fort of Esquijarosa, near the Francisco ward of Pinar del Rio City. The fort was guarded by volunteers from El Sumidero. The insurgents opened a deadly fire, which was answered, says the report, by the volunteers for three hours. The insurgents broke the lines of the volunteers, carried their trenches, and even entered the town, securing a large booty.

DERVISH FUGITIVES ROUTED

Pitiable Case of Hardship at St. Catharines.

E. B. Eddy, the "Match King," the Defendant in an Action for Support Brought by His Daughter.

(Special to the Times.)

London, April 20.—A despatch to The Daily Telegraph from Arrsoaan on on the Nile says a gunboat that has returned to Dakala from Shendy reports that it had an engagement near El Alib with fugitives from Mahmoud's army, killing 200 and capturing 70.

PREFER THE GROUND TO HOME.

St. Catharines, April 20.—A distressing case of hardship and suffering is reported from Jordan Station. The officials have for some time past been endeavoring to get an old and decrepit woman named Campbell and her blind son into the Industrial Home. They are both weak-minded and live in a little tumble-down shanty, subsisting on what thoughtful neighbors provide. But they steadfastly refused to go to the home. On Saturday night last their hovel was burned down and the pair are now huddled beneath five boards leaned against a fence, and there they have slept outside since without bedding. It is a pitiable state of affairs, and the authorities will try again to get them to go to the home

"MATCH KING" BEING SUED.

Ottawa, April 20.—E. B. Eddy, the well-known match manufacturer of Hull, has been served with notice of an action taken against him by his daughter, Mrs. Bessey, for support. This is but the latest of several litigations between father and daughter arising out of a disagreement as to the disposition of the property of Mr. Eddy's first wife. Two of these cases are now before the Privy Council, and the plaintiff, Mrs. Bessey, claims that she has not enough money to pay her lawyers. Upon this plea the action of support is based. Mrs. Bessey claims an allowance of $400 a month.

UNION LABELS LEGAL

The Bill Passed at Ottawa To-day Through Committee

Ottawa, April 20.—The Canada Atlantic Transit Company's bill, which is for running a line of steamers between Parry Sound, and points in the United States, passed the Banking and Commerce Committee to-day.

The bill to amend the trademarks act so as to legalize union labels at the request of trades and labor unions was also passed. D. J. O'Donoghue was looking after the bill, which was in charge of Mr. Bertram, M. P.

A MILL BURNED

Mysterious Blaze and Heavy Loss To-day to a Firm at Kingston

Kingston, April 19.—This morning fire destroyed the planing mill of R. Gaw, Place d'Armes. The origin of the fire is a mystery, as there was no fire in the building last night when the workmen left. The fire undoubtedly began near to the engine room. As the place was full of inflammable material, it made a hot blaze. The loss is about $12,000, insurance only $5,000.

THE DANGEROUS SLING

Stone Slipped Out, Hit a Lad and Fractured His Skull

Kingston, April 19.—A lad named Lebeup was throwing stones with a sling, and, as he twirled the sling, the stone slipped out and struck Allan Robinson, aged 10, over the right eye. The skull was fractured. The lad is in the hospital, and may die.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 21, 1898

THE MAYORALTY OF PARTYISM

Shortly after the Provincial election threats of protests began to be heard on every side. Many of these threats were carried into effect until the number of protests entered amounted to over sixty. These protests were based on charges of corruption in various ways. The men against whom the protests were entered, it was freely alleged, either had personally or their friends for them, bought votes, secured impersonation, practiced intimidation, and done other illegal things to such an extent as to seriously influence the election. Now if any of these things were known to have been done, it was an eminently proper thing to lodge a complaint, and set in motion the machinery of justice for their punishment. But what is to be said of the men, who, after making these charges, allow them to drop when it is in the interests of their political party to act? Either the charges were false, or the men who made them are willing to permit corruption to go unpunished to benefit the party to which they belong. The party advantage is secured by the dropping of a protest thus: Suppose in two constituencies the two representatives holding the seats are a Liberal and a Conservative. Now a protest is entered in both cases; well, the party managers get their heads together, and they conclude not to press the charges on either side. In which case, the men, though elected by, and known to be elected by, immoral means, are undisturbed in their position. This is a specimen of the deals which the party leaders in this Province have put through so that instead of 65 cases entered for court action proceeding to trial all have been withdrawn except nine.

HOW IT WILL BE DONE

The manner in which Cuba is to be invaded by United States troops, in the event of war, is outlined in the Chicago Times-Herald of Sunday. The first troops to be employed will be the negro regiments, as they are better fitted to stand the tropical climate of Cuba, and are immune from yellow fever, which makes frightful havoc among the whites. The "niggers" are good fighters and loyal. According to the best attainable information, the plan of the Navy Department is that when war is declared, Captain Sampson with his flying squadron will steam to Havana and attack it by sea. His fleet will be accompanied by transports containing troops. These will be landed and will invest the city from the west. Havana will be shelled, and it is confidently believed by the Yankees that this can be done without exposing their vessels to any danger. They regard the defenses of Havana as weak and obsolete, in spite of the fact that they are generally considered formidable. Consul-General Lee, who is a military expert, thinks that an adequate land force would find it an easy matter to capture the city by a land attack. The American troops, it is calculated, will receive effective assistance from the insurgent troops in the Province of Pinar del Rio, who are well acquainted with the roads and should prove valuable as scouts and guides to the American army. On the east will be Garcia and Gomez, who will promptly make a diversion in that direction—so it is anticipated.

Not much opposition is feared from Blanco's army, the Spanish troops being poorly equipped, besides which their rations are sure to run short in a few weeks after the opening of hostilities. The badly disciplined bands of insurgents under the Cuban generals have held the Spaniards in check, a fact that in the eyes of the military experts of the Republic proclaims their inefficiency. The well-armed and well-disciplined troops of the United States, it is averred, will defeat them in short order; and it is believed that the fall of Havana can be brought about in less than a week.

The reader can put this aside for future reference, in order to be able to compare predictions with results.

Matrimonial statistics inform us that a widow has three times the drawing power of an old maid. This shows to some extent the virtue of the widow's might.

Pretty soon now the sound of the saw will be heard in the protest lumber yard.—Brantford Courier.

That may be, but the parties will have to do some skilful log-rolling before effecting a saw-off.

Before charging the Cubans or Spaniards with the destruction of the Maine, the American authorities should have consulted the Rev. Luke McCabe, a professor at the Seminary of St. Charles, Philadelphia. He has come to the conclusion that the ship was not blown up, but broke in two from her own weight, and that the present condition of the Maine's keel could not have been produced by explosives. He adds that ever since she was launched the Maine has had a tendency to go down at the head, and that the increasing strain at last produced the crash. The theory may be ingenious, but in the present temper of the Americans will not be accepted.

A Windfall

From "Ups and Downs," published in London, England, under the auspices of Dr. Barnado's Homes: Thomas Whitnall, we rejoice to hear, has received a letter from a lawyer in England, informing him that he has fallen heir to three acres of land in the neighborhood of Glastonbury, in Wiltshire. His present employer, Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, of Lindsay, who is also a lawyer, is taking the necessary steps to secure for Tom the heritage he deserves. In a letter addressed to Mr. Owens, he says: "I am much pleased on Tommy's account. He is a first-rate boy and of very fine character and disposition, and will make honest use of his little fortune." We shall watch with interest how Thomas Whitnall, Esq., conducts himself in his new role as a "bloated English landlord."

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. Bad Blood Is a Good Thing to be rid of, because bad blood is the breeding place of disfiguring and dangerous diseases. Is your blood bad? It is if you are plagued by pimples or bothered by boils, if your skin is blotched by eruptions or your body eaten by sores and ulcers. You can have good blood, which is pure blood, if you want it. You can be rid of pimples, boils, blotches, sores and ulcers. How? By the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

It is the radical remedy for all diseases originating in the blood. Read the evidence:

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me by my physician as a blood purifier. When I began taking it I had boils all over my body. One bottle cured me."—BONNER CRAFT, Wesson, Miss.

"After six years' suffering from blood poison, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and although I have used only three bottles of this great medicine, the sores have nearly all disappeared."—A. A. MANNING, Houston, Texas.

Shaving a Pursued Bandit.

"I shaved Jesse James, the once noted outlaw, down in southern Kentucky a long time ago," said an old gray haired fellow on the train the other day, "when the man's life wasn't worth a penny. Jesse rushed into my little country place, down in the Red river country, one day in the latter part of December and asked me if I wouldn't shave him while he looked after his colt's revolvers and watched the door. I was not a barber by trade, but those persuaders Jesse had induced me to try my hand with a new Wade & Butcher razor I took out of my showcase. As I shaved, the man of iron nerve sat with a cocked pistol in each hand and told me in a few hurried words that a posse was pursuing him, bent on capturing him, dead or alive, on the charge of robbing a bank at Russellville, a crime, he averred, of which he was not guilty. He wanted his beard shaved off that he might fool his pursuers if they should happen to catch up with him. I finished the job of scraping. The much wanted individual thanked me, and, mounting a horse, which had been hitched in the rear of my store, bade me good evening and rode away. I didn't know for certain who my visitor was, although I suspected it, until the next day, when I heard that a man in the neighborhood was telling that he had seen the elder James the afternoon before. I suppose that was the last shave Jesse James got in Kentucky, and I have never seen him after that day."—Louisville Post.

to introduce "Glimpses of the Unseen," the most marvellous book since the publication of the Bible. Revealed religion demonstrated. Supernatural facts of the Bible no longer in doubt. Rev. Dr. Austin is the Editor; Dr. Badgley, Professor of Philosophy, Victoria University, writes the introduction. The contributors are scholarly and devout men, among whom are Rev. Dr. Thomas, Judge Groo, Rev. G. W. Henderson, Rev. Wm. Kettlewell, J. H. Coyne, M. A., Chaplain Searles, Evangelist Crossley and many others. Contains experiences of Wesley, Mark Twain, Dr. Buckley, W. T. Stead, and a host of similar men. The veil separating the spirit land is drawn back so that all may at least have a "glimpse." Full bound canvassing book, 75 cents; worth twice that. Experience unnecessary. Books on time. Freight Paid. Big commission. Sells on sight.

FACTS ABOUT THE U. S. ARMV

Washington, April 19. — General Miles says that in case of war "the President would have authority to call into the service of the Government militia to the number of about 12000,000 men. The third section of the resolution directs and empowers the President to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States and to call into the actual service of the United States the militia of the several States to such extent as may be necessary to carry these resolutions into effect.'

THE FACTS ABOUT THE U.S. ARMY.

New York, April 19.—As an interesting comment on Gen. Miles' statement the following comment by the New York Post is interesting:

We pointed out yesterday, in speaking of the preparations for war, that 26,610 was the maximum number of men which could be furnished by the regular army for an invasion of Cuba or for garrisoning its various ports which the newspapers say are to be taken so quickly by the fleet.

As a matter of fact, every officer in the army to-day knows that it would be a great feat to muster 18,000 men for foreign service, and that these could be drawn together only by bringing them from Oregon, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Montana, and other distant states. From the 26,610 men authorized—some of whom are not yet enlisted—.

THERE MUST BE DEDUCTED

the 5,600 artillerymen who man the new forts and coast defences, the Fourteenth Infantry now in Alaska, two regiments needed in California to protect its cities, and certain troops whose presence in Arizona and along the Rio Grande has hitherto been deemed indispensable for the safety of the inhabitants of those places.

Furthermore, there must be taken from the remaining strength the usual percentage of sick and imprisoned men, and the small guard of the oldest soldiers which each regiment will leave at the post or posts it has occupied. It will be seen that the resulting force is small indeed. Once landed in Cuba, subject to the losses incident to warfare and yellow fever, or small regimental organizations would shrink to the size of European companies in the course of a few weeks.

THE OSTRICH ACT.

It is one of the worst features of the pitiful national ignorance and over-confidence about our military strength, that it has been stimulated not only by the sensational papers, which give unlimited space to the doings of every small, undisciplined militia company whose officers seek notoriety, but also by some of our leading generals, upon whose judgment the public has a right to rely.

If it is proper for our general officers to talk at all at this time, it would seem to be their duty to lay the plain facts of the case before the people. They should point out that if we had a million men, we have not the arms to equip them, that only one armory has the necessary tools to make the army rifle, and that the supply of ammunition on hand would not last a large army a month.

UNTRIED OFFICERS.

They could truthfully say that only three of their number have handled a brigade, only one a division, and none of them an army corps; that there is no general staff whatever, no organized train or transport service, and that the present supply departments are notoriously antiquated, topheavy and largely filled with political appointees of no particular merit or experience whatever.

Finally, any one of these warriors could have talked for hours as to what we have not got in the way of the thousand and one essentials necessary for an army of 50,000 men in the field, this being the number which we are told will be sent to Cuba in "forty-eight hours."

THE BEST PATRIOTISM.

Doubtless, it will be said that it is 'unpatriotic'' to point out this national weakness at a time when war stares the country in the face, but we submit that after the experience of the French people in 1870, who at least had a large army, the true patriot is not the one who plunges himself and his countrymen blindly into war, when they have not even weapons to fight with, but he who, in addition to just and humane and unavoidable reasons for taking human life sees that his preparations are such as not to cause the needless and cruel waste of life which must inevitably follow any attempt on our part to set up a "stable government" in Cuba with our present military resources.

THE NAVY WELL NIGH USELESS.

The San Francisco Argonaut says: There is plenty of evidence accumulating that our battleships are unwieldy and delicate in harbor and treacherous at sea. The Maine was years in building, and after finishing had to be built over again at great expense. In her fatal entrance to Havana harbor, she represented an expenditure of $5,000,000. She perished in ten minutes from a cause so insignificant that it has left no trace behind. About a year ago the same vessel with four others, on practice cruise, were driven into Charleston harbor because they could not safely battle with a storm at sea. There were terrible experiences; four men were lost, and many badly injured. The Indiana proved so unmanageable in heavy weather that she was hurried to harbor from a similar cruise. The Texas broke down at sea in December, 1895, and a year later sunk in the mud at Brooklyn navy-yard. The same ship, within the last week, has been hurriedly despatched to the navy-yard for repairs to her ammunition hoists and the machinery that revolves her turrets. The Massachusetts is reported incapable of making proper speed. She goes to the dry-dock just when danger threatens most. In fact, the dry-dock seems to be the continuous abiding-place of our expensive war machines.

NATURAL ALARM.

The theory of naval development is that these ships—Iowa, Massachusetts, Indiana, and Oregon—together with four others on the stocks and three more proposed, constitute the first line of our national defense. There seems to be a lack of confidence that they can hold that line. The three now at Key West, aggregating about 32,000 tons, carry eight 13-inch, four 12-inch, and twenty-four 8-inch guns, besides innumerable smaller rifles and machine-guns. Yet the Navy Department has been practically panic-stricken because Spain is sending across the ocean three torpedo boats of a hundred tons each armed with two torpedo-tubes each, and convoyed by three torpedo-boat destroyers of less than four hundred tons each. Expert naval officers are crying out with alarm that the Spanish flotilla must be halted or destroyed or our magnificent battleships will be at its mercy. Perhaps the next development of the battle-ship must be wheels upon which they, like Thomas Jefferson's gunboats, can be hauled up to safety on the beach. Halt the flotilla, 'if it is a menace to our battle-ships,' what shall we halt it with? Torpedo-boat destroyers? We have none. We are improvising torpedo-boat destroyers from yachts the Government has purchased. The finest of the lot is said to be the Mayflower but as her maximum speed is reported to be fifteen or sixteen knots an hour it is questionable what chance she would have in catching these torpedo-boats, which are rated at twenty-five knots. The safety of the Oregon, which is supposed to be on her way to the Atlantic, is also a source of worry to the Navy Department due to the fact that another little Spanish torpedo-boat has slipped out of the harbor of Montevideo, and no one knows whither she is bound; but it is feared that she "will attack the Oregon." No voice replies that the Oregon can take care of herself.

The Many Sidedness of Advertisements

Although the primary object in reading advertisements is to find out what is offering in one special line—and even from that point of view there is usually a vast amount of information placed before us—it has other advantages. The illustrated descriptive ads. in magazines and big weeklies are a study in themselves; original, artistic and coaxing to a degree they can only be appreciated by those who take the trouble to really read—not merely skim. A thoughtful perusal of Old Country papers will afford a surprising insight into the conditions of life amongst the people represented. At a glance we have a good idea of their industries, their charities, their religious and educational facilities, with a sidelight thrown upon the question of supply and demand in the labor market. The miscellaneous ads. And what, on the other side of the water, they call the "agony" column, present a varied panorama of life's peculiar and painful features.

It would be easy to multiply instances of the value of ad. reading as a medium of extending information on almost any subject—music, the drama, literature, travelling, and so on—but anyone can judge for himself. Take the pages of such as the Montreal Star or the Toronto Telegram, and see how much they contain that is worth knowing. Local conditions of trade may be guessed at from the tempting ads. inserted by rival merchants, the character of amusements preferred, the business inducements offered, the implied straits of those by whom no reasonable offer, the confession of previous overcharge contained in offers to sell at 50c., what had been selling for $1, the pathetic ads. of those seeking any work at practically any price, all have their lessons for the student of human nature. In the opinion of the writer advertisements briefly summarized as "what we want' and 'what we can get" contain more practical lore to the square inch than any other form of secular literature.

SHERMAN WAS KIND.

A SOUTHERN POET'S RECOLLECTIONS OF THE GENERAL.

Frank L. Stanton Recalls Some Incidents of the Closing Days of the War—General Sherman's Goodness to the Elder Stanton, Who Was Very Ill In Savannah.

Frank L. Stanton, the popular Georgia poet, always speaks up for General Sherman when he hears any severe criticism of that famous commander's methods.

The story told by Stanton has never found its way into print, but it deserves a place among the minor incidents and reminiscences of the war period.

"When Savannah fell," said Stanton, "I was a little chap about 8 years old. The confusion and tumult in the streets frightened me, and I was afraid to go very far from the house.

"Young as I was, I understood that something very serious had occurred. Instead of seeing Confederate soldiers parading the streets with a few Federal prisoners I saw thousands of Federals swarming through the town, and they had a great many Confederates under guard.

"The situation had been reversed. That was plain, even to a child.

"My father was very ill, in the last stages of consumption, and my mother was worn out with anxiety and the cares of the household. Our neighbors were panic stricken, and everybody seemed to be expecting some awful calamity.

"Penned up there as we had been for a long time, without supplies and without any money except worthless Confederate currency, the outlook was gloomy enough. How was my sick father to get the things he needed? That was the problem with my mother.

"Somebody told General Sherman about my father and mentioned the fact that he was a kinsman of a very distinguished and powerful officer on the Union side.

"One day when I entered my father's room I found three Federal officers sitting there in pleasant conversation with the invalid and my mother.

"I was scared and started to run, but one of the strangers, a middle aged man with a roughly trimmed brown beard, called me back. He asked my name, and before I knew it had me on his knee, and he said so many nice things to me that I took quite a fancy to him.

"He was General Sherman, and he had called with two of his staff officers to see my father. When the visitors left, the general told my mother at the door that he knew all about the inconveniences of a siege and insisted upon sending from the army stores something that would suit a sick man.

"Under the circumstances such an offer could not be declined. It was a picnic for the children of the family, I can tell you.

"After that, while the general was in the city, something was sent to the house every day. Brandy, wine, loaf sugar, lemons, beef, chickens, coffee, vegetables and I don't know what else came in generous quantities. We had plenty for the family and for our nearest nighbors.

"Nor was that all. The general sent one of the best physicians in the hospital service, and the last days of my father were made far more comfortable than we had hoped for under the adverse conditions of those dark days.

"General Sherman came to the house once more before he left Savannah. I cannot remember what he said, but he was sympathetic and he said something about the pleasure it gave him to aid a relative of his distinguished friend at Washington.

"At that time I was very fond of a showy uniform, and it vexed my childish mind to see my friend the general always dressed so shabbily. His staff officers presented a better appearance, and some of them were really gorgeous in their spectacular rig.

"The other boys and the negroes agreed with me that the commander must be in very hard luck or he would certainly dress better. Still, I was then convinced that he was a wonderfully wise man. With my pockets full of his loaf sugar, which I had surreptitiously abstracted from the pantry, I would have been ungrateful if I had formed any other opinion.

"Sherman left the city and marched onward through the Carolinas, and that ended the war.

"No, I never saw him again. My father died, and I lived in different places, my work keeping me so busy that I had no time to think of the general or anybody else not connected with my immediate business. I wish now that I had seen him before he passed away. As it is, I can only recall him as he appeared to my boyish and wondering eyes, under circumstances which did not give me an opportunity to study him. No matter what may be said of his conduct in war, I cannot help liking him. He was a good friend just when we most needed one."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Doubtful Compliments.

The compliments paid by the poor are often put in an amusing way. One old woman who was very fond of the rector said to Mr. Bernays: "You know, sir, us likes the rector; 'is ears are so clean." Surely an odd reason for parochial affection. Another admirer once declared with regard to the whole staff of clergy, "You are all so plain" (a word of high commendation), "but as for the vicar, 'e's beautiful." The greatest compliment, though at the same time the most curious Mr. Bernays ever heard, was paid by a workingman to a certain bishop, famous for his simple kindliness, "What I likes 'bout the bishop is 'e's not a gentleman."—Westminster Gazette.

Ethnologists, apropos of the statement that the original inhabitants of America were Asiatics, tell of a Chinook Indian woman found in the last century by Father Huk wandering in the far interior of Asia.

Tennyson's Praise of Burns.

Mr. Aubrey de Vere contributes to the biography of Lord Tennyson a report of some conversations with the poet, in which was disclosed his singular freedom from the spirit of rivalry.

In these conversations he never uttered a word that was disparaging or tainted with the spirit of rivalship. The only poet I heard him criticise roughly or unfairly was himself. "Compare," he once said to me, "compare the heavy handling of my workmanship with the exquisite lightness of touch in Keats."

Another time he read aloud a song by one of the chivalrous poets of Charles I's time, perhaps Lovelace's "Althea," which Wordsworth also used to croon in the woods, and said, "There, I would give all my poetry to have made one song like that."

Not less ardent was his enthusiasm for Burns. And here an incident with no small significance recurs to me. "Read the exquisite songs of Burns!" he exclaimed. "In shape each of them has the perfection of the berry, in light the radiance of the dewdrop. You forget for its sake those stupid things, his serious pieces."

The same day I met Wordsworth and named Burns to him. Wordsworth praised him even more vehemently than Tennyson had done as the great genius who had brought poetry back to nature, but ended: "Of course I refer to his serious efforts, such as the 'Cotter's Saturday Night.' Those foolish little amatory songs of his one has to forget."

I told the tale to Henry Taylor that evening, and his answer was, "Burns' exquisite songs and Burns' serious efforts are to me alike tedious and disagreeable reading."

So much for the infallibility of poets in their own art.

Toads In Rock.

Stories of toads inclosed in solid rock are not at all uncommon, but of all the reported cases not one has ever been substantiated. When investigated, it is found that they are made up stories or that there was no toad or no rock or that there was a way for him to get in or get out. People who find toads in solid rock must understand that it is an important matter. If ever there is one single case verified beyond dispute of finding a toad or any other living animal in an absolutely solid rock, the science of geology will be swept from the realms of belief. The doctrine of evolution will crumble to airy nothings. Half of the exact sciences will have to be reorganized on an entirely new basis. Accumulated human knowledge will have to be revised from the bottom, and most of what is so called rejected entirely. So the man that finds the toad had better be pretty sure that it is a toad in a solid rock, and while he is about it he had better have witnesses and photographs and everything possible to be had in proof of his assertion, for it will be doubted. If he proves his case, no man ever known will have such enduring fame. Just find the toad, gentlemen.—Milwaukee Journal.

HASTA MANANA.

When all's in bud and the leaf still unfolding,
When there are ruby points still on the spray,
When that prim school gown your charm is withholding,
Then, Manuela, child, well may you say:
"Hasta Manana! Hasta Manana!
Until tomorrow, amigo," alway.

And Manuela, when crimson and yellow
Peep through green sepals the roses of May,
And through black laces the bloom of your face is Fresh as these roses, child, still you may say,
Through your mantilla, coy Manuela,
"Hasta Manana! amigo," alway.

When all's in bloom and the rose in its passion,
Warmed on your bosom, would never say nay,
Still it is wise—in your own country fashion—
Under your opening fan only to say:
"Hasta Manana! Hasta Manana!
Until tomorrow, amigo," alway.

When all is gray and the roses are scattered,
Hearts may have broken that brooked no delay,
Yet will tomorrow surcease of sorrow
Bring unto eyes and lips that still can say:
"Hasta Manana! Hasta Manana!
Until tomorrow is best for today."

Phrase of Castilian lands! Speech that in languor
Softly procrastinates for aye or nay—
From Sevilla's orange groves to remote Yanguea,
Best heard from rosy lips—let thy words say:
"Hasta Manana! Hasta Manana!
Until tomorrow, amigo," alway.

250,000 CURED.
Thousands of young men are made nervous wrecks, unfit for business, social pleasures or home duties by evil habits in youth, later excesses, or private diseases. W. C. Andrews, of Akron, O., says: "I read this paper and have seen many reports of remarkable cures made by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan. I decided to treat with them. Indiscretion was the cause of my trouble. I was weak and nervous; no ambition; back weak, pimples on the face; thin and haggard; eyes sunken and cheeks hollow; dreams and drains at night; memory poor; varicocele and weak parts; irritable; sinking spells; specks before the eyes; lack of confidence; no energy; and many other complaints. I had tried fourteen doctors, bought four electric belts took scores of bottles of patent medicines—all failed. I tried the New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, and it cured me. I am a Man Again. I have gained twenty-six pounds and am strong mentally, physically and sexually. It is a wonderful treatment."

NEWS IN THE OLD DAYS.

How the Wreck of a Steamship In 1852 Was Reported.

The ocean passenger steamer Franklin ran ashore on the south side of Long Island, opposite Center Moriches, at 8 o'clock on the morning of July 8, 1852. There was a dense fog prevailing at the time, and the officers of the vessel lost their bearings completely and did not know exactly where they were when the steamer stranded.

Surfmen and boats were not as plentiful along the coast line in those days as they are now. Several hours elapsed before boats were secured equal to the task of making their way through the surf to the steamer. Until communication was had with the vessel nothing was known about her. Finally a boat's crew came ashore, and the vessel's name and destination were made known. Her commander made arrangements with Sidney B. Topping to go to New York and report the stranding of the steamer to the board of underwriters, whose office at that time was in Wall street.

Mr. Topping at once crossed the bay to the mainland and harnessed up his horse to a light wagon and started for Patchogue, 14 miles away. It was just noontime when he stepped into the wagon. At Patchogue he changed horses and continued his journey to Babylon. Another change of horses was made at that place, and Mr. Topping started for Jamaica. His horse was pretty well winded when that place was reached, and he changed animals and continued on to Brooklyn, and crossing the ferry drove to the underwriters' office in Wall street. It was just 6 o'clock in the evening when he ascended the office steps. He had made the journey of a little more than 70 miles in exactly six hours.

Having reported the full details of the wreck to the underwriters, Mr. Topping drove around to the office of a leading newspaper and furnished the information for publication. He received a check for $50 from the paper and was told that had he brought a copy of a foreign newspaper from the Franklin they would have given him $100.

Mr. Topping was postmaster in Westhampton during the war and was a prominent figure on the east end of Long Island. He died in West Hampton at the age of 77. —New York Herald.

IS IT PREJUDICE?

Marriage Is Happiest, It Is Claimed, if the Wife Be Senior.

Every one has his own idea as to what will constitute a happy marriage, but there is one point on which nearly all agree—the wife must not be older than the husband.

People who look complacently on the spectacle of a girl of 16 or 18 marrying a man twice her age are ready to declare it a profanation of the marriage altar if the bride is a few years older than the bridegroom. It would be a curious study in sociology to trace this prejudice to its source. A prejudice it undoubtedly is, for some of the happiest marriages known to the world have been those in which the wife was the older of the two.

Every one who knows his Boswell knows the extraordinary devotion of Johnson to the fat, ugly widow whose manners were execrable and who was nearly twice his age, so the spiteful biographers say. He knows, too, how happy Tetty made Johnson and what a grief her death was to the great man.

The marriage of Margaret Fuller and the Count d'Ossoli was a brilliant success in point of happiness, though sadly brief. Margaret was seven years older than her husband and refused him several times on this ground, but his devotion and persistency overcame her reluctance, and the result of the marriage fulfilled her dream of such happiness. It is said that all who saw them together were struck by the loverlike fondness and exquisite deference of D'Ossoli's manner toward the plain New England woman, seven years his senior, whose only attraction apparently was her great intellect. Mrs. Story says of him: "No service was too trivial, no sacrifice too great. When she was ill, he nursed her and watched over her with the tenderness of a woman. Such tender, unselfish love I have rarely seen. It made green her days and gave her an expression of peace and serenity which before was a stranger to her."

Disraeli's wife was his senior, yet the marriage was a notably happy one.—Philadelphia Press.

Rats In Siam.

The writer was astonished on visiting the house of the inhabitants of Siam (says a traveler) to see a huge rat walking quietly around the room and crawling up the master's legs in a cool, familiar manner. Instead of repulsing it or giving an alarm he took it up in his hand and caressed it and then we learned for the first time, to our utter astonishment, that it was a custom in Bangkok to keep pet rats. These are taken very young and carefully reared until they attain a monstrous size from good and plentiful feeding.

THE ISOLATION OF A CHILD.

I once knew a dear little mother,
With a beautiful blue eyed boy.
She constantly bathed and brushed him,
And when he had tired of a toy
She would take it and scald it and scrape it
And lay it away in the sun,
And that is the way she took care of
His playthings, every one.

Pent up in his own little playhouse
The baby grew peaked and pale,
And there were the neighbors' children,
All dirty and happy and hale.
If the baby went out for an airing,
The nurse was to understand
That none of the neighbors' children
Was ever to touch his hand.

But they did, and the injured mother
Brought the dear baby inside
And shut him up in his playhouse,
Where the little one fretted and died.
Then the torn heart turned to the Virgin,
And this was the weight of her prayer:
"O mother, dear, don't let him play with
The other angels up there!"

MR. JORDAN'S MONEY.

The Former United States Treasurer Once Narrowly Escaped Arrest.

Ex-Treasurer Jordan frequently amuses his friends by telling of an exciting experience he had while treasurer of the United States. Mr. Jordan occasionally indulged in joking remarks uttered with a serious countenance. It was the indulgence of this proclivity while connected with the treasury department that came near resulting in his introduction to a pair of handcuffs and incarceration in a dingy cell. Mr. Jordan had occasion to make a trip to New York just at a time when a new $5 bill was issued by the bureau of engraving and printing. It happened that the treasurer on the day of starting on his trip drew a portion of his salary, and the cashier handed him a bunch of the new $5 bills, which had reached the office within an hour. When he arrived in New York, Mr. Jordan proceeded to purchase some needed articles and handed the clerk one of the new bills. The clerk had never seen money that looked like that bill, which was spotless and uncrumpled by handling. He examined the alleged money and the man who gave it to him with equal care. Mr. Jordan watched him with suppressed amusement and remarked in a matter of fact way:

"It's good money. I made it myself."

That was enough for the clerk, who went to the cashier's desk with the bill. There was a hurried conference and a message was sent to police headquarters over the telephone. In a short time a couple of detectives in citizens' attire were standing on either side of the treasurer of the United States. They waited there to watch developments, fumbling their handcuffs in their pockets. In the meantime the cashier studied the new bill further, looked carefully over his counterfeit detector and rummaged through treasury circulars relating to the issuance of money. Finally he came across a description of the new $5 bill which was to be issued by the treasury department. His message had not yet reached the clerk, who was exchanging significant glances with the detectives and watching Mr. Jordan, when the latter, getting tired of waiting for his change and realizing that his new money was probably puzzling the cashier, produced his card. At the same moment the cashier's message that the money was not counterfeit reached the clerk, the detectives wandered off with crestfallen countenances and the treasurer proceeded to the nearest bank, where he exchanged his new bills for money that had passed through a thousand hands and was far from being sanitary.—Washington Star.

An Unpleasant Rencounter.

A shabby man with morose, intellectual features and a well dressed man whose countenance bespoke refinement coupled with a genial disposition rather than with mental power found themselves side by side in a Columbus avenue car.

"Why, Ned!" shouted the prosperous looking man as his kindly eye fell upon his neighbor.

"That's my name," the other grumbled, with anything but welcome in his look.

"How are you, old boy? I have not see you—let me see—since we left college. It's nearly six years, by George!"

The seedy passenger grunted and looked nonplused.

"Well, how is the world treating you, Ned?" the demonstrative man pursued, more intimately than ever.

"Worse than you anyhow," his classmate snarled, jumping to his feet and abruptly disappearing from the car.

The successful man looked sheepish, and as if by way of setting himself right before the other passengers he proceeded quite audibly:

"I pity him, poor fellow. He was one of the brightest in our class, but he never had system in his work or any tact in his dealings with the other students. He always knew any lesson but the one he was called upon to recite, and he would read a lot, but not the books he wanted for his college work, and he always managed to be out of sorts with some classmate or other, if not with the whole class. Still, he is the most honest and good natured fellow you ever came across. I don't know what he is doing, but I have heard he is in pretty hard luck."—New York Commercial.

CORNWALL CANAL AND RIVER REACHES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvements at Upper Entrance of Cornwall Canal and River Reaches" will be received at this Office until 16 o'clock on Saturday the 30th day of April, 1898, for the works connected with the widening, straightening and deepening of the Upper Entrance of the Cornwall Canal and the River Reaches between Cornwall and Coteau Landing.

Plans and Specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 15th day of April, 1898, at the Office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Cornwall. Printed forms of Tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $17.000 must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the condition requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of November, A. D., 189‑, will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Our Canoe Trade

The slaughtering of the Yukon bill by the Senate will not affect the canoe trade in Peterborough one iota, says the Orillia Packet. The factories there are turning out now all the canoes they can manufacture and are shipping them under contract as fast as they are made. They will continue to to do this just as they would have had the bill been made law.

Fire Sale at Mason's

The recent fire at E. F. Mason & Co's. has had the effect of slightly damaging by smoke the immense stock of groceries and provisions carried by this firm, and in order to facilitate renovation and make room for new goods, a clearing sale has been inaugurated and is now in full swing. Everything must go, and at almost your own price. Don't procrastinate! Call to-day!

A Bad Egg

J. H. Cowley, recently arrested in Vancouver for thefts committed in Victoria, has been sentenced in that city to one year's hard labor, in respect of each charge, the sentences to run concurrently. The charges against him in Victoria were: Theft of $90 worth of articles from the Government assay office; $41 worth from Hibben & Co's, and $22.75 worth from the Victoria Stationery Company, and he may yet have to answer for several thefts committed in this city. Cowley is well known in Peterborough, where he at one time resided.

An Exciting Runaway

A 'bus load of river drivers on their way north had an exciting experience yesterday evening at the head of George street. In some unaccountable manner the team they were driving became frightened and, as a result, bolted. So long as the course was straight ahead everything went lovely but making the two right-angle turns necessary to reach Water St. was where the fun came in and until this dangerous feat was an accomplished fact the Times representative, who happened to be in the vicinity, held his breath. The pace was too fast to last, however, and the excited animals were—about two hundred yards further on—brought to a standstill. The occupants of the vehicle appeared to enjoy the affair very much—particularly the driver—Tim. Murphy, one of the oldest rivermen on the Trent waters.

NAPANEE DROPS OUT

And the 57th Will Probably Celebrate the Queen's Birthday at Kingston

Lieut.-Col. Bell informed the Times last night that he had received a communication from the secretary of the committee in charge of the Queen's Birthday celebration at Napanee stating that owing to an agreement entered into with Picton some time ago in which each town mutually agreed, owing to their close proximity, not to interfere with the celebrations of the other, it would be impossible for Napanee to change the date named in its invitation (July 1st) to May 24th.

In the allotment of the celebrations the Queen's Birthday fell to Picton and Dominion Day to Napanee. Napanee, under the circumstances, drops out, and at present Kingston is the only actual competitor in the field.

Ottawa, however, is a dark horse. The question of holding a military tournament in that city on the 24th of May was to have been settled Tuesday night and Col. Bell expects to hear the result to-day. If the tournament goes at Ottawa then the 57th will receive an invitation, as an intimation to this effect was made to Col. Bell while in Ottawa recently, by the commanding officer of the Foot Guards under whose auspices the tournament will be held.

If Ottawa celebrates then there will be a choice, otherwise Kingston will get our crack regiment by default on the part of Ottawa.

In any event the Batt. will go out of town on the 24th of May and as the time is short it is imperative that all ranks turn out to every drill.

AN APRIL WEDDING

A Pleasant Ceremony in a Stewart Street Home Yesterday Evening

The residence of Mr. George Scott, 112 Stewart street, was the scene of a very happy event last evening, it being the marriage of his youngest daughter, Mary J., to Mr. John F. Allen, 19 Crescent street.

The ceremony was of a private character, none but immediate friends and relatives having been invited, owing to the illness of the bride's father. Rev. John McP. Scott, brother of the bride, and pastor of St. John's (Presbyterian) church, Toronto, performed the ceremony.

Mr. William G. Allen, brother of the groom, acted as best man, and Miss Addie Scott, sister of the bride, discharged the important duties of bridesmaid.

They were the recipients of many costly and useful presents, and embark upon the smiling sea of matrimony with the best wishes of their numerous friends.

The honeymoon will be spent in Kingston and other eastern cities.

Dr. Jebb

Eye Specialist, will be at Messrs. Clarke & Gibson's Jewelry Store from noon, April 25th and 26th. Eyesight tested free.

Death of Mrs. Mack

Friends will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. Mary F. Mack, which sad event took place yesterday morning at the residence of her brother, Mr. W. W. Johnston, 94 Gilmour-st. The deceased lady had been seriously ill for some days. The funeral arrangements have not been made yet, pending information as to when relatives can arrive in town.

Here You Old School Boy!

A certain man owed $1.00. He possessed only seventy-five cents to pay it with. He went to a pawn shop and pawned his seventy-five cents for fifty-cents. Meeting a friend he sold him his pawn ticket calling for seventy-five cents for fifty cents. He thus had $1.00 and immediately paid his creditor. Who was the loser, if any, and how much? Don't send answers this office, we have enough trouble of our own.

St. Luke's Easter Concert

There was a dress rehearsal in Ashburnham last night on the arrival of the costumes from Chicago and Toronto. It was a great success, and one of the most interesting and enjoyable entertainments ever announced in Peterborough is now assured. The entertainment will take place in the Opera House on Thursday, 21st instant. Be sure and get your seats early.

Peterborough Won at Basket Ball

The game of basket-ball last night, says the Lindsay Post, between the teams from Peterborough and Lindsay Y.M.C.A's. was a very interesting one. Peterborough's men were much more accustomed to a large field and seemed to play their combination game well. There was a poor attendance, but those who were present enjoyed the game very much, also the music furnished by the band. The score was 16 to 8 in favor of Peterborough, but the game was a much closer one than the score would indicate. The teams lined up as follows: Peterborough, S. Hall, capt., right forward; H. Morgan, left forward; O. Mathias, right centre; W. Wilson, centre; E. Payne, left centre; E. Glover, right back; M. Breckinbridge, left back. Lindsay, J. McLean, right forward; F. Twamley, left forward; R. Willock, right centre; H. Henley, centre; F. Houghton, left centre; E. Armstrong, right back; W. Jordan, capt., left back.

Navigation Notes

—The steamer Eclipse has gone to the lake and will tow up the new glance boom and pier for the Bensfort bridge. The boom is 100 feet long and strongly built.

—The steamer Eclipse has a contract for towing logs for Mr. Yourex, of Keene, next week.

—Ross & Watson's portable shingle mill has been removed from Harwood to Campbellford. It will then be taken to Mather's Corners, near Keene, for the summer.

—Mr. B. Graham has leased Idyl-Wild, and is preparing for the summer trade.

—The Eclipse will bring up a load of hogs from Harwood to-day, and 60 or 70 head of cattle for Mr. H. P. Kennedy.

—Jubilee Point is being renovated and put in order for the season's trade.

—The first excursion of the season will take place on the 15th instant from Harwood and all points on the lake to Hastings.

CORP. JOHNSTON THE AUTHOR

A Peterborough Family with a Proud Military Record

A writer in the Mail and Empire, who signs himself "Briton," asks for the name of the author of the poem, "Hark the bugle call, etc."

The author is Corporal R. E. Johnston, of Peterborough, who is a Canadian by birth, and of Irish parentage. He is a corporal in No. 4 Company, 46th Battalion, Canadian active militia—known as the Cavan Company, with headquarters at Springville. He joined at fourteen years of age, and remained in it ever since—nine years. He has been recommended for staff-sergeant Corporal Johnston has two brothers, one a lieutenant in No. 4 Company, 46th, the other a private in No. 5 Company, 57th Batt., "Peterborough Rangers." His cousin is Capt. T. J. Johnston, of No. 4 Company, and another cousin, W. D. Johnston, is captain of "C" troop, 3rd Dragoons.

Corporal Johnston has an hereditary taste for military life; his grandfather belonged to the Imperial army, and served with his regiment (the 33rd) in Canada, South America, Spain and Belgium. He was a sergeant and present at the battles of Waterloo and Salamanca. He was, of course, a Wellington veteran. From the foregoing sketch, it is evident the patriotic spirit is strong in the Johnston family.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

—Mr. F. Vanorman was in town yesterday.

—Mr. G. J. Sherry, of Norwood, was in town yesterday.

—Miss McBain is visiting with friends in Port Hope.

—Mr. J.R. Stratton, M.P.P., is in Ottawa for a few days on business.

—Mr. J. W. Brightman returned from Belleville yesterday.

—Mrs. A. P. Pousette is visiting London friends.

—Mr. A.P. Poussette, Q.C., is in Detroit on business.

—Miss Kate Christie, of town, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Storey, of Lindsay.

—Mr. A. A. Adams, of the Queen's Hotel, Port Hope, was in town yesterday on business.

—Miss Eva Weir, town, has returned home after a very pleasant two months' vacation in Hamilton.

—Miss Grace Barnett is visiting in town and is the guest of her sister, Mrs. C. B. McAllister.

—Mr. Ed. Fitzgerald, of Fenelon Falls, D.D.G.M. of A.F. & A.M., returned from Havelock yesterday on his way home.

—Mr. O. Schuster, of Belleville, brother of Mr. W. Schuster, of town, has been elected captain of the Road Club in the City of the Bay.

—Mr. E. B. Edwards has returned from Toronto, where he was in attendance at the semi-annual meeting of the Ontario Curling Association.

—Lindsay Post: The many friends of Mr. A.O. Babcock, who went to Peterborough hospital last week, will be pleased to learn that he is progressing favorably. An operation was very successfully performed by Dr. Gillespie.

—Mr R. B. Rogers, Superintending Engineer of the Trent Valley canal, was in Ottawa yesterday on a business trip. He took with him the plans and specifications, etc., for the hydraulic lift lock which is to be constructed on the canal in Ashburnham. This lock is one of the most important engineering works undertaken on this continent.

Death of a Pioneer

Mr. Daniel Roseborough, one of the very first of the pioneer settlers of Smith township, died at the residence of his nephew in Smith on Tuesday. Mr Roseborough was born in the county of Antrim, Ireland, 81 years ago. He came to Canada in 1820 at the age of three years with his father's family, the father having come to Canada the year before. They lived here four or five years and moved back to Smith, settling on the 5th concession. The very first settler of Peterborough county broke the forest of Smith township in 1818. At the time the Roseborough family took up land there was no settlement of any account, the Robinson emigration not yet having come to Canada. Death was due to old age.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Interesting Items of Local and District Happenings in Brief

—Belleville is purchasing a steam roller.

—Mr H. P. Kennedy shipped 400 stoeckrs to the American market yesterday.

—Mr. J. O'Donnell, of Bobcaygeon, has taken the contract of driving all the logs out of Squaw River.

—Mayor Tayler, of Lindsay, has been appointed to look after the caterpillar pest, and our old friend isn't very good at climbing trees, either.

—The Oddfellows of Port Hope are making extensive preparations for an at home in commemoration of the 79th anniversary of their order in America.

—The Fishery Inspector is on the lookout for parties suspected of taking maskinonge out of season. It is believed that considerable illegal fishing is being done around town.

—Mr. Wm. Sherman, district agent for McCaffrey & Farwell, has been shipping telegraph poles from north country points at the rate three carloads per day for several weeks past.

—All dealers in wheels are invited to exhibit their models at the Y.M.C.A. exhibition to-night and Friday evening. If any dealer has been overlooked in the arrangements he is requested to send in his goods.

—Messrs. Kennedy, Davis & Son have a gang of men at work driving their logs out of Nogey's Creek and good progress is being made. The first lot will reach their mill on Pigeon Lake this week.

—A petition was presented at the last meeting of the Lindsay Council praying that a vote of the people be taken on the advisability of reducing the number of councillors to six and the mayor—a commendable step.

—The Y.M.C.A. Camera Club, a new organization starts off with the following officers: Hon. President, Mr. Geo Stephens; President, Mr. Fred. Hall; Sec.-Treasurer, Mr. W.J. Stubbs. Executive Committee, Messrs. Dixon, Parker, Buxton and the officers.

—The Cricket Club Minstrels are industriously rehearsing. The chorus is now in first class shape. Yesterday afternoon the original up-to-date cake walk practice was held over the Palace restaurant. This will be one of the striking features of the production.

—The death of Mr. Wm. Jackson occurred very unexpectedly Tuesday at his residence, lot 19, con. 2, Emily. The deceased, who was fifty-two years of age, and was well and favorably known, was in town on Saturday last, and was not taken seriously ill until Monday.

—Noah was the first man to advertise. He advertised the flood and it came through all right. The fellows who laughed at the advertising got drowned, and it served them right. Ever since Noah's time the advertiser has been prospering, while the other fellow is being swallowed up in a flood of disaster.

—A few days ago a pig belonging to Mr. Wm. Griffith, of Belmont, gave birth to a litter of eight young pigs, one of which had six perfectly formed legs and feet. The pig, which is a very peculiar freak of nature, seems to move around on its six legs with as much ease as his brother pigs do on four.

—While the family of Mr. Samuel Knox, who lives about four miles from Fenelon Falls, were at breakfast on Tuesday morning, Mrs. Knox suddenly fell forward and expired instantly. Heart disease is supposed to have been the cause. Deceased was a daughter of Mr. John Junkin, one of the oldest settlers of Verulam, and sister of James and Robert Junkin, the well-known insurance men.

Spring humors, boils, pimples, eruptions, sores, may be completely cured by purifying the blood with Hood-s Sarsaparilla.

A STATE OF WAR NOW EXISTS

Spain Scorns to Answer United States Ultimatum

SENDS HER FLEET ACROSS ATLANTIC

No Possibility of Preventing the Battleships Meeting—The United States Executive Will Take Action at Once to Stop Spaniards from Reaching Havana—Conflict Momentarily Expected.

Washington, April 21.—Diplomatic relations between the United States and Spain are at an end. It is expected that from now on events will move with amazing rapidity up to the climax of actual war. Judge Day, Assistant Secretary of State, early this morning received a cable from Minister Woodford at Madrid, stating that he had been handed his passports and had been notified that official relations between the United States and Spain were ended. His cablegram said that he had been given the passports before he had had an opportunity to present the ultimatum transmitted to him for submission to the Spanish Government, the delivery of the ultimatum to Minister Polo having been accepted by the Spanish Government as a formal announcement on our part.

THE NEWS IS IMPORTANT.

Judge Day at once hurried to the White House, where he found President McKinley about to enter a carriage to take Mrs. McKinley to the railroad station, where he intended to see her off on a short trip to New York. The news that diplomatic relations between the United States and Spain were formally at an end was so important that the President bade a hasty good bye to his wife on the White House portico and repaired immediately to the upstairs part of the house, where he and Judge Day held a conference, the result of which was the despatch of Secretary Porter to the Capitol to communicate the news to the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and also leading members of the House. It is presumed that this was done in order to facilitate any action deemed necessary by Congress.

A HASTY SUMMONS.

By a hasty summons Senators Davis Lodge and Allison and others were brought to the White House, where they joined Assistant Secretary Day and the Preisdent shortly after 10 o'clock in a conference, the purpose of which is to map out the immediate policy of the United States.

STATE OF WAR EXISTS.

Washington, April 21.—The Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate and the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, in response to President McKinley's urgent request, will present a joint resolution at once, declaring that a state of war exists Between Spain and the United States. It will be passed immediately.

The Key West fleet will be ordered to beseige Havana, and soldiers will be taken over in transports for field operations in Cuba.

The fleets are likely to be in motion before night.

Intense excitement prevails here.

The streets and hotel corridors are filled with people discussing the crisis. All are joyful that Spain has taken the initiative.

It is the general belief that war will be on within twenty-four hours.

TO DECLARE WAR AT ONCE.

Washington, April 21.—As the Spanish Government did not wait until Minister Woodford presented the ultimatum of this Government, the Administration may decide not to wait until the time limit expires on Friday midnight, but may ask Congress to immediately declare war. As soon as the President received notice that Mr. Woodford had received his passports he started Secretary Porter, post-haste, to notify the Committee on Foreign Relations and ask for an immediate declaration of war. The members of Congress were also hastily notified of Spain's action, and were told to be at the Capitol promptly at noon. The excitement is intense.

SQUADRON TO BE ORDERED OUT.

Washington, April 21. — Secretary Long went to the White House at 11.45 a.m. to recommend to President McKinley that the North Atlantic squadron now at Key West be sent at once to Cuban waters. The Secretary was urged to make this recommendation by members of the naval board.

Just before the board adjourned this morning a report was received that the Spanish fleet had sailed from the Cape Verde Islands.

UNITED STATES THE AGGRESSOR.

Madrid, April 21.—3.20 p.m.—A semi-official note just issued says the Spanish Government considers the ultimatum of the United States a declaration of war.

The semi-official note adds that the Spanish fleet is already on its way to meet the fleet of the United States.

New York, April 21.—Assistant Secretary Roosevelt confirms the report that the Spanish fleet has sailed from Verde Islands.

The Journal also says that the President wants Congress to declare war.

The Commercial Advertiser has a bulletin that Spain has sent her answer through Woodford, and is supposed to be final. The President's private secretary been with it to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

SHIPMENTS OF COAL.

Washington, April 21.—In the Senate Mr. Quay introduced a joint resolution directing the President to take such action as will prevent shipments of coal from the United States. The resolution, Quay says, was introduced at the request of the Adminisitration. The resolution will be called up late in the day.

TO DECLARE WAR.

New York, April 21.—The Journal bulletin says that both Houses of Congress will act on the President's request to declare war, and says that Secretary Long favors starting the flying squadron at once. Senator Cullom says no declaration of was is necessary.

NO ANSWER EXPECTED.

Washington, April 21.—Now that Woodford has been given his passports no answer to the ultimatum of the President is expected.

TO STOP THE SPANIARDS.

Washington, April 21.—At the Cabinet meeting this afternoon the movement of the Spanish fleet will be discussed and action taken to stop the vessels which are reported to have left the Cape Verde Islands for Havana.

"PURITAN" IS DISABLED.

Key West, Fla., April 21.—The condition of the monitor Puritan is so helpless that she may have to be towed into harbor before hostilities begin. The trouble lies in her boilers. The crown sheets are only three-eighths of of an inch thick, instead of five-eighths, as they should have been.

Street Watering

It may seem too much to ask that the street sprinkling should be done with any regard for the comfort and convenience of the people, but since in other towns it is supposed to serve that purpose it may some day come to be so regarded in Peterborough. When the time comes the Jehu of the sprinkling cart will be prompted by his own sense or otherwise to leave the crossing dry so that pedestrians will not be soiled and splattered as if travelling a country side line. It will then occur to him also that if he went over the ground more frequently with a light sprinkle it would be better than a deluge twice a day that converts the street into mud hole.

Jas. Thornton Dies Suddenly

Mr. James Thornton, a former resident of Omemee but who has lately resided on a farm in that vicinity, died on Tuesday after a brief illness. The deceased, who was 55 years of age and was universally respected by all who knew him, was about his duties on the farm on Monday. On Tuesday he complained of feeling unwell. Peritonities developed and he died on Wednesday morning, leaving a wife and one child sorrow-stricken by their sudden and sad bereavement. The deceased was married to Miss Mason, a sister of Messrs. Frank and David Mason, of town. The funeral will take place from the family residence to-day, the remains being brought to Peterborough for interment.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia., Lyman Sons, & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Positively refuse all substitutes.

To be Continued To-day

The auction sale at Mrs. Orde's, Ashburnham, not having been completed yesterday, will be continued to-day—commencing at 1 o'clock.

A Progressive Company

The Rathbun Company is to be classed amongst our most progressive concerns. The following, taken from the Ottawa Journal speaks for itself: The charcoal iron furnace at Deseronto is to commence operations on May 1st, according to a report received at the Parliament buildings to-day. The manufacture of iron and steel by charcoal makes it much harder and tougher, and it is expected that a big trade will be developed with Great Britain.

Change in Management

Mr. Wm. E. Schuster, who has been local manager here for the the Rathbun Co., for a year, has been promoted to the management of the Belleville agency and Mr. Samuel H. J. Reid, of the Kingston agency, takes the managership here.

Bicycle Baskets

Bicyclists, have your seen the new lunch basket and parcel carrier combined? They are just the thing for picnic parties and those taking long journeys. They have not been on sale here, but hundreds are being used in the cities. The Times Bookstore are sole agents for them.

Still They Come

The schools are soon to be supplied with another text book. The Ontario Department of Education has now in preparation a new text book which will be placed in all the schools and for pupils in the lower forms. It will deal with agriculture, forestry and such topics.

A New Inspector

Mr. Art. Smith, Ashburnham, we understand, has been appointed fishery inspector for the lower waters—Otonabee river and Rice Lake. Law breakers will do well to keep their weather eye open—a new broom sweeps clean.

Navigation Notes

The Str. North Star is laid up at the Ashburnham wharf undergoing repairs.

Mr. Tully, of the Str. Tramp, Stony Lake, was in town yesterday.

THE C. W. A. PROVINCIAL MEET

The Big Fight put Up by Peterborough Recalled

Monday's issue of the Canadian Wheelman contains numerous references to the big fight put up by Peterborough for the C.W.A. provincial meet on Good Friday, and as some cover new ground we reproduce a few of the most important:

"As to the Ontario Meet at Peterborough, little doubt need be entertained so long as the clerk of the weather is kind. We still count back to Waterloo for the Meet at which we had the best attendance. Like Waterloo, Peterborough is within easy striking distance of Toronto, and it has in its neighborhood many good cycling towns. An immense concourse of wheelmen and women should be attracted there next Dominion Day. We will be sadly out in our reckoning if Peterborough does not lead off with with a very successful and enjoyable Provincial Meet.

The Meet fight was really a tame affair when compared with those that preceded it last year and the year before. There was no doubt that the climax was reached in '97. Ottawa 'tis true made considerable of a spread but Peterborough—well a person would hardly know they were in town—but they got the votes. The Capital men had a room at the Rossin House, where they displayed some beautiful photographs of the scenic grandeur of the Washington of the north and every delegate was loaded up with badges, small souvenir photographs, meet literature and cigars. A coterie of choice spirits—human—was in charge and every caller was given the glad hand and pleasant smile. There is no doubt that Ottawa made a third of their votes at least while in Toronto. Peterborough's methods were so different to anything seen for some time as to excite comment. It was hard to locate a Peterborough man until it was all over. One of their rooters expressed the sentiments of the crowd when he said: "We've spent our good money in former years, had brass bands, parades and sport galore but this time it is different. We are confident we are going to win and will save the money to entertain the boys on July 1st."

How to Cure All Skin Diseases

Simply apply "Swayne's Ointment." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for Swayne's Ointment. Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Avoid substitutes.

For the S[illegible]

Skating sets are to be all the vogue. A stylish skating set suitable for wear at the rink consists of a hat, boa and muff. The hat is made of deep violet velvet, and fits closely to the head something like a peasant girl's cap. It is edged with a narrow band of marten. In the direct front two white birds are caught. They look as if they had just alighted upon the fair wearer's hair. The boa is made of fluffy loops of black chiffon, edged with pipings of violet satin, and nestling among the soft folds are the heads of forty little animals. Sometimes these small animals have wonderfully brilliant eyes, made of rhinestones, perhaps, or they have gleaming yellow eyes of topaz. The muff is a most elaborate affair. It is made of [illegible] velvet, finished at each side with a [illegible] of violet satin in a [illegible] than the muff. For the trimming [illegible] tails are [illegible] the sides of two or three tails dangling below the muff.

WESTERN BANK OF CANADA

Elsewhere will be found a report of the sixteenth annual meeting of the Shareholders of the Western Bank of Canada, which took place at the head office of that institution, Oshawa, on Wednesday, April 13th. As usual, the statement presented shows this well-managed and prosperous institution keeps right right on piling up its reserve fund and increasing its assets.

During the year deposits were increased $100,000, an evidence that the Bank is regarded as one of the most solid institutions in the land. The net earnings have slightly increased, and are about 10 1-2 per cent. of the capital. When cahs assets are so largely increased, profits, owing to the difficulty of employing the money in a satisfactory manner, are necessarily diminished. However, there is little doubt that with increasing volume of business in almost every branch of trade in the near future there will be ample opportunity of investing in a legitimate manner the surplus funds of the Bank.

A pleasing feature of the meeting was the passage of a hearty vote of thanks to the cashier, Mr. T. H. McMilian, and the other officers of the Bank, for the highly satisfactory way they performed their respective duties.

WILL SPAIN BACK DOWN?

The opinion is expressed in some quarters of the United States that Spain will concede everything at the last moment rather than fight. Reference is made to the crisis in 1873, when the two nations were as near to actual hostilities as they are to-day. There is a vast difference, however, in the threatened intervention in Cuba, and the affair of the Virginius. This vessel, flying the United States flag, was seized on October 31st, 1873, by the Spanish steamer Tornado, off Jamaica, on the ground that she intended to land men and arms for the insurgents in Cuba (a rebellion was in progress in the island then as now). Four of the most prominent Cubans found on the vessel were shot on November 4, and a few days later, Capt. Fry, with a large number of others, were also executed. The affair created great excitement in the United States. Reparation was deamanded of Spain, an apology for the seizure, and a salute to the American flag. For a long time Spain refused to accede to these demands, and the two countries were on the verge of war. Finally Gen. Sickles asked for his passports, and war was about to be declared by the United States. Then Spain yielded and conceded substantially all demands.

It will be seen that there can be no comparison at all between the situation then and now. Perhaps it is thought that Spain would not fight so great a nation as the United States under any circumstances. There could be no greater mistake. The very throne of Spain is in jepardy. If the Queen-Regent will not obey the voice of the people, Don Carlos will.

Dandruff is Dangerous

When dandruff appears it is usually regarded as an annoyance. It should be regarded as a disease. Its presence indicates an unhealthy condition of the scalp, which, if neglected, leads to baldness. Dandruff should be cured at once. The most effective means for the cure is found in AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It promotes the growth of the hair, restores it when gray or faded to its original color, and keeps the scalp clean and healthy.

"For more than eight years I was greatly troubled with dandruff, and though a young man, my hair was fast turning gray and falling out. Baldness seemed inevitable until I began to use

Ayer's Hair Vigor

The dandruff has been entirely removed and my hair is now soft, smooth and glossy and fast regaining its original color."
—L. T. VALLE, Allenton, Mo.

The Ottawa Citizen says that a mysterious stranger appeared in that city on Wednesday and registered at the Russell as "James Craig, U. S. A." Our contemporary says that all sorts of stories were afloat as to the mission of the gentleman. It was almost universally conceded that he probably was in the Capital on matters connected with the Spanish-American crisis and for the reason that "U.S. A." stands for "United States of America." We might suggest that the individual in question might have been one of the colonels of the U.S.A. (United States Army) in Canada for the benefit of his [illegible].

Eugene Sue's Pranks.

The father of Eugene Sue was a physician with exalted patients all over Europe, who sent him the choicest wines. The emperor of Austria, for instance, had contributed tokay, the king of Prussia rare hock, Queen Christina of Spain priceless alicante, Prince Metternich genuine cachet d'or, and so on. The whole was kept in a large iron cupboard in the study of the learned physician, known as the Elzevir library. Eugene was then a college freshman, and, having procured a skeleton key to the closet, with his friends, Adolphe, Adam, Veron and others, proceeded every night to investigate the contents of the bottles. Not wishing to have their explorations prematurely stopped, they took the precaution to fill up the partially exhausted flasks with water and then to reseal them. When, for a long time afterward, the doctor brought forth samples of his precious stock for the delectation of guests worthy of it, and the company tasted it with a due sense of awe, it was privately felt that the celebrity of these great brands was all moonshine, that ordinary table d'hote bordeaux was preferable to them. But nobody dared to say so, and it was only after the death of his dreaded parent that the novelist confessed the sacrilege.

..... You Don't Find in Department Store Wheels .....

It's the 4-point adjustable, oil-retaining, dust-repelling, live-for-ever Bicycle Bearing

AND IS FOUND ONLY IN

THE E. & D. BICYCLE

Like all E. & D. good features, it's peculiar; the cones have flattened surfaces for the balls to travel on instead of concave, as is the case with all other kinds; the balls travel in double V grooves, and cannot wedge, bind nor break; they require oiling but once a season; every ball bears an equal share of the load; they do not twist, they do not wear.

A WOMAN THE STAKE.

SHE WAS PLAYED AGAINST $50,000 IN A GAME OF ECARTE.

Though the Kentuckian Won at the Game, He Was Beaten In Another Way—Strange Story of an Old, Gruesome Looking House In San Francisco.

In 1867 there stood an old fashioned shanty east of the locality now occupied by the Presentation convent, in front of the graveyard, and the people in the neighborhood used to tell strange stories about this grewsome looking dwelling. For several years its occupancy was apparently confined to a decrepit old man, who used to crawl in and out about once a day, his arms filled with packages from the market.

He was known in the neighborhood as the old dago, though in reality he was a native of Alsace. For several years he lived a hermit's life, and the neighbors got so accustomed to his comings and goings that even the small boys forgot to molest him. But one morning all the gossips found food for conversation by the appearance of a remarkably lovely young woman who went out to and returned from the butcher's stall and the grocer's. She spoke English imperfectly and with a very pronounced French accent. This little cabin was destined to be the scene of a very dramatic incident in the history of California gambling.

It was natural that a girl as pretty as Irene should not be long without admirers, so it came to pass that the windows of the old house were lighted up every evening, and the Frenchman developed the natural hospitality of his race and gave little dinners and suppers to his exiled countrymen. But among those, as was only natural, there were some who existed not by honest industry, but by the gaming table. Among them was a young man of striking appearance who had served in France as sous officier in a hussar regiment, had gone the pace, ruined himself, and finally drifted out to San Francisco, where he became the hanger on of the gambling table.

Louis Le Marronais was a strikingly handsome specimen of the Parisian of his class. It did not take him very long to gain the confidence of the old Frenchman, and to him he confided the story of his life. It was not a very eventful one. He was a member of an old French family and could use if he pleased a title which dated back to Charles the Bold. He had been ruined by the extravagance of his younger brother and was then living on the income of a little property in Brittany, which he had saved from the wreck. Irene was his only child, and he idolized her. For her sake alone he wanted to be rich. He wanted to take her back to France and reinstate her in the position to which her rank entitled her.

The ex-hussar won the old man into the belief that his only chance of getting rich was through gambling. So night after night old Lescant was found at the El Dorado or some other gaming hell losing his money under the direction of the arch mentor. One night Irene followed him there to bring him back, and her first visit was a fateful one. Tom Monroe, a Kentuckian, one of the wildest and most reckless characters of that period, saw her, admired her and swore that she should become his property.

It is not necessary to recite the incidents that led up to the scene, which were related to me by an eyewitness. It is sufficient to say that Le Marronais had convinced the old Frenchman that Monroe would stake $50,000 against the hand of Irene. If he won, she was to become his wife, but if he lost the money was to become the Frenchman's property and Irene was free to bestow her affections wherever she pleased. Irene was informed of this proposition, and she looked resigned and rather amused at the transaction.

The eventful night arrived. Monroe, the old man, Louis, Irene and a friend and countryman of the host were the only inmates of the little room. The game was ecarte, and the cards, which Louis had marked, lay upon the table. The old man got the deal. Monroe's certified check for $50,000 was placed in the custody of the hussar. The old man marked the king in the first deal, and when the pack changed hands he had the best of the game. The play went on, and in the last hand Monroe scored every point.

"Irene is mine!" shouted the Kentuckian, reaching for his check.

At this moment the lights were dashed out, and Monroe fell to the floor from the stroke of some heavy instrument. The only disinterested spectator of the scene fled from the room. The next morning there was no sign of life in the old house, and in the evening when the milkman knocked he heard a groaning from the inside. He forced his way into the house and discovered the wretched Kentuckian bound hand and foot. Monroe, avowing murder, rushed the next morning to the banking house. The check had been cashed by an individual who answered the description of the hussar. The other actors in this startling scene were never heard of. Nothing in the house was disturbed, not even the girl's wearing apparel, and the incident became a portion of this strange history of old time gambling in San Francisco.—San Francisco News Letter.

One More Idiot.

Tobacconist—If you'll keep quiet about it, I'll tell you how I manage to make money out of cigars. When a man comes in and asks me for a good cigar, I invariably recommend that brand that costs me the least. It is a great scheme.

Customer—That's so. What idiots they must all be! By the way, I want you to recommend a good cigar to me.

Tobacconist—Well, confidentially I advise you to take one of them. (Customer goes out.) Only one more [illegible] that's all.—Boston Transcript.

THE REFORMED FAKIR.

He Had a Great Graft the Winter He Spent In Albany.

"I've earned an honest living in many ways," said the reformed fakir, when he was raking over the dead leaves of his past the other night, "but I never struck such a graft as I was up against the year I wintered in Albany. A friend got me a little job there that paid me a couple of dollars a day. Besides that, I was entitled to a pass down to New York and back every week. I might have starved if I had been so exclusive as to try to live on this alone. So I set my wits to ferreting.

"I hadn't been there long before all the pretty girls in town were after me. No, as I don't pose as a handsome man I did not take it to heart. They didn't want me, but they wanted the autographs of the statesmen. I'd sing 'em a song like this:

"'Why, cert, girls, I'd be delighted to oblige you. Nothing would give me greater pleasure. But you know I can't go on the floor. My friend the doorkeeper, however, can get just what you want, but it will be some trouble to him, and he may charge 10 or 15 cents, and'—

"'Oh, that's all right,' the girls would say, and nearly every one would put down a quarter a sig. And every quarter went into my pocket, for that guff about not being allowed to go on the floor was all a blind. So's they wouldn't see me, I'd just tackle the statesmen somewhere else.

"Then I got on to the money to be made in strikes. Every time a bill was introduced that would hurt some one or some interest in New York, I learned all I could about the matter there and wrote to a friend in New York who looked up the other end. Then I would write to the parties something like this:

"'A bill detrimental to your interests has been introduced here. Better come up and see about it.'

"When they reached Albany, I never failed to get my reward for putting them on.

"There was another way of coining an honest plunk—I worked all the boys I could for passes. Those who didn't go home over Sunday were willing to give up, and those who could get more than one I jollied into turning the extras over to me. Then I sold them to fellows who couldn't get even one pass, or who wanted two or three.

"By these grafts I managed to live well, and save every cent of my salary."—New York Press.

A THOROUGH ARTIST.

Sir Edward J. Poynter's Great Care For Minute Details.

It may almost be said that it is impossible to appreciate the finished work of this artist without some knowledge of the contents of those portfolios which contain his drawings. It at all events increases our respect for the man and his art to know how much thought and labor and thorough craftsmanship have gone to the making of his more important compositions. For the figure of St. George, for instance, which we see clothed in a complete suit of Maximilian armor, gleaming through the dusk of the lobby of "the house," he thought it necessary to draw the figure nude, and not only nude, but scorche, and it was not unusual for him about this time to make a study even of the skeleton in the attitude required for a figure. Such a drawing I have before me now—a drawing for one of the men, who is stooping to pick up a stone to hurl at St. Stephen, on one side the figure nude, but fully fleshed; on the other, trunk and legs and arms "in the bones."

Contrasted with such studies there are others of great completeness and finish, but still preparations—one, for example, of the same St. George, but fully armed, with his attendant figures of Purity and Fortitude fully draped and underneath the shield of the United Kingdom, with naked children on either side holding a festoon. The work is bordered with a band of roses conventionally treated and executed in water colors with the utmost care, yet so broadly that when photographed it looks like a fresco. This little drawing, almost as beautiful in color as in design, was experimental only. The shield and the children were replaced by a more formal design for the mosaic.—"Sir Edward J. Ponyter, P. R. A.," by Cosmo Monkhouse, in Scribner's.

LOVE'S REINCARNATION.

Dear heart, did we meet long ago
  And walk and talk together then?
I think that it must have been so.
  If so, I wonder where or when.
Oft when you blush or smile for me,
  When your eyes droop before my gaze,
For one swift breath I seem to see
  Some dim, sweet scene from other days.

A gleam of gold on a stray tress
  Of hair on which the sun has shone,
A loving touch, a soft caress
  Or in your voice some minor tone
Brings back to me like the sweet chime
  Of silver bells on summer air
The memory of a bygone time
  Of life and loving otherwhere.

I know that I have loved you, dear,
  E'er since I first began to be.
My heart had missed you many a year
  When, at the last, you came to me,
And then I knew that I had met
  The one I sought, and by your side
I stay, with nothing to regret,
  Because my soul is satisfied.
—Womankind.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE.

An Incident In Brescia During the Italian Revolution of 1848.

The Count de Hubner tells in his "Memoirs" a thrilling story of an adventure in the Italian city of Brescia during the days of the revolution of 1848. When the trouble began in the streets, he contrived to get into a house, taking with him two or three other persons, including the wife of a minor official who had intrusted the lady for awhile to the count's care, but who was to have certain news of her as soon as possible.

The firing grew heavier, and the rebels soon had possession of almost every house in the street.

On the 19th of March, Count de Hubner decided that he must do something toward bettering his position in case of an assault, and he forced his only remaining servant to make a dash across the street to the palace where the Austrian general, Rath, was quartered, two blocks away and on the other side. The man was merely to let the general know that De Hubner himself was coming, and to ask that the gates be held ready for him.

"Myself, prudence and my honor had a long and heated argument," says Count de Hubner. "Finally I pulled myself together. I had to let Prince Metternich know about myself, to make a last report, and to keep my word about poor Mme. M. I undid the door, drew a long breath, and plunged down the street.

"The bullets flew all around me, spattering leaden showers from the stone pavement. As I arrived at the gates of the palace, they swung [illegible]d, and in a second I was inside, u[illegible]hed. But only half my journey was done; I had still to go back again.

"A letter—my last report—was soon completed for Metternich and my message to the husband of Mme. M. was given. I had to return.

"Again the gates were opened and I bounded forth. A veritable fusillade followed. From every window and house top came the spurts of white smoke, and I tried to dodge 40 bullets at once. In a minute I had reached my own door, and as I did so I turned to look back.

"Another man left the palace gates at full speed, but before he had half crossed the street a puff of smoke shot out of a window, and he fell flat and was instantly lying like a log across the gutter. The fire stopped at once—what use would even an Italian see in shooting a dead man?

"But on the second that all became quiet to my great astonishment I saw this 'dead man' rise to his legs like a cat and dash across the street into the half open door waiting for him. The sharpshooters were taken by surprise and he escaped."

The Good Old Times.

"An increase of salary!" exclaimed the pompous manager of a small omnibus company to a clerk who had just made that request. "I am afraid, sir, that you are too extravagant."

He toyed with his heavy watch chain and looked severely at the young man, who returned his stare boldly. It was the set phrase on such occasions, and the applicant had heard it all before. He meant to have that rise or—go somewhere else.

"Excuse me, sir," he replied respectfully, "I haven't any chance to be extravagant on what I earn."

"Young man," continued the pompous gentleman, "I have risen from the monkey board. How? By being careful. When I was young, I made money by saving bus fares."

"Ah, that was in the old days," said the young man, with a knowing wink. "But with the bell punches and the present system of inspection you would find you couldn't save sixpence without being collared, however careful you were."

The manager nearly fainted, and the young man had to seek other employment. —Pearson's Weekly.

Egyptian Tombs.

These tombs, considered the oldest monuments of Egypt, are supposed to have been erected before or during the time of Joseph, and are profusely ornamented with a variety of colored figures, demonstrating ocularly that these ancient people were as gay and nimble as they were depicted, solemn and immovable in their usual sculpture. On some of the walls were hunting scenes, women playing the sackbut and dulcimer, or applying with cheerfulness the bastinado to those of either sex who stood in need of reformatory measures; glass blowers, brickmakers, barbers, plying their vocation and even a chiropodist attending to business. Over each picture was written what the artist intended to represent—an idea that might be employed to advantage by some of our fin de siecle painters.—Outing.

A Tiny Well Digger.

The mole is one of the thirstiest of animals. It never burrows at any great distance from water, and at times of drought when the supply of the needful element is diminished or cut off the "little gentleman in the velvet coat" counteracts the scarcity by digging wells until it comes to a depth at which water may be obtained.

Professional Interest.

Miss Antique (coyly)—Dear me! I wonder who that elderly gentleman is that has been following me round all the evening?

Miss Flatly—That is Professor Sniggings, the celebrated curiosity hunter.—London Tit-Bits.

Immigrants who come to this country in the spring have a great fancy for bringing with them birds from their native land. They appear to think that there are no birds worth the name over here. Irish immigrants bring linnets and thrushes and Germans bring their favorite bullfinch.

The Isle of Man is to spend £1,000 a year in advertising itself.

SMOKED CANARY BIRDS.

Do Clouds From a Pipe Develop a Rich Color In Their Plumage?

A little old shoemaker who has a busy, old style cobbling shop on the east side is a bird fancier, and he has peculiar ideas about canaries. One night he was sitting on his leather covered bench, smoking an extremely odorous quality of tobacco in a black pipe. A customer was waiting for him to finish straightening up a worn heel, and he made several remarks concerning the birds which hung about the cobbler's shop. They were fancy birds, and he could not help noticing it. Finally he asked the shoemaker how he got such richly colored birds.

"It's part in the breeding and part in the atmosphere," said the cobbler. "You raise birds in a shop where two or three men are constantly smoking, and in time you will get the darkest orange color if you use a little judgment in mating and they don't run to green."

"I should think that tobacco smoke would be unwholesome for the birds," said the visitor.

"On the contrary, it makes them hardy and seems to be good for them every way. Women who have canaries would do well to put them where they can get a little tobacco smoke once in awhile, although I don't think cigarette smoke would do them much good. What they need is strong tobacco smoke from an old pipe like this or the smoke from a black cigar. I've raised my best birds when I had two jours working in this little shop with me and all of us smoking pretty nearly all the time."

Then the old man sighed and said: "That was before they half soled and heeled shoes while you wait—before machines were used for cobbling. No two or three jours and an apprentice for me now. I sit here alone, with my birds, pegging away and keeping them well smoked."—New York Sun.

Road and River.

The brave Pierre Stuppa, the Swiss general, having been deputed by the 13 cantons to solicit the arrears of pay which had been owing for a long time to the Swiss officers in the French service, M. de Louvois, the war minister, who was present, said to the king, Louis XIV:

"Sire, those Swiss are very importunate. If your majesty had all the money that your royal predecessors have given to that people, it would form a road from Paris to Basel."

"That may be," observed Stuppa with an air of firmness, "but at the same time if your majesty had all the blood that the Swiss have shed in the service of France it would form a river from Paris to Basel."

The king was so struck with the observation that he ordered M. de Louvois to pay the whole of the money without delay.—Nuggets.

Thousands of young men are made nervous wrecks, unfit for business, social pleasures or home duties by evil habits in youth, later excesses, or private diseases. W. C. Andrews, of Akron, O., says: "I read this paper and have seen many reports of remarkable cures made by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan. I decided to treat with them. Indiscretion was the cause of my trouble. I was weak and nervous; no ambition; back weak; pimples on the face; thin and haggard; eyes sunken and cheeks hollow; dreams and drains at night; memory poor; varicocele and weak parts; irritable; sinking spells; specks before the eyes; lack of confidence; no energy; and many other complaints. I had tried fourteen doctors, bought four electric belts took scores of bottles of patent medicines—all failed. I tried the New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, and it cured me. I am a Man Again. I have gained twenty-six pounds and am strong mentally, physically and sexually. It is a wonderful treatment."

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 21, 1898

Sixteenth Ananul Meeting

Of the Shareholders of the Western Bank of Canada, Oshawa, Ont., Held at the Head Office of the Bank, on Wednesday, the 13th day of April, 1898

The following shareholders were present: John Cowan, Esq., W. F. Allen, Esq., T. H. McMillan, Esq., Thomas Patterson, Esq., C. W. Scott, Esq., John McLaughlin, Esq., W. F. Cowan, Esq., Thomas Conant, Esq., Dr. McIntosh and Robert Dillon, Esq.

The President, John Cowan, Esq., occupied the chair, and Mr. T. H. McMillan acted as Secretary to the meeting.

REPORT.

The Directors have pleasure in submitting the Sixteenth Annual Report for the year ending 28th of February, 1898.

The business of the Bank during the year has been of an average nature. Deposits have increased $100,000, compelling an increased investment in Debentures of a corresponding sum. A slight improvement is shown in the net earnings, which have been about equal to 10 1-2 per cent. on capital.

Profits have been adversely affected by the large amount of cash assets carried for which legitimate investments could not be found on desirable mercantile securities. Your Directors feel warranted in hoping that the increasing volume of business exhibited in every branch of trade will provide profitable channels for absorbing surplus funds before the expiration of another year.

The net earnings have amounted to $39,746.42 leaving (after payment of the annual seven per cent. dividends amounting to $26,676.94) a balance of $13,591.41. Out of this balance the sum of $6,000 has been added to the Rest Account, which now stands at $118,000, and the difference ($7,591.41) has been carried forward to credit of Profit and Loss Account.

The employees of the Bank have discharged the several duties pertaining to their positions to the satisfaction of the Directors.

JOHN COWAN, President.

T. H. M'MILLAN, Cashier.

Moved by the President and seconded by the Vice-President, that the report as read be adopted, printed and circulated among the Shareholders.—Carried.

Mr. McLaughlin, seconded by Mr. Conant, moved, That the thanks of the Shareholders are due and are hereby tendered to the President, Vice-President and Directors of the Bank for the manner in which they have conducted the affairs of the Bank during the past year.—Carried.

Mr. Patterson, seconded by Mr. McLaughlin, moved, That the thanks of the Shareholders be given to the Cashier and other officers of the Bank for their attention to the interests of the Bank.—Carried.

Mr. Conant, seconded by Mr. W. F. Cowan, moved, That this meeting do now proceed to elect, by ballot, seven Directors to fill the place of those retiring, and that Messrs. C. W. Scott and John McLaughlin be scrutineers for said election, and that the poll remain open for one hour to receive the votes of the Shareholders, but that should five minutes elapse at any time without a vote having been taken the poll shall be declared closed, and that the Scrutineers be paid $4 each for their services.—Carried.

The Scrutineers reported the following seven gentlemen as having received the unanimous vote of the Shareholders, viz.: John Cowan, Esq., R. S. Hamlin, Esq., W. F. Cowan, Esq., Dr. McIntosh, W. F. Allen, Esq., T. Patterson, Esq., and J. A. Gibson, Esq., who were duly elected Directors for the ensuing year. A vote of thanks was then tendered to the Chairman for his able conduct in the chair, and the meeting then adjourned.

At a subsequent meeting of the new Board, John Cowan, Esq., was unanimously elected President, and R.S. Hamlin, Esq., Vice-President.

PE STEALS SPECTACLES.

Which Makes Nearsighted Admirers Indulge In Strong Language.

There is a monkey in Lincoln park with a penchant for snatching eyeglasses from the noses of the spectators, bending them double and stuffing them down into his pouch. The startled loser of the auxiliaries to sight then has the pleasure of watching the lump of expensive ground lenses and bent and twisted bows joggle about in the pocket that a monkey wears in the region of his Adam's apple and of occasionally being tantalized with the appearance of them in the paw of the purloiner and of learning that the more fuss he makes the less likely is he to recover his property soon.

If the losers at once begin begging for their glasses and expostulating with the wayward monk, he seems delighted and alternately sits in melancholy abstraction gazing at the faraway "keep off the grass" sign, apparently thinking of his old jungle home and the cocoanuts there, or he is restlessly active in performing an aerial act on the topmost perches. His countenance is fixed in the dolorous expression of recent bereavement, and he hasn't time anyway for minding the talk of the common, everyday sightseer.

"Come here, you naughty monkey! Give me those glasses! What am I going to do? Nice Jocko"—in bewitching, insidous tones—"give me back my glasses."

Mr. Jocko Monk, however, is unmindful until suddenly a great light seems to burst upon his heart and brain. He nervously drags out those shapeless eyeglasses, holds them up and looks through them at the person outside the bars, red faced and stamping, in the serious, quizzical way of the dean of a medical college who believes he is discovering a new disease germ. Suddenly he looks up and begins chattering.

"Hello! You here?" he seems to twitter. "What's the matter? You're looking mad. Can I do anything for you? Say, got a peanut in your pocket? Just push it this way, will you? I'm feeling bad—really I am. I'm feeling tough. I need a light lunch. Oh, what you bothering about those old glasses of yours for? Let up, w'll you? Poor fellow, poor fellow! Can't you get along without those things? They ain't any good now anyway."

Then he flaunts the stolen property before the owner and puts it immediately back into the seclusion of the cavity at the roots of his tongue.

By the time the keeper has come to the rescue of the ill fated goggles the monkey has produced them and stowed them away again some three or four times, and the nearsighted individual whose nose they formerly graced is in rage and despair and swears that the monk is in collusion with some optician in the interest of the latter—Chicago Times-Herald.

Shaving a Pursued Bandit.

"I shaved Jesse James, the once noted outlaw, down in southern Kentucky a long time ago," said an old gray haired fellow on the train the other day, "when the man's life wasn't worth a penny. Jesse rushed into my little country place, down in the Red river country, one day in the latter part of December and asked me if I wouldn't shave him while he looked after his colt's revolvers and watched the door. I was not a barber by trade, but those persuaders Jesse had induced me to try my hand with a new Wade & Butcher razor I took out of my showcase. As I shaved, the man of iron nerve sat with a cocked pistol in each hand and told me in a few hurried words that a posse was pursuing him, bent on capturing him, dead or alive, on the charge of robbing a bank at Russellville, a crime, he averred, of which he was not guilty. He wanted his beard shaved off that he might fool his pursuers if they should happen to catch up with him. I finished the job of scraping. The much wanted individual thanked me, and, mounting a horse, which had been hitched in the rear of my store, bade me good evening and rode away. I didn't know for certain who my visitor was, although I suspected it, until the next day, when I heard that a man in the neighborhood was telling that he had seen the elder James the afternoon before. I suppose that was the last shave Jesse James got in Kentucky, and I have never seen him after that day."—Louisville Post.

BLUE LAWS.

Some of the Peculiar Enactments That Obtained In Old Virginia.

Those who fancy that strict laws were peculiar to New England in colonial days should read some of the enactments of the Virginia assembly.

"It was enacted," writes Professor John Fiske in "Old Virginia and Her Neighbors," that any person found drunk was for the first offense to be privately reproved by the minister; the second time this reproof was to be publicly administered; the third time the offender must be put in irons for 12 hours and pay a fine; for any subsequent offenses he must be severely punished at the discretion of the governor and council.

"To guard the community against excessive vanity in dress it was enacted that for all public contributions every unmarried man must be assessed in church 'according to his own apparel,' and every married man must be assessed 'according to his own and his wife's apparel.'

"Not merely extravagance in dress, but such social misdemeanors as flirting, received due legislative condemnation. Pretty maids were known to encourage hopes in more than one suitor, and gay deceivers of the sterner sex would sometimes seek to win the affections of two or more women at the same time. Wherefore it was enacted that 'every minister should give notice in his church that what man or woman soever should use any word or speech tending to a contract of marriage to two several persons at one time as might entangle or breed scruples in their consciences, should for such their offense, either undergo corporal correction (by whipping) or be punished by fine or otherwise, according to the quality of the person so offending."

Men were held to more strict accountability for the spoken or written word than in these shameless modern days. One of the most prominent settlers we find presenting a petition to the assembly to grant him due satisfaction against a neighbor who has addressed to him a letter "wherein he taxeth him both unseemly and amiss of certain things wherein he was never faulty." Speaking against the governor or any member of the council was liable to be punished with the pillory. It was also imprudent to speak too freely about clergymen, who were held in great reverence. No planter could dispose of so much as a pound of tobacco until he had laid aside a certain specified quantity as his assessment toward the minister's salary, which was thus assured even in the worst times, so far as legislation could go.

SPILT HER LUNCH.

Sorry Accident to a Stylish Young Woman In a Train.

The passengers on an early morning train connecting with this city were treated to a thoroughly enjoyable scene the other morning. At one of the small stations a young lady boarded the train.

She was dressed rather stylishly, but a veil covered a rather plain face. She switched down the aisle like a queen. She barely deigned to glance at the other passengers in the car, and when she did her nose rose perceptibly at the tip in a manner that spread the impression of contempt.

She carried a Boston bag and the air of a millionaire. There was but one seat vacant. This was beside a good looking, nicely dressed young man who was reading a paper.

When she came to this seat, she flopped down heavily and tossed her bag to the seat between herself and the young man. Two seconds later the young man leaped from his seat, and a string of earnest words of doubtful origin fell from his lips like vipers from the lips of the young woman in the fable.

The startled passengers looked to see what had caused this outburst. They saw, and then they laughed. The nice looking Boston bag contained an ordinary, everyday working girl's lunch.

One of its features was a jar of coffee, which had broken in the descent and flowed freely over the young man's new fall coat and trousers.

He went into the smoking car, swearing profusely. She murmured a weak apology and spent her time in mopping up the seat.—Brockton Enterprise.

Compressed Flour.

The British admiralty and the war department are testing, under various climatic conditions, the new method for preserving flour. One objection to the establishment of national granaries has been the difficulty of storing grain for any length of time. The grain germinates and is ruined, and to keep large quantities in sound condition has been pronounced impracticable. Experiments are being made with a system of compression into bricks by hydraulic pressure. The trials show that the flour so treated is not affected by damp, even under unfavorable conditions, and is free from mold. The compression destroys all forms of larval life and the flour is thus rendered safe from the attacks of the insects. The saving in storage is enormous, as the cubic space occupied by 100 pounds of loose flour will hold more than 300 pounds of the compressed article.—Scientific American.

High Flown.

Mrs. Minnie E. Leo says: "In a Paris cafe I asked the maid whether she did not think the name on the menu, 'demi tasse cafe au lait frappe a la glace,' was very inflated for such a small cup of cold coffee and milk. 'Yes, madame,' she replied, 'it occupies the mind as well as the stomach.'"

CORNWALL CANAL AND RIVER REACHES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvements at Upper Entrance of Cornwall Canal and River Reaches" will be received at this Office until 16 o'clock on Saturday the 30th day of April, 1898, for the works connected with the widening, straightening and deepening of the Upper Entrance of the Cornwall Canal and the River Reaches between Cornwall and Coteau Landing.

Plans and Specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 15th day of April, 1898 at the Office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Cornwall. Printed forms of Tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $17,000 must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the condition requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of November, A. D., 1898, will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

Cattle for Nebraska

Mr. H. P. Kennedy will ship four hundred head of cattle to Nebraska to-day by G.T.R. via Chicago. They are stockers intended for the large western ranches. Mr. Kennedy has done a heavy trade in this line of stock this spring.

Calcutt's Porter

Spain, hearing that McKinley was getting a thousand barrels of Calcutt's Porter, has ordered two thousand barrels to be sent direct to Cuba. E. Brown & Co have received the order.

The Pants Were Missing

The proprietor of the Grand Central, Mr. G. Gobiel, was relieved of a considerable amount of cash the other night in rather a mysterious manner. He retired for the night, leaving his trousers in his room, but on awaking in the morning could not find them. On searching he found the missing pants in the next room, but a considerable quantity of change which he had left in the pockets was gone. Everything in the pockets except a key was taken. The identity of the thief is unknown.

HOW TO PROCURE A WHEEL.

Novel Way to Procure a First Class New $75 High Grade Bicycle

The Times Printing Company, Peterborough, offers a first class Bicycle, best make, 1898 model, all the latest improvements, for either lady or gentleman, to any man, woman, boy or girl who will send in a club of 35 paid subscribers to the daily Times at $3.00 per year, (or 65 paid subscribers for 6 months, at $1.50, or 130 for 3 months at 75c). Or the same wheel for a club of 100 subscribers to the Weekly Times at 85c. per year. Club getters have the privilege of sending part Daily and part Weekly subscriptions. It is no trouble to secure subscribers to these papers, as they are equal to any in the country.

Samples, together with subscription blanks, sent on application.

Wheels will be shipped same day list of subscribers is received at the Times Office.

Y. M. C. A. CONVERSAZIONE

Last Night's Entertainment Decidedly Successful in Every Particular

The Y.M.C.A. building was brilliantly illuminated in every department last last night, the occasion being the annual conversazione, which, judging from the large attendance and the animated and happy expression on the faces of those present, was a decided success.

A profusion of flowers, well placed, added to the attractiveness. Ice cream, coffee and cake were served by the charming members of the young ladies class. A gramaphone discoursed choice selections, a favorite one being "Paddy putting the baby to sleep," which commanded an encore.

In the gymnasium the physical drill classes, under the direction of Mr. Buxton, instructor, gave an exhibition which showed a high ttase of proficiency and reflected great credit on the members of the classes and their instructor.

This department of the Y.M.C.A. is worthy of special commendation, and the 200 members of these classes will make better men as a result of their winter's course in physical development.

An entirely new feature was an exhibit of bicycles of various makers, in charge of local representatives.

Messrs. J.W.T. Fairweather & Co. made a grand display of wheels, their leaders being the Gendron, Reliance and the E. & D. Special, the latter having a skirt-guard of celluloid and aluminum.

The Peterborough Cycle Works had a fine collection of the famous Red Birds, of Brantford.

A. Mercer & Co. showed the Columbia, Hartford and Vedette.

The Peterborough Hardware Co. had as their favorites, The Earl, Columbus and Lakeside.

Mr. W. A. Sanderson exhibited the Antelope, Errant, McBurnie & Beattie and Pyramid bicycles.

Mr. J. H. Hall was enthusiastic on the merits of the Eclipse, with its automatic coaster and back-pedal brake.

McPherson & Young had on view the Huron, Common Sense and the narrow-tread Racycle.

Foote & McWhinnie showed the Patee a very fine wheel.

The bicycle exhibit drew a large crowd, there being many ladies among the admirers of the "silent steed."

Taken altogether the affair last night was a complete success and reflects credit upon the Y.M.C.A.

The programme will be repeated this evening.

PETERBORO AND DAN GODFREY

The Great English Band and Local Arrangements

"The Napoleon of English Bandmasters." Lieut. Dan Godfrey and his splendid band will arrive in Halifax on May 15th. It is expected that the director of the great enterprise, Mr. Charles A. E. Harriss, will be in this town in a few days to complete arrangements for the band's appearance here. It is the first time in the history of the country that a great English band has visited Canada, and the fame of Godfrey and his Guardsmen is known the world over. In other places further east, where details have been completed, the band's appearance is under the auspices of the highest military and civic authorities and is being made the occasion of a public holiday and a popular demonstration. Special trains are going to bring in large numbers from the surrounding territory and the only problem troubling smaller places is a building of sufficient size to accommodate the large throngs which will gather for this event quite unique and remarkable in Canadian musical annals. In the larger cities the big Armouries will be used, and in Montreal and Toronto preparations are being made to seat audiences of 7,000 people. It is to be hoped that successful arrangements can be made here for the appearance of this great band.

RAILWAY NOTES

Increased Freight Business the Result of the War Scare

There is a great demand all along the C. P. R. line for empty cars to go westward, and in a few days none will be found lying at the small stations. All that can be procured are wanted in order that the freight from the west may be brought over the northern roads. These will gain at the expense of those to the south, as all western shippers will avoid the danger and confusion of traffic in the south at such a time, relying on the comparative security of northern routes. One of the effects of the war, at least, will be increased freight traffic on Canadian roads.

There are at present about one hundred and fifty G.T.R. cars standing on the old track in Cobourg.

The new C.P.R. station at Galt is to be started at once.

Five hundred men are employed in the C.P.R. shops at Winnipeg at present the largest number in the history of the road.

The G.T.R. will on May 1st commence relaying tracks from Hamilton to Toronto, from Niagara Falls to Port Huron, and on the Buffalo and Fort Erie and Windsor branch. On the last section the rails will be entirely relaid.

Fire Sale at Mason's

The recent fire at E. F. Mason & Co's. has had the effect of slightly damaging by smoke the immense stock of groceries and provisions carried by this firm, and in order to faciliate renovation and make room for new goods, a clearing sale has been inaugurated and is now in full swing. Everything must go, and at almost your own price. Don't procrastinate! Call to-day!

Want the 57th Batt. Band

The Campbellford Herald of yesterday says: "A meeting of the Driving Park Association was held at the St. Lawrence Hall hotel on Saturday night, to make arrangements for the celebration of the 24th of May in Campbellford. Mr. P. C. Foy, the secretary was instructed to write to the leader of the 57th Battalion band in Peterborough to secure their services for the day."

The Auction Sale at Mrs. orde's Ashburnham, not having been completed yesterday, will be continued to-day—commencing at one o'clock

ON TO OTTAWA

This is the Rallying Cry of Our Bold Soger Boys—Will be Settled To-night

Ottawa has shown her hand. Yesterday through Lieut.-Col. Bell the 57th Batt. received a formal invitation to visit Ottawa on the Queen's Birthday. Previous to the receipt of this communication Kingston was the only competitor in the field. Now "the boys" will have a choice and the following orders—issued yesterday afternoon—will give every man a chance to express an opinion at to-night's drill:

Orders by Lieut.-Col. R. W. Bell, Commanding the 57th Battalion of Infantry, Peterborough Rangers.

Headquarters,
Peterborough, April 21, 1898.

The Battalion will parade on Friday, 22nd at 8 p.m. sharp. Every officer and man must be present, as at this parade arrangements for the annual trip of the Battalion, on 24th May will be made.

By order,
H. A. MORROW, Capt. and Adj.

In order to ascertain in advance the view the regiment as a whole would take in this connection a Times representative last night quietly interviewed a score or more of the leading non-coms. and men and as a result we are prepared to state that Ottawa will be the scene of the 57th annual outing this year. Every man spoken to was decidedly in favor of Ottawa and all were unanimous in the opinion that Ottawa would be the choice of the battalion.

To gain the proper standard of efficiency it is imperative that every man should attend regularly between now and the holiday.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Interesting Items of Local and District Happenings in Brief

—Additional locals on first page.

—The Council will meet to-night in committee of the whole.

—The Y.M.C.A. Camera Club will hold its next meeting on Thursday evening, April 28th.

—Do you want a bicycle? If so, read the offer of the Times Printing Company in another column.

—Peterborough has a dog poisoner. Several valuable dogs have been killed during the past few days.

—The world is progressing. Lindsay Council has ordered the pig pen to be removed from the market square.

—Lindsay proposes to hire a sanitary engineer to look after sewer construction and putting down granolithic pavement.

—Packages of first class commercial note paper, containing five quires—only fifteen cents per package at the Times Bookstore.

—The services which the Rev. A.H. Ranton has been conducting in the Berkeley street church, Toronto, are to terminate this week. From Toronto he goes to Wausau, Wisconsin. Mr. Ranton has decided to live in Toronto.

—Lindsay contemplates taking a plebiscite on the reduction of the number of councillors to six and the mayor, and also as to whether the councillors shall receive $50 and the mayor $100 a year for their services or not.

—A new instrument has been placed in the local exchange of the Bell Telephone Co. It is a calculagraph, and its purpose is to keep check on the time of long-distance conversations. It registers the duration of a conversation accurately.

—Word received from Mr. Chas. Gladman by his father stated the Peterborough-Klondike party did not leave Vancouver on the 13th, as their vessel did not sail until the 15th. They were all well. They had made a change in their route, having decided to go in by the White Pass, instead of Chilicoot.

Another April Wedding

"Mount View," Douro, was the scene of a very interesting event Wednesday evening, being the marriage of Miss E. Sedgwick and Mr. F. E. Heap. Miss Essie Sedgwick, acted as bridesmaid, while the groom was assisted by his cousin, Mr. Geo. Heap. Miss Hilda Symonds discharged the duties of maid of honor and Master Clifford Curtis acted as page. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. Symonds, Rector of St. Luke's, assisted by Rev. E. V. Stevenson, of St. John's. After the ceremony the guests, to the number of about fifty, partook of a sumptuous wedding supper. The many handsome and valuable presents showed the esteem in which the young couple are held, and their numerous friends unite in wishing them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

For Sale or To Rent

That valuable property situated on the corner of Bethune and Edinburgh streets, for sale or to rent. Parties intending to purchase or rent a handsome and commodious residence should not fail to inspect this place. The house is a four story brick, 32 x 42, fitted up in modern style, with every conveience, such as city water, bath room, electric light, first class outbuildings, including stable for three horses, driving shed for six rigs, ice house, etc. There is a fine lawn and vegetable garden attached to the house, also a number of fruit trees and shrubbery. The above property will be sold cheap or leased for a term of years. For further particulars apply on the premises to J.R. Donell.

The Times was favored with a call

Capt. Morrow is still confined to his room through an injury sustained some days ago.

Mr. Victor McWilliams, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Miller, has returned from Toronto and will remain at home for a few weeks to recuperate after his recent illness.

Rev. W. R. Young passed through from Port Hope on his way to Norwood yesterday. He is one of the Board of Examiners for young men preparing for ordination, and is on his way to attend a meeting to be held for that purpose in Norwood.

Bowmanville News: "Rev. J. J. Rae preached two able sermons in the Methodist church, on Sunday last to good congregations, the audience at the evening service being particularly large. The subject, 'Why do we have to work?' was full of interest." Mr. Rae is as popular in Bowmanville as he was in Peterborough.

Miss Aggie Hall, second daughter of Mr. Adam Hall, was taken suddenly ill Wednesday evening with appendicites, and yesterday morning she was removed to the Nicholls hospital, where an operation was successfully performed. The patient is resting favorably and her many friends will hope for her speedy recovery.

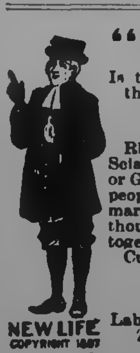
ST. LUKE'S CHURCH CONCERT

A Very Pleasing Entertainment in the Opera House Last Night

The long-looked for Easter entertainment under the auspices of the Girls' Guild of St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, took place last night, and was a decided success. The audience was large and appreciative.

The programme opened with a selection by the orchestra, rendered in a pleasing manner. This was followed by a flag drill, in which seventeen young ladies took part, and which elicited much applause. Comic drill followed, which also was worthy of special praise. The allegorical masque, entitled "A Legend of Spring,' was the feature of the evening, the chief parts being taken by Miss Bysche, Miss Florence Scott, Miss Simons, Master Bert Germans, Miss Butcher and little Miss Spence—a tot of about 3 or 4 years of age.

Too much credit cannot be given Miss Maggie Calcutt, who trained the children, and who planned and superintended the making of the costumes.



"New Life"

Is the name of a medicine that we have never known a case of failure to cure.

Rheumatism of any form, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, or Gout. It has cured more people since it was put on the market one year ago than the thousands of remedies put together in twenty years.

To say that we've started to be busy in Millinery hardly expresses the idea of the big rush of past days—so far trade is doubling up on last year, and though our staff of trimmers and saleswomen has been increased, we think it necessary to warn those who intend to order an Easter Hat or Bonnet here, that it will be the part of wisdom to see to the matter at once—this week if possible.

SPANISH WARSHIP ALPHONSO XII SUNK BY UNITED STATES' FLEET

Report in Circulation at Key West to this Effect

SPANISH STEAMER TAKEN

Volnnteer Army Bill Calls for 100,000 Men to Serve one Year

Escape of Woodford from Spain Exciting Demonstrations at the Railway Stations Where the Train Passed Through Soldiers Compelled to Draw Their Swords to Prevent the Crowds from Mobbing the United States Contingent Sailing of the North Atlantic Squadron at Daybreak from Key West

(Special to the Times.)

Key West, Fla., April 22.—It is reported that the Spanish cruiser Alfonso XII. has been sunk by Sampson's fleet.

Washington, April 22.—The Spanish vessel Cracia, which was loaded at Pensacola with supplies for the Spanish forces in Cuba, is supposed to have been captured by vessels of the North Atlantic squadron.

FIRST ACT OF WAR.

Key West, April 22.—11 a.m.—The whole Island is in a frantic state of excitement over a report brought here a few minutes ago by a small craft to the effect that the fleet had made its first capture in the shape of a Spanish freight steamer. Thousands of citizens and soldiers are flocking to the docks to welcome the victors and the prisoners. Captain Wheeler states that the capture was effected without any resistance or attempt to escape. The name of the captured vessel is given as the Buena Ventura. The gunboat having the captured vessel in tow is not yet in sight, and many believe that it is a canard, but Captain Wheeler, who brought the news says that the report is absolutely true. I will have confirmation in an hour.

THE NEWS CONFIRMED.

Key West, April 22.—12.15 p. m.—It was the United States cruiser Nashville that captured the Spanish boat which was laden with lumber. The Spaniards surrendered on being summoned by a single shot over the bow from a six-pounder. The prize has not yet arrived.

FURTHER CONFIRMATION.

Key West, April 22.—The United States cruiser Nashville has captured the Spanish ship Buena Vura, of 1,000 tons, having on board a cargo of lumber. She was on her way from the coast of Texas. The cruiser fired a six-pounder and the Spaniard surrendered.

DECLARATION OF WAR.

Washington, April 22.—The President is preparing a proclamation declaring that a state of war exists, and warning Spanish citizens and merchants to leave the country. The proclamation will be issued to-day or to-morrow. There is some conflict among legal authorities as to the distinction between merchants and citizens. Under our treaty with Spain her citizens are given one year to ours are to leave Spain, but subsequent legislation throws a doubt upon the length of time, and it is to definitely ascertain the exact meaning of the existing law by consulting authorities that may delay the issuance of it to-day.

STOCK MARKET AFFECTED.

New York, April 22.—Aside from the news regarding the progress of the war, there was nothing taken into consideration as affecting the stock market. In a general way the sentiment seemed to be favorably affected in the removal of the long existing uncertainty in regard to the Spanish-American situation. London houses were buyers in this market.

CHANGES IN THE CABINET.

Washington, April 22.—There is every indication that the Cabinet is about to be reorganized upon a war basis. Gary's resignation was due as much to his opposition to war as to his ill health. Long's resignation has been written, but he has been persuaded to withold it for several days. Admiral Walker is most talked of to succeed Long at the head of the Navy Department. Sherman's resignation has been expected for several weeks. Senator Cushman K. Davis has been offered a State portfolio, but it is said he declined it.

MINISTERIAL CRISIS.

Madrid, April 22.—There is grave fear of a Ministerial crisis here. General Campos has advised the Queen Regent to retain the Ministry intact. On being summoned to the palace General Campos said that the Ministry should be supported by all parties, but if there should be signs of weakness in the conflict with the United States her Majesty should summon the Conservatives. "If," said General Campos, "The Conservatives decline the responsibility, here am I." The Queen Regent has also consulted with the President of the Senate.

WOODFORD SAFELY OUT.

Henday (Spanish frontier), April 22.—The United States Minister to Spain, General Woodford, reached the frontier safely at 8 a.m., after some exciting experiences.

The Spanish police attempted to capture a member of the Legation, and at Valladolid the train was attacked. The attempted capture was frustrated by General Woodford.

General Woodford knew nothing of the disturbances until he reached Tolosa. There a sergeant of the civil guard, accompanied by a private detective, boarded the train and demanded that Mr. Joaquin Moreno disembark from the cars.

James, the General's colored valet, thereupon awakened General Woodford who hurriedly dressed while matters were being explained to him. The General then formally protested, through the medium of the correspondent of the Associated Press against the attempted interference with his suite, declaring that Mr. Moreno was his private secretary and a British subject. The Spaniards, however, claimed that he was a Spanish subject, but the General refused to give him up to the police, and placed himself in the doorway of the compartment in which Mr. Moreno was travelling, declaring he would only surrender the latter if forced to do so. The Minister then asked the correspondent of the Associated Press to explain to the Spaniards that he placed Mr. Moreno under the protection of the British flag, and that if they took him it would only be by using personal violence to the United States Minister, who proposed to protect Mr. Moreno until the frontier was crossed.

ANOTHER FAST YACHT.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 22.—The yacht Comanche has been tendered the Government by M. A. Hanna. She is the largest yacht on the great lakes and one of the finest in the world.

MILITIAMEN FLUNK.

Berea, Ohio, April 22.—Ten members of Company K, Ohio National Guards, have announced positively that they would not go to the front in case of war. This is the first flunk flunk in Ohio.

THE BLOCADE OF HAVANA.

Washington, April 22.—A Bill will be introduced to Congress to-day or to-morrow for a loan of $500,000,000 at three per cent. The President has signed the proclamation announcing the blocade of Havana.

ANGLO-AMERICAN CO-OPERATION.

New York, April 22.—The Post's London Special, referring to Henry White's mission, says the movement for an Anglo-American co-operation in foreign affairs, has gone far beyond mere newspaper talk and has entered the region of explicit official negotiations.

AID FOR CUBANS.

Washington, April 22. — Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, has definitely decided to resign his official position and go into the army. It is said that one of the first measures to be taken by Secretary Alger will be to send to Cuba under the immediate direction of Delegate Palma, Dr. Castillo Durany, and General Nunez, at least 40,000 rifles, a number of field pieces and 6,000,000 cartridges. Large quantities of clothing, provisions and medicines will also be sent to the patriot army.

TO POST BRITAIN.

Kingston, April 22.—Capt. Lee, of the Royal Military College, has received instructions from the British Government to leave for Washington on Saturday, and proceed to Cuba with the United States troops. The English militia authorities are desirous of being informed on the manoeuvres of the United States artillery men, and have selected Capt. Lee to look after the information.

SPANISH COUNCIL OF WAR.

New York, April 22.—A despatch from St. Vincent, Cape Verde Islands, says: The Spanish war fleet from Cadiz is expected here to reinforce the squadron of ten warships now here waiting orders from Madrid. The Admiral in command and the senior officers of the combined squadrons here held a council of war, but took great precautions to insure secrecy. The swift torpedo boat Rayo, whose speed is said to be 24 knots an hour, leaves nightly for patrol duty or reconnoitring.

TO PURCHASE THE HOLLAND.

Washington, April 22.—The Government has decided to purchase the submarine boat Holland.

STRENGTHENING THE NAVY.

New York, April 22.—Three steam yachts, the Restless, Viking and Thespien, arrived at the navy yard to-day to be fitted up at once as torpedo boats. They will be sent to join the fleet.

ENGLISHMEN JOIN IN.

New York, April 22.—There is a movement among the English born residents of New York, who are United States citizens, to raise men and money to assist in ousting Spain from Cuba.

DON CARLOS' LOUD WORDS.

New York, April 22.—A despatch from Brussels says: Don Carlos has made the following statement: "But we Spaniards are tough fighters and enter the contest fearless of consequences. We thank the Holy Father for his kind offices, but the time has passed for intervention and the final catastrophe is now inevitable."

SWORDS DRAWN FOR WOODFORD.

Bayonne, France, April 22.—10.35 a. m.—The farewell of the United States Minister, General Stewart L. Woodford, to Spain was in keeping with the dignity he displayed throughout the crisis. When asked if he had anything to say to say, he simply raised his hat and said "Goodbye." The Segovia incident was comparatively unimportant. The students of the military school, in full uniform, packed the depot. They were silent until the train started, then there was an enthusiastic outburst of cheering for Spain and Cuba.

LICENSE COMMISSIONERS MEET

And Grant the Town and Village Shop Licenses for the Year

The License Commissioners for West Peterborough met yesterday afternoon at one o'clock to consider the applications for liquor licenses for 1898-99. There were present Messrs. Walton, chairman, Cochrane, Halpin and Graham. Only the shop licenses were dealt with. These were granted to the same parties as held them last year, namely: Messrs. M.L. Henry & Co., F.J.R. Mitchell, E. Brown & Co., Alex. Elliott, Wm. Collins and J. C. Sullivan.

The Board adjourned till ten o'clock on Friday, 29th inst., to consider the applications for tavern licenses. There is the same number of applicants as held licenses last year, namely, thirty-three.

CONVERSAT CONTINUED

Two Games of Basket Ball Reds vs. Blues and Thistles vs. Roses

The Y.M.C.A. conversat. was continued at the Y.M.C.A last night, the program being varied by two very interesting games of basket ball.

The first game was between the Reds and Blues, and resulted in favor of the former by a score of 8 to 1. In the second game the Roses and Thistles wrestled for the supremacy. The Scotchmen were defeated by a score of 14 to 8 after a very exciting game.

The attendance was very large considering the unfavorable weather.

It is intended, we understand, to make the affair an annual spring event in connection with the Association, and if future conversats are as successful as this one has been there will certainly be no rooom for grumbling.

FOR THE NERVOUS.

And Emaciated, South American Nervine is a Rich, Deep Health Fountain and Never Fails.

Nervous exhaustion, bad digestion, impoverished blood are the diseases imprinted on many a brow. South American Nervine has a marvellous power as a nerve tonic, a blood builder and stimulator Tones the system, clears, regulates and dispels depression and restores the good spirits essential to good health. George Webster, of Forest, writes: "For years I suffered much from sleeplessness, nervousness, twitching muscles and palpitation. All remedies failed but South American Nervine. The first bottle greatly helped, and five bottles cured me. I feel I owe my life to it"

The Stamped Envelopes

The Postoffice department is about issuing the first instalment of the new stamped envelopes. There will as hitherto be three denominations of envelopes in the forthcoming series—the 1 cent, 2 cent, and 3 cent—but there will be only one size, that of the present No. 2, or larger envelope. The cost of the larger envelopes has been reduced 10 cents per hundred in each denomination, and a further concession granted the public by supplying without extra cost, and whenever preferred, these envelopes, bearing a blank form of request for the return of the letter, should it not be delivered within a specified time.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia., Lyman Sons, & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Positively refuse all substitutes.

Bicycle Baskets

Bicyclists, have your seen the new lunch basket and parcel carrier combined? They are just the thing for picnic parties and those taking long journeys. They have not been on sale here, but hundreds are being used in the cities. The Times Bookstore are sole agents for them.

Be sure you are right, then go ahead. Be sure you get Hood's Sarsaparilla, and not some cheap and worthless substitute.

Fresh Strawberries, 25 cents a box. J. B. Oke, 418 George-St

Get More and You Get Less

Why is it every sarsaparilla which tries to sell itself, ranges itself against Ayer's as the standard? Why is it that all have to offer extra inducements—bigger bottles, fancy wrappers, cheaper price—anything, everything, but the one inducement of quality?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

has never been equaled by any cheap imitation of it, and quality tells, just as blood tells.

It Is the Standard.

"I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla for more than twenty-five years, and have never heard anything but words of praise from my customers; not a single complaint has ever reached me. A preparation must possess great merit to maintain such a reputation. I believe your sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier that has ever been introduced to the general public. I often hear other manufacturers say that this is "as good as Ayer's," but no one ever yet heard it said that Ayer's was "as good" as any other kind. They always set Ayer's up as the standard of excellence."—S. F. BOYCE. Duluth. Minn.

FIGHTING WITHOUT MONEY

Spain's credit is exhausted. Her 4 per cent bonds have all gone down to nearly 40. Without credit or much money in sight many people have supposed that Spain would not be able to make much of a fight. Henry Clews the well-known financier, points out the fallacy of this idea. Instead of the bankrupt nation being a weak foe, he insists that it may be a very formidable foe. He argues that Spain being bankrupt, will abandon ambi- to keep up her national credit and will default the interest on her outstanding obligations. This will amount to about $100,000,000 a year, a very comfortable sum for war purposes. Additional money can be raised by contributions and forced revenue from the people. Mr. Clews compares the condition of Spain with that of the bankrupt railroad, which, as every one knows makes a bad foe for the solvent competitor. As he points out, a railroad in the hands of a receiver pays out nothing except to keep the road in repair and can make forced loans through receivers' certificates and can cut rates so low as to inflict serious injury to a strong competitor if the fight continues long. On this line he argues that Spain, with no credit to be protected, will be ready to resort to desperate expedients in a fight.

GLADSTONE

It is very evident that the greatest and best living son of Britain is rapidly drawing near the end of his earthly journey. He is suffering great pain from a disease which the most eminent surgeons can only alleviate, but cannot cure. In his retirement he has ceased to be a politician and is exalted in the eyes of all his countrymen as a stainless patriot. He has served his country and his Queen with untiring energy and with commanding ability. No living orator has so swayed and moved English-speaking people as he has, and no one has exercised a greater influence in the world. He is respected and reverenced in the United States and on the continent almost as much as at home. His voice has ever been for mercy, trust and righteousness, and the world is far better for his having lived in it. He has been more than politicioan, statesman or Minister of the Crown. He has been both classical scholar and earnest theologian. Everything that he has touched he has adorned. His domestic life has been ideal. His social life has had a singular charm; and in all his varied relations to his fellow-men his record has been stainless and singularly noble. It is said that as he contemplates the end he experiences "a serious joy." And so it should be to one who has lived as he has lived.

When the shadows lenthen and the western sun sinks in a halo of glory, he passes forth as one who has fought a good fight and goes to his coronation.

It must make Spain particularly angry when she reflects that she has to borrow money to meet the expenses of discovering this country.

* * *

Before Uncle Sam lets out his dogs of war he should see that they all have their '98 tags on. The Spanish dog catchers are abroad.

* * *

It is at least a curious fact, however little real significance it may have, that regularly since and during the close of the eleventh century each cycle of one hundred years has been completed with a blaze of wars. In nearly every instance they were conflicts of importance and had a decided bearing on the woe or weal of mankind. They say history repeats itself, and if it does the nineteenth century will be but following a precedent that is 800 years old, should it, too, end amid the roar of cannon.

* * *

"Private duties" will keep his Majesty the Prince of Monaco from attending to his duties as an officer in the Spanish navy. The Prince is boss of the greatest gambling shop in the world and private duties are the the name he gives to the business of seeing that nobody "breaks the bank at Monte Carlo."

* * *

A citizen of the United States who has had some experience in military life, said yesterday that the United States in its war with Cuba would confine its operations to the island, unless she was forced to make her operations more expansive. She will make Cadenz, in Cuba, the basis of operations, and will attempt to drive the Spanish soldiers off the island. When this is accomplished he thinks Spain will not make any further disturbance, and will abandon the war. The speaker is afraid that the Spanish Minister to the United States will locate permanently in Canada and that he will protest against any supplies being sent to the United States from Canada during the war.

Mrs. Smith Stricken Down

The wife of Lawrence Smith, an employee at the Barnado Home, was stricken down with neuralgia of the heart at her residence on Smithtown Hill, just outside the corporation, Thursday night. She lingered in unconsciousness until yesterday morning, when she passed away. The deceased was about 56 years of age and in robust health until stricken down so suddenly. She was a faithful member of the George street Methodist church and an earnest worker in Grace Sunday school. A husband and one daughter, a girl of 18, survive.

Paine's Celery Compound Snatches Mr. Morisette From the Grave.

NATURE'S SPRING MEDICINE CURES RHEUMATISM.

Are you enjoying God's blessings this spring weather? You know not anything of them if you are a martyr to rheumatism, neuralgia, insomnia, nervousness, and diseases of the blood.

It is now an imperative duty to get back sound health and strength by a complete restoring of the broken-down, tired and agonized system with Paine's Celery Compound.

Your chief aim at this season should be to furnish the body with fresh nervous energy, and supply every artery and vein with rich, pure blood, thus expelling the seeds of disease and death. There is nothing known to physicians that can for a moment approach Paine's Celery Compound for casting off disease, purifying the blood and making strong and healthy nerves.

Do not procrastinate if you are in danger; to-morrow may be too late. Bear in mind that your case is not too difficult for the curing virtues of such a medicine as Paine's Celery Compound.

A glorious victory was secured to Mr. Morisette, of Roxton Pond, P.Q., at the eleventh hour! His doctors failed, but Paine's Celery Compound was his true salvation. It will give the same marvellous results to all users; it is the world's only disease banisher; it is the only true life-giver. Mr Morisette says.

"Having been given up to die some time ago by some of the best doctors of the United States, I came back to Canada last autumn terribly ill, and had lost all hope. Suffering agonies from inflammatory rheumatism, I was strongly urged to use Paine's Celery Compound, I gave it a trial as recommended, and the first bottle did me so much good I continued with the medicine until I had used seven bottles, when I found myself perfectly cured; indeed, I never felt better in all my life than at present. I use every possible means to tell others of Paine's Celery Compound, and will always recommend it to those troubled with rheumatism."

He Got a Mate.

A sea captain called at a village inn and asked the landlady, a young widow:

"Do you know where I can get a mate? I have lost my mate."

"I am very sorry for you, Mr. ——," she said, smiling. "I want a mate, too, and cannot get one. As we are in the same position, I'll tell you what I'll do—if you'll be mine, I will be yours."

He closed with the bargain, and, the widow keeping her word, he is now supplied with two mates.—Pearson's Weekly.

An Important Change

An amendment to the Municipal Act, passed at the last Session makes an important change in the municipal elections in towns. The two most important features of the change are the reduction in the size of the Town Council and abolition of the ward system, as far as representation is concerned. Next January towns with a population of less than five thousand inhabitants will elect a Mayor and six Councillors by the vote of the ratepayers as a whole, without regard to ward boundaries.

Luxurious Traveling.

The height of luxurious traveling has been reached by the czar and czarina. The empress' private car is upholstered in pale blue satin. The electric lamps are all in the form of lilies, and it contains writing and tea tables made of mother of pearl. The nursery is the next apartment, and is as comfortable and handsome as the same rooms in any of the czar's palaces. There are dining rooms and drawing rooms and several sleeping apartments. In fact, this train is a miniature palace. The wheels are covered with india rubber tires.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE EXCITABLE FRENCH.

Scene In the Chamber of Deputies With the Members Enraged.

Upon arriving at the anteroom of the chamber of deputies, says Colonel T. W. Higginson in The Atlantic, I found the hall full of people waiting, each having to send his card to some member, naming on it the precise hour of arrival. The member usually appeared promptly, when an immense usher called in a stentorian voice for "La personne qui a fait demander M. Constant" —or whoever it might be. Then the constituent—for such it usually was—advanced toward the smiling member, who never looked bored, the mask of hospitality being probably the same in this respect throughout the legislative halls of the world. At last M. Talandier appeared and got me a place among the corps diplomatique. The chamber itself was more like our representatives' hall at Washington than like the house of commons. The members had little locked desks, and some were writing letters, like our representatives, though I saw no newspapers.

The ordinary amount of noise was like that in our congress, though there was happily no clapping of hands for pages, but when the members became especially excited, which indeed happened very often, it became like a cage of lions. For instance, I entered just as somebody had questioned the minister of war, General Borel, about an alleged interference with elections, and his defiant reply had enraged the Lefts, or radicals, who constituted the majority of the assembly. They shouted and gesticulated, throwing up their arms and then slapping them on their knees very angrily, until the president rang his great bell, and they quieted down lest he might put on his hat and adjourn the meeting. In each case the member speaking took his stand in the desk or tribune below the president, and the speeches were sometimes read, sometimes given without notes.

The war minister, a stout, red faced man—always, the radicals say, half intoxicated—stood with folded arms and looked ready for a coup d'etat, yet I heard it said about me that he would be compelled either to retreat or resign. One saw at a glance how much profounder political differences must be in France than with us.

Married on Thirty Minutes' Courtship.

"You may talk about your brief courtships and marriages on short notice," said Captain Arm Cardwell once, "but I think I once witnessed the quickest made match on record. I was running as a conductor between Russellville and Owensboro, as I did for many years, and on a trip in the winter of 1881 I got a pretty country girl passenger at a little flag station south of Central City about 9:45 a. m. A few miles farther on at another small station a big strapping looking farmer, dressed in brown jeans, with his trousers tucked in his tall boots, got on my train. The fellow hadn't opened the car door till he spied the rustic lass, and before he took his seat in front of the girl he had smiled at her.

"I punched his ticket, went in the smoking car, and on my return to the regular passenger coach found the Green river tiller of the soil sitting in the same seat with the maiden, chatting with her as if he had known her since birth. In 25 minutes after they had first met the fellow called me to him and said: 'See here, podner, we want to get hitched. I hain't knowed Mirinda Jane here but 30 minutes, but we both like, an she's willin an so'm I. Whur's the nighest parson, podner?' I took them on to Owensboro, and the happy bridegroom and his blushing other half were passengers back on my train that afternoon. For hurry up nuptials it does strike me that these ought to have the cake and other special prizes offered for quick yeast love matches."—Louisville Post.

De Lesseps Statue.

M. Fremiet has finished the head of the enormous statue of the late Comte Ferdinand de Lesseps which is to be placed at the entry of the Suez canal. The canal projector is to be represented standing, covered with an Arab burnoose, and pointing toward the new waterway opened up to navigation. On one of the sides of the pedestal—which is to have a granite foundation—will be a medallion containing the portraits of the khedives who patronized the canal. —Boston Transcript.

Seeing Oneself.

Next to the power of standing outside oneself and looking at me as other folks see me the most remarkable is this of (by the insight of genius and imagination) becoming you. The first makes one sometimes only too reasonable, too humble; the second warms the heart and enriches the soul, for it gives the charm of selfhood to beings not ourselves.—Jean Ingelow.

BETTER TO MAKE A FIGHT.

When the good knight, Don Quixote, hung by his wrist from the stable window, he imagined that a tremendous abyss yawned beneath his feet. Presently the throng was cut, and the gallant adventurer fell four inches. Many others, before and since his day, have had similar experiences. Black clouds, seemingly full of concealed lightnings and heavy with yet unuttered thunder, have slowly drifted over our heads without making a single hostile demonstration. Calamities, when they are really come, are often found much more bearable than we fancied they would be as we looked helplessly on their dreaded approach.

May not this possibly be true also in respect of that event which excites in us the most serious apprehension, namely death? After much observation, Pliny avowed his opinion that the moment of dissolution was the most exquisite instant of life. And multitudes who have been swallowed up by the Dark Archway have, in the very fact and article of their going, testified to the soundness of his judgment.

It can at least do no harm to uphold that theory of the nature of our taking off, whether it be true or not. None of us will be in any greater hurry to leave the world on that account. Whatever she may mean to do to render our final exit easy and pleasant. Nature certainly endows us with an imperative instinct against surrendering existence a fraction of a second before we are obliged to.

All there is of death, says somebody, is the willingness to die. But we are not willing. Poor and mean as our lives may be in the opinion of certain bilious pessimists, the majority find life eminently worth living, and make a fight for it accordingly.

This was what a man did, whose brief account of his struggles I now submit to you. And I am glad to say he came out of it a clear winner.

"In the autum of 1890," he says, "my health began to give way. I felt low and weak, a feeling of giddiness coming over me. My appetite was bad, and when food was placed before me I had no relish for it. After eating, I had weight and pain at the chest. I had excruciating pain and stiffness in the back, which I was told was lumbago.

"I got little sleep at night, and in the morning was worn out. I soon began to lose flesh, and was so weak I could scarcely get about. Time after time I had to give up my work, and was confined to the house for a week or two.

"My sufferings continued two and one-half years, during which time I lost over two stone weight. I consulted three doctors, but their medicines did not help me.

"In February, 1893, I read about Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, and got a bottle of this medicine. After taking it I felt much better; the pain was less severe and I felt brighter.

"I continued with it, and soon my appetite returned and I gained strength. By and by I felt as well and as strong as ever I was in my life; and have since that time kept in good health. You can make any use you like of this statement and refer any one to me. (Signed) William Hine, Inglethrope, Newtown, Trowbridge, February 10th, 1897."

How I should envy standing before an audience of as many people as could hear my voice and, with Mr. Hine's letter as a text, preach a lay sermon on the facts mentioned in it. It ought to be gone over sentence by sentence, point by point. I should take up his case at the time his health began to give way, follow him down the steps into the valley of disease and weakness, and emerge with him on the Delectable Mountains of renewed life and strength.

But, in the absence of such a comment, I ask you, I urge you to re read the letter; once, twice, half a dozen times. For here we have a typical instance of what is happening to the people, and a proof of what can be done to save them. We see that a victorious battle can be made for life and health in the face of doubt and discouragement, and after the failure of approved medical treatment.

Behind all the thick coming troubles which afflicted our friend, Mr. Hine (and the cause of them all), was the prevailing, dangerous, and deadly disease, dyspepsia. How he was delivered he tells us. Remember it when you come to have to make your fight.

Disease is always a calamity. Thank Heaven, we can often crush it with Mother Seigel's Syrup as St. George slew the Dragon with his club.

COULD DO NO WORK.

"Large sores broke out on my body, head and limbs, and also on my hands, so that I could not do any work, and my hair came out. My trouble was called eczema. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken several bottles the sores and itching disappeared and I was cured." Mrs. J. G. Brown, Brantford, Ont.

Rats In Siam.

The writer was astonished on visiting the house of the inhabitants of Siam (says a traveler) to see a huge rat walking quietly around the room and crawling up the master's legs in a cool, familiar manner. Instead of repulsing it or giving an alarm he took it up in his hand and caressed it and then we learned for the first time, to our utter astonishment, that it was a custom in Bangkok to keep pet rats. These are taken very young and carefully reared until they attain a monstrous size from good and plentiful feeding.

Free Medical Treatment for Weak Men

Who Are Willing to Pay When Convinced of Cure.

A scientific combined medical and mechanical cure has been discovered for "Weakness of Men." Its success has been so startling that the proprietors now announce that they will send it on trial—remedies and appliance—without advance payment—to any honest man.

If not all that is claimed—all you wish—send it back—that ends it—pay nothing!

No such offer was ever made in good faith before; we believe no other remedy would stand such a test.

This combined treatment cures quickly, thoroughly and forever all effects of early evil habits, later excesses, overwork, worry, etc. It creates health, strength, vitality, sustaining powers and restores weak and undeveloped portions to natural dimensions and functions.

Any man writing in earnest will receive description, particulars and references in a plain sealed envelope. Professional confidence. No deception nor imposition of any nature. A national reputation backs this offer. (Cut out and send this notice, or mention paper.) Address

A FAMOUS MULBERRY TREE.

Planted by Milton In Christ's College Gardens, Cambridge.

In the gardens of Christ's college, Cambridge, stands a venerable mulberry tree, which, tradition says, was planted by Milton during the time when he was a student at the university. This would be between the years 1624 and 1632, for the following copy, from the Latin of his entry of admission, accurately fixes the former date, and his admission to the degree of M. A., to which he proceeded in the latter year, ended his intimate connection with the university: "John Milton, native of London, son of John Milton, was initiated in the elements of letters under Mr. Gill, master of St. Paul's school; was admitted a lesser pensioner Feb. 12, 1624, under Mr. Chappell and paid entrance fee, 10s." He was then 16 years and 2 months old.

The tree so intimately associated with his name is now much decayed, but in order to preserve it as much as possible from the ravages of time many of the branches have been covered with sheet lead and are further supported by stout wooden props, while the trunk has been buried in a mound of earth. The luxuriance of the foliage and the crop of fruit which it annually bears are proof of its vitality, but to insure against accidents and perpetuate the tree an offshoot has been planted close by. In the event of a bough breaking and falling it is divided with even justice among the fellows of the college, and many pieces are thus preserved as mementos of the poet. It was during his residence at Cambridge that he composed his ode, "On the Morning of Christ's Nativity." "Lycidas," too, is intimately connected with Milton's life at the university, since it was written in memory of Edward King, his college friend and contemporary, with whom he doubtless shared the same rooms.

In those days students did not, as now, occupy separate apartments, as witness the original statutes of the college, "In which chambers our wish is that the fellows sleep two and two, but the scholars four and four," in consequence of which a much closer intimacy was formed among them than is now possible. Dr. Johnson relates that Milton was flogged at Cambridge, but the fact is doubtful, though there is reason to suppose that he had differences with the authorities in the earlier part of his college career, since he was transferred from his original tutor. This tree is still pointed out to visitors and was until recent years especially marked by a bough of mistletoe growing upon it.—Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper.

Poet and Queen.

Dr. Max Muller relates that the late queen of Holland frequently came to England and was fond of meeting while there distinguished literary people. On one occasion she lunched with Dean Stanley and asked him to invite several literary men, among whom were Tennyson, Lord Houghton, Huxley and Max Muller himself.

Luncheon was ready, and everybody had come to the deanery except Tennyson. Dean Stanley suggested that the party should wait no longer, but the queen refused to sit down before the laureate's arrival. There was another period of waiting, painful to all the company.

Finally some one suggested that probably Tennyson was "mooning about in the cloisters somewhere." One was sent to see, and the poet was indeed found there, apparently oblivious that anything was going on. He was brought in and placed at the table next the queen of the Netherlands.

The queen took the conversation into her own hands and in particular tried to draw Tennyson out. He was not in talking mood. She addressed him a question.

"Yes, ma'am," he answered.

Then there was another question.

"No, ma'am," came from Tennyson.

Again she asked his opinion about something. The question was not susceptible of answer by "Yes" or "No."

"Ma'am," said Tennyson after a great effort, "there is a great deal to be said on both sides of the question."

Presently he turned and whispered to Max Muller, "I wish they had put some of you talking fellows next to regina."

Anglo-Saxon Common Sense.

I had occasion at Coolgardie to be present at a public meeting gathered to protest strongly against the actions of the Western Australian government with regard to the mining population and the insufficiency of its political representation. Several speakers held forth. One declared that he was neither democrat nor socialist, another that he was a democrat, but not a socialist; a third at last professed himself a socialist. Sometimes groans, sometimes applause, underlined certain phrases, but in the midst of these gold miners, in this town but three years old, in spite of the relaxing influence of a torrid heat, the most perfect order reigned throughout. Thanks were voted at the end of the meeting to all the speakers without distinction of opinion, a motion of protest was adopted, and the crowd retired in the greatest tranquillity. I thought, not without shame, of the manner in which meetings of this kind are often conducted in France.—"Les Nouvel' Societes Anglo-Saxonnes," Pierre Le

HIS BUSY DAY.

It Is Easier to Forget Some Things Than to Remember Them.

The business man was very much occupied when one of his acquaintances came in.

"I want to ask you"— began the caller, but the other, without looking up, waved one hand back of him and reduced the friend to silence. After waiting half a minute the visitor tried again.

"I won't take much of your time," he said. "This is something too important to be neglected or I'd go away and come again."

"I suppose there's no use of my trying to get through with this before dark anyhow," was the rejoinder, with a sigh.

"I'm sorry it's necessary to interrupt you."

"Oh, it's all right. When I come to think of it, I wouldn't know whether I had the right answer when I got through."

"You could easily have the bookkeeper verify it, couldn't you?"

"No. I tried the bookkeeper on it. He didn't know any more about it than I did."

"Isn't it anything connected with business?"

"No. If it were, I'd be comparatively serene. Business isn't the only thing in life."

"It's a great deal of it, though."

The calculator rang for the office boy, and when he appeared said, "Thomas, you take this $2 bill and buy me as many works on arithmetic as you can for it." Then turning to his friend with the air of a cross questioner he said:

"Why do men engage in business?"

"To make money."

"And what do we want with money? We want independence and respect. We want to feel that we can hold up our heads in the world and not be obliged to face humiliation. The purposes of this calculation, distant from business though they may be, are the same. I have a boy who has done well in his studies and who does me the honor to ask my advice every once in awhile. Most boys don't do that. They think it's impossible for their fathers to know very much owing to the misfortune they labored under in not having the same schoolteachers. This boy of mine remarked yesterday that he was going to take up cube root today. Have you tried to extract any cube roots since you left school?"

The caller answered in the negative.

"Then you don't know how much you have forgotten. It's a heap easier to learn to extract a cube root in the first place than it is to remember it again after you have got out of practice. But I'm going to keep at it. Tonight he'll come home with some examples to do and Napoleon when he started for St. Helena didn't feel a bit worse than I will if I have to lay down my lead pencil and paper and own up that I can't do them."—Detroit Free Press.

250,000 CURED.

Thousands of young men are made nervous wrecks, unfit for business, social pleasures or home duties by evil habits in youth, later excesses, or private diseases. W. C. Andrews, of Akron, O., says: "I read this paper and have seen many reports of remarkable cures made by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan. I decided to treat with them. Indiscretion was the cause of my trouble. I was weak and nervous; no ambition; back weak pimples on the face; thin and haggard; eyes sunken and cheeks hollow; dreams and drains at night; memory poor; varicocele and weak parts; irritable; sinking spells; specks before the eyes; lack of confidence; no energy; and many other complaints. I had tried fourteen doctors, bought four electric belts took scores of bottles of patent medicines—all failed. I tried the New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, and it cured me. I am a Man Again. I have gained twenty-six pounds and am strong mentally, physically and sexually. It is a wonderful treatment."

Blood Disease—with the worst symptoms: Ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, blotches, eruptions, hair fallen out, bone pains, eyes red, stomach troubles, sore throat, etc., positively cured forever. You dare not marry until cured. Cures guaranteed or no pay.

SERVANTS' LIVERIES.

They Had Their Origin During the Reign of King Pepin of France.

So far as the present writer is aware, the earliest mention of "liveries" made in history was during the reign of King Pepin of France, who flourished about the year 750 A. D.

A form of amusement to which King Pepin was partial was what were termed cours plenieres. These were assemblies at which, upon the king's invitation, all the lords and courtiers of France were expected to be present. They were held twice in each year—at Christmas and Easter—and generally lasted for about a week at each time. Sometimes these gatherings took place at the king's palace, sometimes in the neighborhood of one of the larger French cities and sometimes in some rural district. While the festival lasted the king took all his meals in public, bishops and dukes alone being privileged to sit at the royal table. A second table was provided for abbots, counts and other leading men, and at both tables there was shown more profusion than delicacy, both in the quality of the meats and drinks and the manner in which they were served. Flutes, hautboys and other musical instruments were played before the bearers of each course as it was removed from the tables. When dessert was served, 20 heralds, each holding aloft a jeweled goblet, shouted thrice, "Largesse, largesse from the most potent of kings!" As they shouted they scattered among the crowds handfuls of gold and silver coins. Then the trumpets were blown, while the better class spectators shouted and the meaner sort scrambled and often fought vigorously for the money scattered by the heralds.

Charles VII of France put a final stop to the cours plenieres, alleging that the expense attendant upon his wars with England made it impossible for him to continue them. One of the severest causes of expense, it was explained, arose from the fact that, beginning with King Pepin's time, etiquette and custom alike demanded that the king should upon those occasions give an entire suit of new and gorgeous clothing not only to his own servants and retainers, but also to those of the queen and all the princes of the blood royal. These garments were said to be livres—that is, "delivered" at the king's expense—and from this word the English word "livery" was derived, as was the custom of providing servants with "livery," from the above mentioned practice of certain of the French kings.—London Society.

AMERICAN HEIRESS IN PARIS.

Impecunious Titled Parisians Drew Lots to Decide Who Should Marry Her.

Lilian Bell, in a letter from Paris to The Ladies' Home Journal, writes that the most shameless thing in all Europe is the marriage question, and proceeds to narrate the experiences of a rich American girl who came to Paris with letters to friends. On account of her wealth she was invited everywhere by mothers of marriageable sons, but being unable to speak French was not much of a success. She went to a convent to learn French, and was shown much attention by the Duchesse de Z——, who was determined that her son should marry her. "Suddenly, to the amazement of everybody, the heiress sailed for America without a word of warning. The duchesse was furious. 'You must follow her,' she said to her son. 'We cannot let so much money escape.' The son said he would be hanged if he went to America or if he would marry such a monkey, and as for her money, she could go anywhere she pleased with it, or words to that effect. So that ended the affair of the Marquis de G——.

"When the other impecunious young nobles heard that the duchesse no longer had any claims upon the American's money, they got together and said: 'Somebody must marry her and divide with the rest. We can't all marry her, but we can all have a share from whoever does. Now we will draw lots to see who must go to America and marry her.' The lot fell to the Baron de X——, but he had no money for the journey. So all the others raised what money they could and loaned it to him, and took his notes for it, with enormous interest, payable after his marriage. He sailed away, and within eight months he had married her, but he has not paid those notes. His wife won't give him the money!"

Austrian Christmas Customs.

In Austria they are particularly thoughtful of the bringer of the gifts and joy. The people place lighted candles in their windows, that the Christ child, in passing through the city or village or along the country road, shall not stumble or fall.

A belief in the special presence of evil spirits during Christmastide and in their efforts to interfere with and lessen the joys of the season prevails throughout Europe.

The bugbear "ruprecht," under different names and in numerous varying disguises and in strange antics, plays a conspicuous part among the Germans and surrounding peoples. In Tyrol the terrible "klaubauf" accompanies St. Nicholas, and is continually hovering about his path ready to kidnap naughty children.

In Austria this monster is very terrible in appearance, going about with clanking chains and hideous devil's mask. He is frequently heard at night as he flies through the air, and his rattling chains are giving notice of his presence.

In many places there is the belief that wolves roam the earth on the night before Christmas and create great havoc in destroying vines and other property and even human beings. This belief has made an excuse for a means of mischievous frolic. Men and boys frequently disguise themselves as wolves and go about frightening the people.—Chicago Times-Herald.

He Had Forgotten.

Sir W. R. Hamilton, the great mathematician, had a very promising boy whom he reared with true parental triumph, so Aubrey de Vere tells us. When he was going to bed one night, his father said to him: "Tomorrow Aubrey de Vere will be here. Shall you not be glad to see him?" He mused for some time and then made reply remorsely, "Thinking of Latin, and thinking of trouble, and thinking of God, I had forgotten Aubrey de Vere."—San Francisco Argonaut.

An Appreciable Difference.

"The chief difference between the man with a lot of new made money and the gentle zephyr," said the corn fed philosopher, "is that the gentle zephyr blows itself quietly."—Indianapolis Journal.

In 1680 the Duchesse de Fontanges had the misfortune to have her hat blown off at a hunting party, and she tied her hair with one of her ribbon garters. Hairdressing with ribbons remained a fashion for seven years.

THE EMPEROR WORSTED.

A Plucky Little Hungarian Girl Got Revenge For Sadowa.

The present kaiser would probably not admit that he had often been thwarted in any of his plans, but an anecdote has recently become known which shows that he at least once "got the worst of it," and it is all the more piquant from the fact that he was defeated by a girl.

When the kaiser, who was then Prince Wilhelm, was about 10 years old, he and Prince Heinrich spent some time at Cassel with their tutors, who sometimes allowed the little princes to play with other children. One day when several of them were gathered together it chanced that a little French girl was among the number, and the young Germans conceived the brilliant idea of making her a representative of the country they all so cordially hated. The delightful plan was immediately put into execution, and the poor child was tied to a tree. Then began a fusillade of pine cones, sticks, etc., and whenever anything struck her there was a cry of "Here's for Sedan!" This went on for a few minutes, when a little Hungarian girl, Helena von D——, who was watching, could bear the injustice no longer, and, singling out Prince Wilhelm as chief offender, she threw herself on him. The attack being unexpected, he was completely taken by surprise and fell down, whereupon she began to pound him, crying out at each blow, "Here's for Sadowa!"

The prince was fast getting the worst of it, for his little adversary was thoroughly in earnest, when the imperial tutors, hearing the noise, rushed up and separated the combatants. After that the princes were more carefully watched, and Wilhelm had no opportunity to "get even" with the little champion of justice. Some days afterward, hearing that the princes were leaving, Helena went down to the gate to see them go by. As they passed Wilhelm spied his foe, and leaning out behind his tutor he stuck out his tongue.

Helena was the daughter of titled parents, and later she was married to an Englishman. When the kaiser was in London, she told this story to one of his gentlemen in waiting, who in turn repeated it to his majesty. The latter exclaimed: "Is that devil of a girl here now? I would like to see her." A meeting was arranged, but Helena became ill, and so they never met after that one encounter to make friends or renew hostilities.—New York Tribune.

A SAVAGE CRITICISM.

The Teacher's Artistic Cleverness Received a Hard and Cruel Blow.

In one of the Cleveland public schoolrooms of the primary grade the teacher has been reading Longfellow's "Hiawatha" to her pupils. Of course this is a rather ambitious work for the little ones, says The Plain Dealer, but they enjoy it, and the rhythm seems particularly pleasing to them. When they come to a hard word, the teacher goes to the blackboard and draws a picture to illustrate its meaning. This the pupils find highly entertaining, and it helps in quite a remarkable way to fix the text in their minds.

A few days ago they came to this line in the early part of the poem:

At the door on summer evenings sat the little Hiawatha.

"At—th' door on sum-mer eve-nings sat th' lit-tle"—read the children.

"Go on," said the teacher.

But they couldn't go on. The name of Hiawatha was too much for them. They knew who Hiawatha was, but they didn't recognize his name. So the teacher went to the board and took considerable pains in drawing:

First.—A wigwam with poles sticking up above it, and a rude aboriginal drawing above it, and a rude aboriginal painting on the side.

Second.—Little Hiawatha, with feathers in his hair, squatted at the wigwam door.

Third.—A fine harvest moon.

Then she pointed at Hiawatha and asked what it was.

There was a general craning of necks and shaking of heads.

"Come, come," said the teacher, "you know what that is."

Then one little girl spoke up:

"I guess it's a mud turtle."

And instantly, with one accord, the class glibly repeated:

"At th' door on sum-mer eve-nings sat th' lit-tle mud-dy tur tle."

And the teacher feels that her artistic cleverness received a hard and cruel blow.

Stylish Evening Bodice.

The simplest and perhaps the most fashionable bodice for evening wear, says a New York fashion authority, is the full blouse shape of chiffon, drooping over a fitted silk lining, the top cut out in square or rounding fashion, with a full tulle ruche, a narrow band of fur, a fall of lace or beaded revers to finish the edge. The sleeves consist of short, full puffs similarly trimmed. This is a basis for any kind of flower trimming that taste suggests. Rows of shaded pink roses devoid of foliage are in great use on evening gowns this winter, as are maidenhair fern and lilac sprays, laid upon strands of pink or orange satin ribbon not more than an inch and a half wide.

In a Chicago Art Gallery.

"It seems to me the perspective in this picture is faulty."

"The—er—what?"

"The perspective."

"Oh, yes, that part of it is very ugly. It's laid on too thick, and you can buy better frames than that one for $6 a dozen."—Chicago Tribune.

A Bad Bargain.

"Jane, did you break the china plate?"

"Yes'm. You got fooled on that plate, mum. It's a weak un. It broke the fourth time I dropped it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dr. Williams Pink Pills

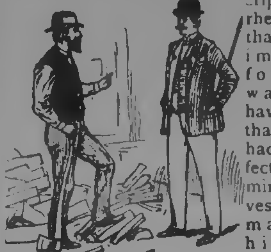
Make Rich, Red, Energy-giving Blood.

THROUGH THEIR USE THOUSANDS OF WEAK MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN HAVE BEEN MADE STRONG

A VICTIM OF RHEUMATISM.

From the Prescott Journal.

There is no man in the Township of Edwardsburg who is better known than Mr. John Sherman. He is one of the many Canadians who at the outbreak of the American rebellion joined the army of the North, and to the exposure and hardships which he endured during that trying and perilous time does he owe long years of suffering which he has since undergone. The writer remembers seeing Mr. Sherman a few years ago when he was so crippled with rheumatism that it was impossible for him to walk, and having heard that a cure had been effected, determined to investigate the matter for himself.



When the reporter called at Mr. Sherman's home he found him in the yard handling an axe and chopping wood like a young man. "I have suffered with rheumatism for twenty years," said Mr. Sherman, "and I have doctored with four different doctors, and yet I kept getting worse and worse. I was bent double with the pain in my back and both legs were so drawn up that I was unable to straighten them, and for four months when I wanted to move about I had to do so on my hands and knees. I tried many medicines but got no benefit, and I had given up all hope of being able to walk again. One of my sons tried to persuade me to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but I refused to take any more medicine. At last one day my son brought home three boxes of the pills, and after they had been in the house over two weeks, I at last consented to take them, but not because I thought they would do me any good. Before they were gone, however, I could feel that my back was getting stronger and I could straighten up. It required no further persuasion to get me to take the pills, and from that time on I began to get better, until now with the aid of a light cane, I can walk all over the farm, get in and out of a buggy, and do most of the chores round the house and barns. I feel twenty years younger, and I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the most wonderful medicine for rheumatism in the whole world. I began them only to please my son and it was a most agreeable surprise to me when I found my legs limber, and my back gaining new strength. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to the suffering rheumatics of the world."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills CURE

Rheumatism, Sciatica, Locomotor Ataxia, Anaemia, Heart Troubles, Indigestion and Dyspepsia, St. Vitus' Dance, Paralysis, Incipent Consumption, All Female Weakness, Dizziness and Headache, and all Troubles arising from Poor and Watery Blood. . . . , . . .

GENERAL WEAKNESS CURED.

Mr. Jas. Canavan is a well know resident of Maxville, Ont. He suffered for a long time from general weakness, approaching an almost collapse. A friend advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and a judicious course restored his health. Mr. Canavan says :—"After having used your Pink Pills I am glad to recommend them to the world as a cure for extreme weakness and debility, and I am sure that if those who feel the first approach of such trouble will only take a box or two, misery may be averted."

A WEAK HEART

Mr. Joseph Becktad, Martintown, Ont. says :—"About thirteen years ago I suffered from an attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which left me with a very weak heart. I doctored, but did not appear to get any relief. About two years ago I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after using them for some time I felt better than I had done for years. I have had no return of the trouble, and feel safe in saying that my cure is permanent. I can heartily recommend this medicine to those who are similarly suffering."

Spring Medicine

In the Springtime the blood needs attention. The change of the year produces in every one, whether conscious of it or not, some little heating of the blood Some people have pimples, a little eczema, or irritation of the skin ; others feel weary, easily tired and have a poor appetite Purgatives are not the right cure. The best of all Spring medicines for man, women or child is

Dr. Williams Pink Pills

They cure, not by weakening the system as purgatives do, but by giving it strength. They are a Tonic—the best tonic in the world—and cannot harm the most delicate. They make people feel bright, active and strong.

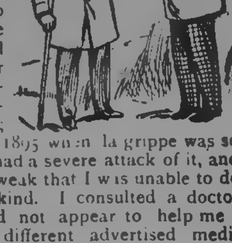
SUBJECT TO SINKING SPELLS.

From the Cookshire, Que., Chronicle.

Mr Newell Waldron is a well known farmer living near East Clifton, Que. As his friends and neighbors know, he passed through a very trying illness as the result of a severe attack of la grippe and when a correspondent of the Chronicle called upon him, he had no hesitation in giving the particulars of his illness and cure. Mr. Waldron said, "I believe I owe my life to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I am glad to have a chance to say a good word in favor of that reliable medicine. During the winter of 1895 when la grippe was so prevalent, I had a severe attack of it, and it left me so weak that I was unable to do work of any kind. I consulted a doctor but as he did not appear to help me I began using different advertised medicines, but the result was the same. I got no benefit, but on the contrary was growing weaker. At times I was subject to sinking spells, which verged upon total unconsciousness. I was failing day by day and was becoming hopeless. A neighbor who called to see me urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I sent for a few boxes. After using them for a couple of weeks I began to gain steadily. I am now as well as any man, and can do as good a day's work as ever I did. I know that my cure is due to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I am always glad to recommend them.



CRIPPLED WITH RHEUMATISM.

Mr. Alpheus Mott, an esteemed resident of Morewood, Ont., says :—"For some years past I have suffered horribly with rheumatism. At times I was so bad that I was almost wholly deprived of the use of my legs, and could only go about with great difficulty. I had to give up farming entirely, and removed to Brockville where I had the best of medical advice but with no good results. I also tried many remedies said to be a cure for rheumatism, but with no better results. Some of my friends urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to do so, and somewhat to my surprise I found they were doing me a great deal of good. I then moved to Morewood, where I still continued the use of the Pills, steadily gaining in health and strength, until I could abandon the use of the cane, without the aid of which I could not move about. Every ache and pain left me, and only those who have suffered the terrible pangs of rheumatism can understand the joy I feel at what Dr Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. I earnestly urge their use on all who are similarly afflicted.

Mr. Jas. Gage Brookdale, Que., says :—"We have always found Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a good family medicine, and think they should be kept in every home."

A WOMAN THE STAKE.

SHE WAS PLAYED AGAINST $50,000 IN A GAME OF ECARTE.

Though the Kentuckian Won at the Game, He Was Beaten In Another Way—Strange Story of an Old, Gruesome Looking House In San Francisco.

In 1867 there stood an old fashioned shanty east of the locality now occupied by the Presentation convent, in front of the graveyard, and the people in the neighborhood used to tell strange stories about this gruesome looking dwelling. For several years its occupancy was apparently confined to a decrepit old man, who used to crawl in and out about once a day, his arms filled with packages from the market.

He was known in the neighborhood as the old dago, though in reality he was a native of Alsace. For several years he lived a hermit's life, and the neighbors got so accustomed to his comings and goings that even the small boys forgot to molest him. But one morning all the gossips found food for conversation by the appearance of a remarkably lovely young woman who went out to and returned from the butcher's stall and the grocer's. She spoke English imperfectly and with a very pronounced French accent. This little cabin was destined to be the scene of a very dramatic incident in the history of California gambling.

It was natural that a girl as pretty as Irene should not be long without admirers, so it came to pass that the windows of the old house were lighted up every evening, and the Frenchman developed the natural hospitality of his race and gave little dinners and suppers to his exiled countrymen. But among those, as was only natural, there were some who existed not by honest industry, but by the gaming table. Among them was a young man of striking appearance who had served in France as sous officier in a hussar regiment, had gone the pace, ruined himself; and finally drifted out to San Francisco, where he became the hanger on of the gambling table.

Louis Le Marronais was a strikingly handsome specimen of the Parisian of his class. It did not take him very long to gain the confidence of the old Frenchman, and to him he confided the story of his life. It was not a very eventful one. He was a member of an old French family and could use if he pleased a title which dated back to Charles the Bold. He had been ruined by the extravagance of his younger brother and was then living on the income of a little property in Brittany, which he had saved from the wreck. Irene was his only child, and he idolized her. For her sake alone he wanted to be rich. He wanted to take her back to France and reinstate her in the position to which her rank entitled her.

The ex-hussar won the old man into the belief that his only chance of getting rich was through gambling. So night after night old Lescant was found at the El Dorado or some other gaming hell losing his money under the direction of the arch mentor. One night Irene followed him there to bring him back, and her first visit was a fateful one. Tom Monroe, a Kentuckian, one of the wildest and most reckless characters of that period, saw her, admired her and swore that she should become his property.

It is not necessary to recite the incidents that led up to the scene, which were related to me by an eyewitness. It is sufficient to say that Le Marronais had convinced the old Frenchman that Monroe would stake $50,000 against the hand of Irene. If he won, she was to become his wife, but if he lost the money was to become the Frenchman's property and Irene was free to bestow her affections wherever she pleased. Irene was informed of this proposition, and she looked resigned and rather amused at the transaction.

The eventful night arrived. Monroe, the old man, Louis, Irene and a friend and countryman of the host were the only inmates of the little room. The game was ecarte, and the cards, which Louis had marked, lay upon the table. The old man got the deal. Monroe's certified check for $50,000 was placed in the custody of the hussar. The old man marked the king in the first deal, and when the pack changed hands he had the best of the game. The play went on, and in the last hand Monroe scored every point.

"Irene is mine!" shouted the Kentuckian, reaching for his check.

At this moment the lights were dashed out, and Monroe fell to the floor from the stroke of some heavy instrument. The only disinterested spectator of the scene fled from the room. The next morning there was no sign of life in the old house, and in the evening when the milkman knocked he heard a groaning from the inside. He forced his way into the house and discovered the wretched Kentuckian bound hand and foot. Monroe, avowing murder, rushed the next morning to the banking house. The check had been cashed by an individual who answered the description of the hussar. The other actors in this startling scene were never heard of. Nothing in the house was disturbed, not even the girl's wearing apparel, and the incident became a portion of this strange history of old time gambling in San Francisco.—San Francisco News Letter.

One More Idiot.

Tobacconist—If you'll keep quiet about it, I'll tell you how I manage to make money out of cigars. When a man comes in and asks me for a good cigar, I invariably recommend that brand that costs me the least. It is a great scheme.

Customer—That's so. What idiots they must all be! By the way, I want you to recommend a good cigar to me.

Tobacconist—Well, confidentially I advise you to take one of these. (Customer goes out.) Only one more idiot; that's all.—Boston Transcript.

CONCRETE WALKS FOR GEORGE STREET

The Question Discussed at Last Night's Council Meeting

The Street and Bridge Committee to Visit Belleville, Napanee and Other Towns and Inform Themselves as to Cost, Etc

The Town Council met in Committee of the Whole in the town clerk's office last night.

There were present, Mayor Davis, in the chair, and Councillors McWilliams, Dawson, Denne, Robertson, Best, Allen, W. H. White, Langford and Hamilton.

The Mayor said the object of the meeting was to take into consideration the advisibility of making a grant to the committee of the Bicycle Club who have in charge the Provincial C.W.A. Meet to be held here on Dominion Day. A number of ratepayers had spoken to him in reference to the matter and all seemed favorable to a grant being made. The committee in charge would be required to expend at least $2,000, and as the Meet would undoubtedly attract a large number of visitors to town he thought the Council should certainly treat the bicycle people liberally.

GRANT TO BICYCLE CLUB.

Moved by Councillor Dawson, seconded by Councillor Allen, that a grant of $300 be made to the Bicycle Club to be used in connection with the C.W.A. Provincial meet to be held here on Dominion Day.

Councillor Hamilton said that last year the Council had offered $400 and that amount should not be reduced. He believed, considering the advantages to be derived that $400 was little enough.

Councillor Dawson thought the finances of the town would not stand any larger grant than $300 and he was opposed to increasing that amount. Times were hard and he thought this sufficient recognition.

Moved in amendment by Councillor Hamilton that the grant be increased to $400.

Councillor McWilliams, from views he had heard expressed by the ratepayers, thought that $300 cash and use of the town lumber was quite sufficient. The use of the lumber was equal to $100.

The Mayor believed that $300 was the limit. That amount would suit the ratepayers and the council should not go beyond their wishes.

Councillor Langford was in favor of a guarantee of $500 in case that the Bicycle Club met with loss through unfavorable weather.

Mr. Best viewed the matter in the light of a straight grant in preference to a guarantee.

The motion was then put and carried unanimously.

CONCRETE WALKS.

The next matter taken up was the question of permanent improvements.

Town Engineer Belcher presented specifications of the works required to be done in the construction of ten-foot concrete sidewalks with kerbing for the three blocks on George street between Brock and Charlotte streets.

In answer to a question Mr. Belcher said that the work would cost $2 per foot or $1,600, for each block.

After an informal discussion of the pros and cons it was Moved by Councillor McWilliams, seconded by Councillor Hamilton, that Mr. Belcher be instructed to prepare plans for a five-foot concrete sidewalk on both sides of Water street between Brock and Murray streets, and that tenders be asked for construction of that block and a ten-foot concrete sidewalk on George street between Simcoe and Hunter streets.

Councillor McWilliams explained that if this work was done it would serve as an object lesson to the ratepayers and enable them to vote intelligently when a money by-law for permanent improvements was submitted.

Councillor Langford said that he could not support the motion as it would mean an expenditure, according to Mr. Belcher, the town engineer, of $1,200, on Water street, which would be manifestly unfair to other localities.

A general discussion took place in which the concensus of opinion was in favor of a committee visiting towns with permanent improvements and enquiring into the methods of construction, cost, etc., and profiting by the experience of such municipalities.

Councillor McWilliams concurred in the opinion and withdrew his motion when it was Moved by Councillor Langford, seconded by Councillor White, that the Street and Bridge Committee and the Mayor be a deputation to visit Belleville, Napanee and other places, and enquire into the methods of construction, payments, etc., of the permanent sidewalks in those towns.—Carried.

The Mayor thought it was a disgrace to the town that this matter of permanent improvements should be shelved from year to year.

The question should be dallied with no longer. Other towns were ahead of us in this respect and the matter should be settled now—once for all.

Councillor Best differed with the Mayor. The towns referred to by the Mayor had permanent sidewalks but no sewerage systems. Peterborough, he claimed, had made a proper start with its permanent improvements. Our sewerage system would soon be completed and then permanent sidewalks would follow.

Wednesday of next week was fixed as the date for the committee to start out on its tour of investigation.

AUBURN POWER CO.

Councillor Denne drew the attention of the Council to the condition of the streets where the Auburn Power Co's posts had been erected. In some places banks of earth had been left on the sides of the street and in others the soil around the posts had sank, leaving cavities that were a source of danger to the public.

Moved by Councillor Dawson, seconded by Councillor McWilliams that the Auburn Power Co. be instructed to have those streets which have been rendered dangerous through occupation by their poles restored to their normal condition.—Carried.

MARKET SCALES.

Councillor Denne presented an account for testing the market scales. It amounted to $7.65, and was ordered to be paid.

On motion of Councillor Robertson, seconded by Councillor Langford, the Property Committee were authorized to accept the tender of the Peterborough Hardware Co. for market scales.

The Council then adjourned.

STR. ECLIPSE HAS TROUBLE

With a Cargo of Live Stock Other River and Lake Notes

Captain C. W. Calcutt, of the str. Eclipse, arrived from Harwood Thursday night with a scow load of cattle and hogs for H. P. Kennedy. The steamer had quite a thrilling experience. The cattle broke down the partition which separated them from the the pigs and drove a number of them overboard. After they were fished out one was so exhausted that it was found necessary to kill it. The steamer returned down the river yesterday morning to bring up the booms and pier for Hales' bridge. She will return to Peterborough to-day with an excursion from Alnwick and Hamilton, will arrive in Peterborough at 10 a. m., and will return down the river at 4 p. m.

Mr. Calcutt has received several communications from United States parties who wish to come to Canada to spend the summer on account of the war.

The Eclipse has already made arrangements for several excursions from the Eastern part of the Lake to Jubilee Point. Arrangements are being made for the Farmers' picnic, which will be held in June.

The steamer Golden City is being overhauled preparatory to taking a dip into the water.

Mr. P. P. Young is having his staunch and tidy steamer Majestic repainted and she will soon be seen gliding swiftly o'er the waters of the back lakes. She will be engaged this week at towing logs from Deer Bay after which she will then haul wood to Lakefield. She will also be in charge of the same crew, Capt. Scollard, Ed. and Jerry.

OTTAWA THEIR CHOICE

The 57th Voted Almost Unanimously in Favor of Ottawa Last Night

At last night's drill, as predicted in yesterday's Times, the members of the 57th Batt. voted almost unanimously in favor of Ottawa as the objective point of their annual outing on the 24th of May. Kingston had very few supporters owing, no doubt, to the fact that only a few years have elapsed since the battalion paid that city a visit.

Major Edwards took the vote in the absence of Lieut.-Col. Bell.

The parade was not very largely attended owing to the unfavorable weather.

From now until the 24th of May there will be company and battalion drill every Tuesday and Friday nights, and every man will be expected to be on hand in order that a good showing may be made at Ottawa.

ANKLE DEEP IN PAIN.

Sinking in Rheumatic Mire—South American Rheumatic Cure was the Saving Strong Arm.

W. F. Beggs, Vancouver, B. C., says: "Five years ago I was afflicted with a very acute form of rheumatism causing a great pain in my ankles and feet. I tried everything I could read or hear of, and consulted many physicians, and a Toronto specialist, without receiving any benefit. I was induced to try South American Rheumatic Cure. The first dose gave me relief the first bottle greatly helped—and two bottles brought me a complete cure."

Preparatory Services

Services preparatory to communion were held in St. Paul's church last night. Rev. J. G. Potter of St. Andrew's conducted the services, which were well attended.

Pages from the Diary of Capt. John W. Moore, Newbury, Ind.

Jan. 9.
"Our little boy, who has suffered for six years with lameness in his hip, continues to grow worse, although we have applied many kinds of liniments. The family doctor has decided that the boy has hip joint disease, and he urges us not to meddle with the case, saying it is best to allow it to take its own course. We feel very anxious about him. I wish we could find something which would effect a cure. I fear it will develop into a very serious affair." J. W. MOORE.

March 22.
"A sore has broken out on the under side of my boy's hip, and it has discharged very freely and left an opening about an inch deep, the size of a silver dollar. He has to be given constant attention. Our physician tells us to keep the sore running. A second sore has appeared on his groin and broken. The boy is very low. I asked the doctor about giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has cured so many such cases, but he said he could give him medicine that is four times better and does not cost as much." J. W. MOORE.

May 10.
"The doctor's medicine which I have been giving our boy has not proved of any avail. The child continued to grow worse and I have stopped giving it to him, and now he is taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. I got a bottle from the druggist a few days ago and I believe I can see that the boy is improving under the treatment." J. W. MOORE.

Oct. 5.
"How glad I am that I ever tried Hood's Sarsaparilla for my boy's hip disease. When he had finished taking the first bottle he looked fifty per cent better. I continued giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and now he is quite well. He runs and plays with the other children and we can hardly believe he is the same child, thanks to Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we have proved to be indeed the One True Blood Purifier." J. W. MOORE.

Pages like those above are penned in the personal records of thousands of people.

In the memories of many more the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is indelibly imprinted. The cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla are literally written in blood—in blood made pure, enriched and vitalized, cured of scrofulous taints, salt rheum, boils, pimples, spring humors—in blood which properly builds up the nerves, strengthens the stomach and gives that tonic to the system so imperatively needed in the Spring.

To say that we've started to be busy in Millinery hardly expresses the idea of the big rush of past days—so far trade is doubling up on last year, and though our staff of trimmers and saleswomen has been increased, we think it necessary to warn those who intend to order an Easter Hat or Bonnet here, that it will be the part of wisdom to see to the matter at once—this week if possible.

SPANISH WARSHIP ALPHONSO XII SUNK BY UNITED STATES' FLEET

Report in Circulation at Key West to this Effect

SPANISH STEAMER TAKEN

Volunteer Army Bill Calls for 100,000 Men to Serve one Year

Escape of Woodford from Spain Exciting Demonstrations at the Railway Stations Where the Train Passed Through Soldiers Compelled to Draw Their Swords to Prevent the Crowds from Mobbing the United States Contingent Sailing of the North Atlantic Squadron at Daybreak from Key West

(Special to the Times.)

Key West, Fla., April 22.—It is reported that the Spanish cruiser Alfonso XII. has been sunk by Sampson's fleet.

Washington, April 22.—The Spanish vessel Gracia, which was loaded at Pensacola with supplies for the Spanish forces in Cuba, is supposed to have been captured by vessels of the North Atlantic squadron.

FIRST ACT OF WAR.

Key West, April 22.—11 a.m.—The whole Island is in a frantic state of excitement over a report brought here a few minutes ago by a small craft to the effect that the fleet had made its first capture in the shape of a Spanish freight steamer. Thousands of citizens and soldiers are flocking to the docks to welcome the victors and the prisoners. Captain Wheeler states that the capture was effected without any resistance or attempt to escape. The name of the captured vessel is given as the Buena Ventura. The gunboat having the captured vessel in tow is not yet in sight, and many believe that it is a canard, but Captain Wheeler, who brought the news, says that the report is absolutely true. I will have confirmation in an hour.

THE NEWS CONFIRMED.

Key West, April 22.—12.15 p. m.—It was the United States cruiser Nashville that captured the Spanish boat which was laden with lumber. The Spaniards surrendered on being summoned by a single shot over the bow from a six-pounder. The prize has not yet arrived.

FURTHER CONFIRMATION.

Key West, April 22.—The United States cruiser Nashville has captured the Spanish ship Buena Vura, of 1,000 tons, having on board a cargo of lumber. She was on her way from the coast of Texas. The cruiser fired a six-pounder and the Spaniard surrendered.

DECLARATION OF WAR.

Washington, April 22.—The President is preparing a proclamation declaring that a state of war exists, and warning Spanish citizens and merchants to leave the country. The proclamation will be issued to-day or to-morrow. There is some conflict among legal authorities as to the distinction between merchants and citizens. Under our treaty with Spain her citizens are given one year to ours are to leave Spain, but subsequent legislation throws a doubt upon the length of time, and it is to definitely ascertain the exact meaning of the existing law by consulting authorities that may delay the issuance of it to-day.

STOCK MARKET AFFECTED.

New York, April 22.—Aside from the news regarding the progress of the war there was nothing taken into consideration as affecting the stock market. In a general way the seniment seemed to be favorably affected in the removal of the long existing uncertainty in regard to the Spanish-American situation. London houses were buyers in this market.

CHANGES IN THE CABINET.

Washington, April 22.—There is every indication that the Cabinet is about to be reorganized upon a war basis. Gary's resignation was due as much to his opposition to was as to his ill health. Long's resignation has been written, but he has been persuaded to withold it for several days. Admiral Walker is most talked of to succeed Long at the head of the Navy Department. Sherman's resignation has been expected for several weeks. Senator Cushman K. Davis has been offered a State portfolio, but it is said he declined it.

MINISTERIAL CRISIS.

Madrid, April 22.—There is grave fear of a Ministerial crisis here. General Campos has advised the Queen Regent to retain the Ministry intact. On being summoned to the palace General Campos said that the Ministry should be supported by all parties, but if there should be signs of weakness in the conflict with the United States her Majesty should summon the Conservatives. "If," said General Campos, "The Conservatives decline the responsibility, here am I." The Queen Regent has also consulted with the President of the Senate.

WOODFORD SAFELY OUT.

Hendaye (Spanish frontier), April 22.—The United States Minister to Spain, General Woodford, reached the frontier safely at 8 a.m., after some exciting experiences.

The Spanish police attempted to capture a member of the Legation, and at Valladolid the train was attacked. The attempted capture was frustrated by General Woodford.

General Woodford knew nothing of the disturbances until he reached Tolosa. There a sergeant of the civil guard, accompanied by a private detective, boarded the train and demanded that Mr. Joaquin Moreno disembark from the cars.

James, the General's colored valet, thereupon awakened General Woodford who hurriedly dressed while matters were being explained to him. The General then formally protested, through the medium of the correspondent of the Associated Press against the attempted interference with his suite, declaring that Mr. Moreno was his private secretary and a British subject. The Spaniards, however, claimed that he was a Spanish subject, but the General refused to give him up to the police, and placed himself in the doorway of the compartment in which Mr. Moreno was travelling, declaring he would only surrender the latter if forced to do so. The Minister then asked the correspondent of the Associated Press to explain to the Spaniards that he placed Mr. Moreno under the protectish flag, and that if they took him it would only be by using personal violence to the United States Minister, who proposed to protect Mr. Moreno until the frontier was crossed.

ANOTHER FAST YACHT.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 22.—The yacht Comanche has been tendered the Government by M. A. Hanna. She is the largest yacht on the great lakes and one of the finest in the world.

MILITIAMEN FLUNK.

Berea, Ohio, April 22.—Ten members of Company K, Ohio National Guards, have announced positively that they would not go to the front in case of war. This is the first flunk flunk in Ohio.

THE BLOCADE OF HAVANA.

Washington, April 22.—A Bill will be introduced to Congress to-day or to-morrow for a loan of $500,000,000 at three per cent. The President has signed the proclamation announcing the blocade of Havana.

ANGLO-AMERICAN CO-OPERATION.

New York, April 22.—The Post's London special, referring to Henry White's mission, says the movement for an Anglo-American co-operation in foreign affairs, has gone far beyond mere newspaper talk and has entered the region of explicit official negotiations.

AID FOR CUBANS.

Washington, April 22. — Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, has definitely decided to resign his official position and go into the army. It is said that one of the first measures to be taken by Secretary Alger will be to send to Cuba under the immediate direction of Delegate Palma, Dr. Castillo Duany, and General Nunez, at least 40,000 rifles, a number of field pieces and 6,000,000 cartridges. Large quantities of clothing, provisions and medicines will also be sent to the patriot army.

TO POST BRITAIN.

Kingston, April 22.—Capt. Lee, of the Royal Military College, has received instructions from the British Government to leave for Washington on Saturday, and proceed to Cuba with the United States troops. The English militia authorities are desirous of being informed on the manoeuvres of the United States artillery men, and have selected Capt. Lee to look after the information.

SPANISH COUNCIL OF WAR.

New York, April 22.—A despatch from St. Vincent, Cape Verde islands, says: The Spanish war fleet from Cadiz is expected here to reinforce the squadron of ten warships now here waiting orders from Madrid. The Admiral in command and the senior officers of the combined squadrons here held a council of war, but took great precautions to insure secrecy. The swift torpedo boat Rayo, whose speed is said to be 24 knots an hour, leaves nightly for patrol duty or reconnoitring.

TO PURCHASE THE HOLLAND.

Washington, April 22.—The Government has decided to purchase the submarine boat Holland.

STRENGTHENING THE NAVY.

New York, April 22.—Three steam yachts, the Restless, Viking and Thespien, arrived at the navy yard to-day to be fitted up at once as torpedo boats. They will be sent to join the fleet.

ENGLISHMEN JOIN IN.

New York, April 22.—There is a movement among the English born residents of New York, who are United States citizens, to raise men and money to assist in ousting Spain from Cuba.

DON CARLOS' LOUD WORDS.

New York, April 22.—A despatch from Brussels says: Don Carlos has made the following statement: "But we Spaniards are tough fighters and enter the contes fearless of consequences. We thank the Holy Father for his kind offices, but the time has passed for intervention and the final catastrophe is now inevitable."

SWORDS DRAWN FOR WOODFORD.

Bayonne, France, April 22.—10.35 a. m.—The farewell of the United States Minister, General Stewart L. Woodford, to Spain was in keeping with the dignity he displayed throughout the crisis. When asked if he had anything to say to say, he simply raised his hat and said "Goodbye." The Segovia incident was comparatively unimportant. The students of the military school, in full uniform, packed the depot. They were silent until the train started, then there was an enthusiastic outburst of cheering for Spain and Cuba.

LICENSE COMMISSIONERS MEET

And Grant the Town and Village Shop Licenses for the Year

The License Commissioners for West Peterborough met yesterday afternoon at one o'clock to consider the applications for liquor licenses for 1898-99. There were present: Messrs. Walton, chairman, Cochrane, Halpin and Graham. Only the shop licenses were dealt with. These were granted to the same parties as held them last year, namely: Messrs. M.L. Henry & Co., F.J.R. Mitchell, E. Brown & Co., Alex. Elliott, Wm. Collins and J. C. Sullivan.

The Board adjourned till ten o'clock on Friday, 29th inst., to consider the applications for tavern licenses. There is the same number of applicants as held licenses last year, namely, thirty-three.

CONVERSAT CONTINUED

Two Games of Basket Ball Reds vs. Blues and Thistles vs. Roses

The Y.M.C.A. conversat. was continued at the Y.M.C.A. last night, the program being varied by two very interesting games of basket ball.

The first game was between the Reds and Blues, and resulted in favor of the former by a score of 8 to 4. In the second game the Roses and Thistles wrestled for the supremacy. The Scotchmen were defeated by a score of 14 to 8 after a very exciting game.

The attendance was very large considering the unfavorable weather.

It is intended, we understand, to make the affair an annual spring event in connection with the Association, and if future conversats are as successful as this one has been there will certainly be no rooom for grumbling.

FOR THE NERVOUS.

And Emaciated, South American Nervine is a Rich, Deep Health Fountain and Never Fails.

Nervous exhaustion, bad digestion, impoverished blood are the diseases imprinted on many a brow. South American Nervine has a marvellous power as a nerve tonic, a blood builder and stimulator Tones the system, clears, regulates and dispels depression and restores the good spirits essential to good health. George Webster, of Forest, writes: "For years I suffered much from sleeplessness, nervousness, twitching muscles and palpitation. All remedies failed but South American Nervine. The first bottle greatly helped. and five bottles cured me. I feel I owe my life to it."

The Stamped Envelopes

The Postoffice department is about issuing the first instalment of the new stamped envelopes. There will as hitherto be three denominations of envelopes in the forthcoming series—the 1 cent, 2 cent, and 3 cent—but there will be only one size, that of the present No. 2, or larger envelope. The cost of the larger envelopes has been reduced 10 cents per hundred in each denomination, and a further concession granted the public by supplying without extra cost, and whenever preferred, these envelopes, bearing a blank form of request for the return of the letter, should it not be delivered within a specified time.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles

Symptoms—Moisture intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate and become very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia., Lyman Sons, & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Positively refuse all substitutes.

Bicycle Baskets

Bicyclists, have your seen the new lunch basket and parcel carrier combined? They are just the thing for picnic parties and those taking long journeys. They have not been on sale here, but hundreds are being used in the cities. The Times Bookstore are sole agents for them.

Be sure you are right, then go ahead. Be sure you get Hood's Sarsaparilla, and not some cheap and worthless substitute.

Fresh Strawberries, 25 cents a box. J. B. Oke, 418 George-St

Get More and You Get Less

Why is it every sarsaparilla which tries to sell itself, ranges itself against Ayer's as the standard? Why is it that all have to offer extra inducements—bigger bottles, fancy wrappers, cheaper price—anything, everything, but the one inducement of quality?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

has never been equaled by any cheap imitation of it, and quality tells, just as blood tells.

It Is the Standard.

"I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla for more than twenty-five years, and have never heard anything but words of praise from my customers; not a single complaint has ever reached me. A preparation must possess great merit to maintain such a reputation. I believe your sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier that has ever been introduced to the general public. I often hear other manufacturers say that this is "as good as Ayer's," but no one ever yet heard it said that Ayer's was "as good" as any other kind. They always set Ayer's up as the standard of excellence."—S. F. BOYCE, Duluth, Minn.

FIGHTING WITHOUT MONEY

Spain's credit is exhausted. Her 4 per cent bonds have all gone down to nearly 40. Without credit or much money in sight many people have supposed that Spain would not be able to make much of a fight. Henry Clews the well-known financier, points out the fallacy of this idea. Instead of the bankrupt nation being a weak foe, he insists that it may be a very formidable foe. He argues that Spain being bankrupt will abandon ambi- to keep up her national credit and will default the interest on her outstanding obligations. This will amount to about $100,000,000 a year, a very comfortable sum for war purposes. Additional money can be raised by contributions and forced revenue from the people. Mr. Clews compares the condition of Spain with that of the bankrupt railroad, which, as every one knows makes a bad foe for the solvent competitor. As he points out, a railroad in the hands of a receiver pays out nothing except to keep the road in repair and can make forced loans through receivers' certificates and can cut rates so low as to inflict serious injury to a strong competitor if the fight continues long. On this line he argues that Spain, with no credit to be protected, will be ready to resort to desperate expedients in a fight.

GLADSTONE

It is very evident that the greatest and best living son of Britain is rapidly drawing near the end of his earthly journey. He is suffering great pain from a disease which the most eminent surgeons can only alleviate, but cannot cure. In his retirement he has ceased to be a politician and is exalted in the eyes of all his countrymen as a stainless patriot. He has served his country and his Queen with untiring energy and with commanding ability. No living orator has so swayed and moved English-speaking people as he has, and no one has exercised a greater influence in the world. He is respected and reverenced in the United States and on the continent almost as much as at home. His voice has ever been for mercy, truth and righteousness, and the world is far better for his having lived in it. He has been more than politician, statesman or Minister of the Crown. He has been both classical scholar and earnest theologian. Everything that he has touched he has adorned. His domestic life has been ideal. His social life has had a singular charm, and in all his varied relations to his fellow-men his record has been stainless and singularly noble. It is said that as he contemplates the end he experiences "a serious joy." And so it should be to one who has lived as he has lived.

When the shadows lenthen and the western sun sinks in a halo of glory, he passes forth as one who has fought a good fight and goes to his coronation.

It must make Spain particularly angry when she reflects that she has to borrow money to meet the expense of discovering this country.

• • •

Before Uncle Sam lets out his dogs of war he should see that they all have their '98 tags on. The Spanish dog catchers are abroad.

• • •

It is at least a curious fact, however little real significance it may have that regularly since and during the close of the [illegible] each century each cycle of one hundred years has been completed with a blaze of wars. In nearly every instance they were conflicts of importance and had a decided bearing on the woe or weal of mankind. They say history repeats itself and if it does the nineteenth century will be but following a precedent that is 300 years old, should it too, end amid the roar of cannon.

• • •

"Private duties" will keep his Majesty, the Prince of Monaco from attending to his duties as an officer in the Spanish navy. The Prince is boss of the greatest gambling shop in the world and private duties are the name he gives to the business of seeing that nobody "breaks the bank at Monte Carlo."

• • •

A citizen of the United States who has had some experience in military life, said yesterday that the United States in its war with Cuba would confine its operations to the island, unless she was forced to make her operations more expansive. She will make Cadenz, in Cuba, the basis of operations and will attempt to drive the Spanish soldiers off the island. When this is accomplished he thinks Spain will not make any further disturbance, and will abandon the war. The speaker is afraid that the Spanish Minister to the United States will locate permanently in Canada and that he will protest against any supplies being sent to the United States from Canada during the war.

How to Cure All Skin Diseases

Simply apply "Swayne's Ointment." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for Swayne's Ointment. Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Avoid substitutes.

Mrs. Smith Stricken Down

The wife of Lawrence Smith, an employee at the Barnado Home, was stricken down with neuralgia of the heart at her residence on Smithtown Hill, just outside the corporation, Thursday night. She lingered in unconsciousness until yesterday morning, when she passed away. The deceased was about 56 years of age and in robust health until stricken down so suddenly. She was a faithful member of the George street Methodist church and an earnest worker in Grace Sunday school. A husband and one daughter, a girl of 18, survive.

Paine's Celery Compound Snatches Mr. Morisette From the Grave.

NATURE'S SPRING MEDICINE CURES RHEUMATISM.

Are you enjoying God's blessings this spring weather? You know not anything of them if you are a martyr to rheumatism, neuralgia, insomnia, nervousness, and diseases of the blood.

It is now an imperative duty to get back sound health and strength by a complete restoring of the broken-down, tired and agonized system with Paine's Celery Compound.

Your chief aim at this season should be to furnish the body with fresh nervous energy, and supply every artery and vein with rich, pure blood, thus expelling the seeds of disease and death. There is nothing known to physicians that can for a moment approach Paine's Celery Compound for casting off disease, purifying the blood and making strong and healthy nerves.

Do not procrastinate if you are in danger; to-morrow may be too late. Bear in mind that your case is not too difficult for the curing virtues of such a medicine as Paine's Celery Compound.

A glorious victory was secured to Mr. Morisette, of Roxton Pond, P.Q., at the eleventh hour! His doctors failed, but Paine's Celery Compound was his true salvation. It will give the same marvellous results to all users: it is the world's only disease banisher; it is the only true life-giver. Mr Morisette says:

"Having been given up to die some time ago by some of the best doctors of the United States, I came back to Canada last autumn terribly ill, and had lost all hope. Suffering agonies from inflammatory rheumatism, I was strongly urged to use Paine's Celery Compound, I gave it a trial as recommended, and the first bottle did me so much good I continued with the medicine until I had used seven bottles, when I found myself perfectly cured; indeed, I never felt better in all my life than at present. I use every possible means to tell others of Paine's Celery Compound, and will always recommend it to those troubled with rheumatism."

He Got a Mate.

A sea captain called at a village inn and asked the landlady, a young widow:

"Do you know where I can get a mate? I have lost my mate."

"I am very sorry for you, Mr. ——," she said, smiling. "I want a mate, too, and cannot get one. As we are in the same position, I'll tell you what I'll do—if you'll be mine, I will be yours."

He closed with the bargain, and, the widow keeping her word, he is now supplied with two mates.—Pearson's Weekly.

An Important Change

An amendment to the Municipal Act, passed at the last Session makes an important change in the municipal elections in towns. The two most important features of the change are the reduction in the size of the Town Council and abolition of the ward system, as far as representation is concerned. Next January towns with a population of less than five thousand inhabitants will elect a Mayor and six Councillors by the vote of the ratepayers as a whole, without regard to ward boundaries.

Luxurious Traveling.

The height of luxurious traveling has been reached by the czar and czarina. The empress' private car is upholstered in pale blue satin. The electric lamps are all in the form of lilies, and it contains writing and tea tables made of mother of pearl. The nursery is the next apartment, and is as comfortable and handsome as the same rooms in any of the czar's palaces. There are dining rooms and drawing rooms and several sleeping apartments. In fact, this train is a miniature palace. The wheels are covered with india rubber tires.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE EXCITABLE FRENCH.

Scene In the Chamber of Deputies With the Members Enraged.

Upon arriving at the anteroom of the chamber of deputies, says Colonel T. W. Higginson in The Atlantic, I found the hall full of people waiting, each having to send his card to some member, naming on it the precise hour of arrival. The member usually appeared promptly, when an immense usher called in a stentorian voice for "La personne qui a fait demander M. Constant"—or whoever it might be. Then the constituent—for such it usually was—advanced toward the smiling member, who never looked bored, the mask of hospitality being probably the same in this respect throughout the legislative halls of the world. At last M. Talandier appeared and got me a place among the corps diplomatique. The chamber itself was more like our representatives' hall at Washington than like the house of commons. The members had little locked desks, and some were writing letters, like our representatives, though I saw no newspapers.

The ordinary amount of noise was like that in our congress, though there was happily no clapping of hands for pages, but when the members became especially excited, which indeed happened very often, it became like a cage of lions. For instance, I entered just as somebody had questioned the minister of war, General Borel, about an alleged interference with elections, and his defiant reply had enraged the Lefts, or radicals, who constituted the majority of the assembly. They shouted and gesticulated, throwing up their arms and then slapping them on their knees very angrily, until the president rang his great bell, and they quieted down lest he might put on his hat and adjourn the meeting. In each case the member speaking took his stand in the desk or tribune below the president, and the speeches were sometimes read, sometimes given without notes.

The war minister, a stout, red faced man—always, the radicals say, half intoxicated—stood with folded arms and looked ready for a coup d'etat, yet I heard it said about me that he would be compelled either to retreat or resign. One saw at a glance how much profounder political differences must be in France than with us.

Married on Thirty Minutes' Courtship.

"You may talk about your brief courtships and marriages on short notice," said Captain Arm Cardwell once, "but I think I once witnessed the quickest made match on record. I was running as a conductor between Russellville and Owensboro, as I did for many years, and on a trip in the winter of 1881 I got a pretty country girl passenger at a little flag station south of Central City about 9:45 a. m. A few miles farther on at another small station a big strapping looking farmer, dressed in brown jeans, with his trousers tucked in his tall boots, got on my train. The fellow hadn't opened the car door till he spied the rustic lass, and before he took his seat in front of the girl he had smiled at her.

"I punched his ticket, went in the smoking car, and on my return to the regular passenger coach found the Green river tiller of the soil sitting in the same seat with the maiden, chatting with her as if he had known her since birth. In 25 minutes after they had first met the fellow called me to him and said: 'See here, podner, we want to get hitched. I hain't knowed Mirinda Jane here but 30 minutes, but we both like, an she's willin an so'm I. Whur's the nighest parson, podner?' I took them on to Owensboro, and the happy bridegroom and his blushing other half were passengers back on my train that afternoon. For hurry up nuptials it does strike me that these ought to have the cake and other special prizes offered for quick yeast love matches."—Louisville Post.

De Lesseps Statue.

M. Fremiet has finished the head of the enormous statue of the late Comte Ferdinand de Lesseps which is to be placed at the entry of the Suez canal. The canal projector is to be represented standing, covered with an Arab burnoose, and pointing toward the new waterway opened up to navigation. On one of the sides of the pedestal—which is to have a granite foundation—will be a medallion containing the portraits of the khedives who patronized the canal.—Boston Transcript.

Seeing Oneself.

Next to the power of standing outside oneself and looking at me as other folks see me the most remarkable is this of (by the insight of genius and imagination) becoming you. The first makes one sometimes only too reasonable, too humble; the second warms the heart and enriches the soul, for it gives the charm of selfhood to beings not ourselves.—Jean Ingelow.

BETTER TO MAKE A FIGHT.

When the good knight, Don Quixote, hung by his wrist from the stable window, he imagined that a tremendous abyss yawned beneath his feet. Presently the throng was cut, and the gallant adventurer fell four inches. Many others, before and since his day, have had similar experiences. Black clouds, seemingly full of concealed lightnings and heavy with yet unuttered thunder, have slowly drifted over our heads without making a single hostile demonstration. Calamities, when they are really come, are often found much more bearable than we fancied they would be as we looked helplessly on their dreaded approach.

May not this possibly be true also in respect of that event which excites in us the most serious apprehension, namely death? After much observation, Pliny avowed his opinion that the moment of dissolution was the most exquisite instant of life. And multitudes who have been swallowed up by the Dark Archway have, in the very fact and article of their going, testified to the soundness of his judgment.

It can at least do no harm to uphold that theory of the nature of our taking off, whether it be true or not. None of us will be in any greater hurry to leave the world on that account. Whatever she may mean to do to render our final exit easy and pleasant. Nature certainly endows us with an imperative instinct against surrendering existence a fraction of a second before we are obliged to.

All there is of death, says somebody, is the willingness to die. But we are not willing. Poor and mean as our lives may be in the opinion of certain bilious pessimists, the majority find life eminently worth living, and make a fight for it accordingly.

This was what a man did, whose brief account of his struggles I now submit to you. And I am glad to say he came out of it a clear winner.

"In the autum of 1890," he says, "my health began to give way. I felt low and weak, a feeling of giddiness coming over me. My appetite was bad, and when food was placed before me I had no relish for it. After eating, I had weight and pain at the chest. I had excruciating pain and stiffness in the back, which I was told was lumbago.

"I got little sleep at night, and in the morning was worn out. I soon began to lose flesh, and was so weak I could scarcely get about. Time after time I had to give up my work, and was confined to the house for a week or two.

"My sufferings continued two and one-half years, during which time I lost over two stone weight. I consulted three doctors, but their medicines did not help me.

"In February, 1893, I read about Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup and got a bottle of this medicine. After taking it I felt much better; the pain was less severe and I felt brighter.

"I continued with it, and soon my appetite returned and I gained strength. By and-by I felt as well and as strong as ever I was in my life; and have since that time kept in good health. You can make any use you like of this statement and refer any one to me. (Signed) William Hine, Inglethorpe, Newtown, Trowbridge, February 10th, 1897."

How I should enjoy standing before an audience of as many people as could hear my voice and, with Mr. Hine's letter as a text, preach a lay sermon on the facts mentioned in it. It ought to be gone over sentence by sentence, point by point. I should take up his case at the time his health began to give way, follow him down the steps into the valley of disease and weakness, and emerge with him on the Delectable Mountains of renewed life and strength.

But in the absence of such a comment, I ask you, I urge you to re-read the letter; once, twice, half a dozen times. For here we have a typical instance of what is happening to the people, and a proof of what can be done to save them. We see that a victorious battle can be made for life and health in the face of doubt and discouragement, and after the failure of approved medical treatment.

Behind all the thick coming troubles which afflicted our friend, Mr. Hine (and the cause of them all) was the prevailing, dangerous, and deadly disease, dyspepsia. How he was delivered he tells us. Remember it when you come to have to make your fight.

Disease is always a calamity. Thank Heaven, we can often crush it with Mother Seigel's Syrup as St. George slew the Dragon with his club.

COULD DO NO WORK.

"Large sores broke out on my body, head and limbs, and also on my hands, so that I could not do any work, and my hair came out. My trouble was called eczema. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken several bottles the sores and itching disappeared and I was cured." Mrs. J. G. Brown, Brantford, Ont.

HOOD'S PILLS are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Cure all liver ills.

Rats In Siam.

The writer was astonished on visiting the house of the inhabitants of Siam (says a traveler) to see a huge rat walking quietly around the room and crawling up the master's legs in a cool, familiar manner. Instead of repulsing it or giving an alarm he took it up in his hand and caressed it and then we learned for the first time, to our utter astonishment, that it was a custom in Bangkok to keep pet rats. These are taken very young and carefully reared until they attain a monstrous size from good and plentiful feeding.

A FAMOUS MULBERRY TREE.

Planted by Milton In Christ's College Gardens, Cambridge.

In the gardens of Christ's college, Cambridge, stands a venerable mulberry tree, which, tradition says, was planted by Milton during the time when he was a student at the university. This would be between the years 1624 and 1632, for the following copy, from the Latin of his entry of admission, accurately fixes the former date, and his admission to the degree of M. A., to which he proceeded in the latter year, ended his intimate connection with the university: "John Milton, native of London, son of John Milton, was initiated in the elements of letters under Mr. Gill, master of St. Paul's school; was admitted a lesser pensioner Feb. 12, 1624, under Mr. Chappell and paid entrance fee, 10s." He was then 16 years and 2 months old.

The tree so intimately associated with his name is now much decayed, but in order to preserve it as much as possible from the ravages of time many of the branches have been covered with sheet lead and are further supported by stout wooden props, while the trunk has been buried in a mound of earth. The luxuriance of the foliage and the crop of fruit which it annually bears are proof of its vitality, but to insure against accidents and perpetuate the tree an offshoot has been planted close by. In the event of a bough breaking and falling it is divided with even justice among the fellows of the college, and many pieces are thus preserved as mementos of the poet. It was during his residence at Cambridge that he composed his ode, "On the Morning of Christ's Nativity." "Lycidas," too, is intimately connected with Milton's life at the university, since it was written in memory of Edward King, his college friend and contemporary, with whom he doubtless shared the same rooms.

In those days students did not, as now, occupy separate apartments, as witness the original statutes of the college, "In which chambers our wish is that the fellows sleep two and two, but the scholars four and four," in consequence of which a much closer intimacy was formed among them than is now possible. Dr. Johnson relates that Milton was flogged at Cambridge, but the fact is doubtful, though there is reason to suppose that he had differences with the authorities in the earlier part of his college career, since he was transferred from his original tutor. This tree is still pointed out to visitors and was until recent years especially marked by a bough of mistletoe growing upon it.—Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper.

Poet and Queen.

Dr. Max Muller relates that the late queen of Holland frequently came to England and was fond of meeting while there distinguished literary people. On one occasion she lunched with Dean Stanley and asked him to invite several literary men, among whom were Tennyson, Lord Houghton, Huxley and Max Muller himself.

Luncheon was ready, and everybody had come to the deanery except Tennyson. Dean Stanley suggested that the party should wait no longer, but the queen refused to sit down before the laureate's arrival. There was another period of waiting, painful to all the company.

Finally some one suggested that probably Tennyson was "mooning about in the cloisters somewhere." One was sent to see, and the poet was indeed found there, apparently oblivious that anything was going on. He was brought in and placed at the table next the queen of the Netherlands.

The queen took the conversation into her own hands and in particular tried to draw Tennyson out. He was not in talking mood. She addressed him a question.

"Yes, ma'am," he answered.

Then there was another question.

"No, ma'am," came from Tennyson.

Again she asked his opinion about something. The question was not susceptible of answer by "Yes" or "No."

"Ma'am," said Tennyson after a great effort, "there is a great deal to be said on both sides of the question."

Presently he turned and whispered to Max Muller, "I wish they had put some of you talking fellows next to regina."

Anglo-Saxon Common Sense.

I had occasion at Coolgardie to be present at a public meeting gathered to protest strongly against the actions of the Western Australian government with regard to the mining population and the insufficiency of its political representation. Several speakers held forth. One declared that he was neither democrat nor socialist, another that he was a democrat, but not a socialist; a third at last professed himself a socialist. Sometimes groans, sometimes applause, underlined certain phrases, but in the midst of these gold miners, in this town but three years old, in spite of the relaxing influence of a torrid heat, the most perfect order reigned throughout. Thanks were voted at the end of the meeting to all the speakers without distinction of opinion, a motion of protest was adopted, and the crowd retired in the greatest tranquillity. I thought, not without shame, of the manner in which meetings of this kind are often conducted in France.—"Les Nouvel' Societes Anglo-Saxonnes," Pierre Le

HIS BUSY DAY.

It Is Easier to Forget Some Things Than to Remember Them.

The business man was very much occupied when one of his acquaintances came in.

"I want to ask you"— began the caller, but the other, without looking up, waved one hand back of him and reduced the friend to silence. After waiting half a minute the visitor tried again.

"I won't take much of your time," he said. "This is something too important to be neglected or I'd go away and come again."

"I suppose there's no use of my trying to get through with this before dark anyhow," was the rejoinder, with a sigh.

"I'm sorry it's necessary to interrupt you."

"Oh, it's all right. When I come to think of it, I wouldn't know whether I had the right answer when I got through."

"You could easily have the bookkeeper verify it, couldn't you?"

"No. I tried the bookkeeper on it. He didn't know any more about it than I did."

"Isn't it anything connected with business?"

"No. If it were, I'd be comparatively serene. Business isn't the only thing in life."

"It's a great deal of it, though."

The calculator rang for the office boy, and when he appeared said, "Thomas, you take this $2 bill and buy me as many works on arithmetic as you can for it." Then turning to his friend with the air of a cross questioner he said:

"Why do men engage in business?"

"To make money."

"And what do we want with money? We want independence and respect. We want to feel that we can hold up our heads in the world and not be obliged to face humiliation. The purposes of this calculation, distant from business though they may be, are the same. I have a boy who has done well in his studies and who does me the honor to ask my advice every once in awhile. Most boys don't do that. They think it's impossible for their fathers to know very much owing to the misfortune they labored under in not having the same schoolteachers. This boy of mine remarked yesterday that he was going to take up cube root today. Have you tried to extract any cube roots since you left school?"

The caller answered in the negative.

"Then you don't know how much you have forgotten. It's a heap easier to learn to extract a cube root in the first place than it is to remember it again after you have got out of practice. But I'm going to keep at it. Tonight he'll come home with some examples to do and Napoleon when he started for St. Helena didn't feel a bit worse than I will if I have to lay down my lead pencil and paper and own up that I can't do them."—Detroit Free Press.

250,000 CURED.

Thousands of young men are made nervous wrecks, unfit for business, social pleasures or home duties by evil habits in youth, later excesses, or private diseases. W. C. Andrews, of Akron, O., says: "I read this paper and have seen many reports of remarkable cures made by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan. I decided to treat with them. Indiscretion was the cause of my trouble. I was weak and nervous; no ambition; back weak; pimples on the face; thin and haggard; eyes sunken and cheeks hollow; dreams and drains at night; memory poor; varicocele and weak parts; irritable; sinking spells; specks before the eyes; lack of confidence; no energy; and many other complaints. I had tried fourteen doctors, bought four electric belts took scores of bottles of patent medicines—all failed. I tried the New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, and it cured me. I am a Man Again. I have gained twenty-six pounds and am strong mentally, physically and sexually. It is a wonderful treatment."

Blood Disease—with the worst symptoms: Ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, blotches, eruptions, hair fallen out, bone pains, eyes red, stomach troubles, sore throat, etc., positively cured forever. You dare not marry until cured. Cures guaranteed or no pay.

SERVANTS' LIVERIES.

They Had Their Origin During the Reign of King Pepin of France.

So far as the present writer is aware, the earliest mention of "liveries" made in history was during the reign of King Pepin of France, who flourished about the year 750 A. D.

A form of amusement to which King Pepin was partial was what were termed cours plenieres. These were assemblies at which, upon the king's invitation, all the lords and courtiers of France were expected to be present. They were held twice in each year—at Christmas and Easter—and generally lasted for about a week at each time. Sometimes these gatherings took place at the king's palace, sometimes in the neighborhood of one of the larger French cities and sometimes in some rural district. While the festival lasted the king took all his meals in public, bishops and dukes alone being privileged to sit at the royal table. A second table was provided for abbots, counts and other leading men, and at both tables there was shown more profusion than delicacy, both in the quality of the meats and drinks and the manner in which they were served. Flutes, hautboys and other musical instruments were played before the bearers of each course as it was removed from the tables. When dessert was served, 20 heralds, each holding aloft a jeweled goblet, shouted thrice, "Largesse, largesse from the most potent of kings!" As they shouted they scattered among the crowds handfuls of gold and silver coins. Then the trumpets were blown, while the better class spectators shouted and the meaner sort scrambled and often fought vigorously for the money scattered by the heralds.

Charles VII of France put a final stop to the cours plenieres, alleging that the expense attendant upon his wars with England made it impossible for him to continue them. One of the severest causes of expense, it was explained, arose from the fact that beginning with King Pepin's time, etiquette and custom alike demanded that the king should upon these occasions give an entire suit of new and gorgeous clothing not only to his own servants and retainers, but also to those of the queen and all the princes of the blood royal. These garments were said to be livres—that is, "delivered" at the king's expense—and from this word the English word "livery" was derived, as was the custom of providing servants with "livery," from the above mentioned practice of certain of the French kings.—London Society.

AMERICAN HEIRESS IN PARIS.

Impecunious Titled Parisians Drew Lots to Decide Who Should Marry Her.

Lilian Bell, in a letter from Paris to The Ladies' Home Journal, writes that the most shameless thing in all Europe is the marriage question, and proceeds to narrate the experiences of a rich American girl who came to Paris with letters to friends. On account of her wealth she was invited everywhere by mothers of marriageable sons, but being unable to speak French was not much of a success. She went to a convent to learn French, and was shown much attention by the Duchesse de Z——, who was determined that her son should marry her. "Suddenly, to the amazement of everybody, the heiress sailed for America without a word of warning. The duchesse was furious. 'You must follow her,' she said to her son. 'We cannot let so much money escape.' The son said he would be hanged if he went to America or if he would marry such a monkey, and as for her money, she could go anywhere she pleased with it, or words to that effect. So that ended the affair of the Marquis de G——.

"When the other impecunious young nobles heard that the duchesse no longer had any claims upon the American's money, they got together and said: 'Somebody must marry her and divide with the rest. We can't all marry her, but we can all have a share from whoever does. Now we will draw lots to see who must go to America and marry her.' The lot fell to the Baron de X——, but he had no money for the journey. So all the others raised what money they could and loaned it to him, and took his notes for it, with enormous interest, payable after his marriage. He sailed away, and within eight months he had married her, but he has not paid those notes. His wife won't give him the money!"

Austrian Christmas Customs.

In Austria they are particularly thoughtful of the bringer of the gifts and joy. The people place lighted candles in their windows, that the Christ child, in passing through the city or village or along the country road, shall not stumble or fall.

A belief in the special presence of evil spirits during Christmastide and in their efforts to interfere with and lessen the joys of the season prevails throughout Europe.

The bugbear "ruprecht," under different names and in numerous varying disguises and in strange antics, plays a conspicuous part among the Germans and surrounding peoples. In Tyrol the terrible "klanbacf" accompanies St. Nicholas, and is continually hovering about his path ready to kidnap naughty children.

In Austria this monster is very terrible in appearance, going about with clanking chains and hideous devil's mask. He is frequently heard at night as he flies through the air, and his rattling chains are giving notice of his presence.

In many places there is the belief that wolves roam the earth on the night before Christmas and create great havoc in destroying vines and other property and even human beings. This belief has made an excuse for a means of mischievous frolic. Men and boys frequently disguise themselves as wolves and go about frightening the people.—Chicago Times-Herald.

He Had Forgotten.

Sir W. R. Hamilton, the great mathematician, had a very promising boy whom he reared with true parental triumph, so Aubrey de Vere tells us. When he was going to bed one night, his father said to him: "Tomorrow Aubrey de Vere will be here. Shall you not be glad to see him?" He mused for some time and then made reply remorsely, "Thinking of Latin, and thinking of trouble, and thinking of God, I had forgotten Aubrey de Vere."—San Francisco Argonaut.

An Appreciable Difference.

"The chief difference between the man with a lot of new made money and the gentle zephyr," said the corn fed philosopher, "is that the gentle zephyr blows itself quietly."—Indianapolis Journal.

In 1680 the Duchesse de Fontanges had the misfortune to have her hat blown off at a hunting party, and she tied her hair with one of her ribbon garters. Hairdressing with ribbons remained a fashion for seven years.

No fewer than 96,896 doors and windows in London have been found open at night by the police in one year.

THE EMPEROR WORSTED.

A Plucky Little Hungarian Girl Got Revenge For Sadowa.

The present kaiser would probably not admit that he had often been thwarted in any of his plans, but an anecdote has recently become known which shows that he at least once "got the worst of it," and it is all the more piquant from the fact that he was defeated by a girl.

When the kaiser, who was then Prince Wilhelm, was about 10 years old, he and Prince Heinrich spent some time at Cassel with their tutors, who sometimes allowed the little princes to play with other children. One day when several of them were gathered together it chanced that a little French girl was among the number, and the young Germans conceived the brilliant idea of making her a representative of the country they all so cordially hated. The delightful plan was immediately put into execution, and the poor child was tied to a tree. Then began a fusillade of pine cones, sticks, etc., and whenever anything struck her there was a cry of "Here's for Sedan!" This went on for a few minutes, when a little Hungarian girl, Helena von D——, who was watching, could bear the injustice no longer, and, singling out Prince Wilhelm as chief offender, she threw herself on him. The attack being unexpected, he was completely taken by surprise and fell down, whereupon she began to pound him, crying out at each blow, "Here's for Sadowa!"

The prince was fast getting the worst of it, for his little adversary was thoroughly in earnest, when the imperial tutors, hearing the noise, rushed up and separated the combatants. After that the princes were more carefully watched, and Wilhelm had no opportunity to "get even" with the little champion of justice. Some days afterward, hearing that the princes were leaving, Helena went down to the gate to see them go by. As they passed Wilhelm spied his foe, and leaning out behind his tutor he stuck out his tongue.

Helena was the daughter of titled parents, and later she was married to an Englishman. When the kaiser was in London, she told this story to one of his gentlemen in waiting, who in turn repeated it to his majesty. The latter exclaimed: "Is that devil of a girl here now? I would like to see her." A meeting was arranged, but Helena became ill, and so they never met after that one encounter to make friends or renew hostilities.—New York Tribune.

A SAVAGE CRITICISM.

The Teacher's Artistic Cleverness Received a Hard and Cruel Blow.

In one of the Cleveland public schoolrooms of the primary grade the teacher has been reading Longfellow's "Hiawatha" to her pupils. Of course this is a rather ambitious work for the little ones, says The Plain Dealer, but they enjoy it, and the rhythm seems particularly pleasing to them. When they come to a hard word, the teacher goes to the blackboard and draws a picture to illustrate its meaning. This the pupils find highly entertaining, and it helps in quite a remarkable way to fix the text in their minds.

A few days ago they came to this line in the early part of the poem:

At the door on summer evenings sat the little Hiawatha.

"At—th' door on sum-mer eve-nings sat th' lit-tle"—read the children.

"Go on," said the teacher.

But they couldn't go on. The name of Hiawatha was too much for them. They knew who Hiawatha was, but they didn't recognize his name. So the teacher went to the board and took considerable pains in drawing:

First.—A wigwam with poles sticking up above it, and a rude aboriginal drawing above it, and a rude aboriginal painting on the side.

Second.—Little Hiawatha, with feathers in his hair, squatted at the wigwam door.

Third.—A fine harvest moon.

Then she pointed at Hiawatha and asked what it was.

There was a general craning of necks and shaking of heads.

"Come, come," said the teacher, "you know what that is."

Then one little girl spoke up:

"I guess it's a mud turtle."

And instantly, with one accord, the class glibly repeated:

"At th' door on sum-mer eve-nings sat th' lit-tle mud-dy tur tle."

And the teacher feels that her artistic cleverness received a hard and cruel blow.

Stylish Evening Bodice.

The simplest and perhaps the most fashionable bodice for evening wear, says a New York fashion authority, is the full blouse shape of chiffon, drooping over a fitted silk lining, the top cut out in square or rounding fashion, with a full tulle ruche, a narrow band of fur, a fall of lace or beaded revers to finish the edge. The sleeves consist of short, full puffs similarly trimmed. This is a basis for any kind of flower trimming that taste suggests. Rows of shaded pink roses devoid of foliage are in great use on evening gowns this winter, as are maidenhair fern and lilac sprays, laid upon strands of pink or orange satin ribbon not more than an inch and a half wide.

In a Chicago Art Gallery.

"It seems to me the perspective in this picture is faulty."

"The—er—what?"

"The perspective."

"Oh, yes, that part of it is very ugly. It's laid on too thick, and you can buy better frames than that one for $6 a dozen."—Chicago Tribune.

A Bad Bargain.

"Jane, did you break the china plate?"

"Yes'm. You got fooled on that plate, mum. It's a weak un. It broke the fourth time I dropped it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dr. Williams Pink Pills

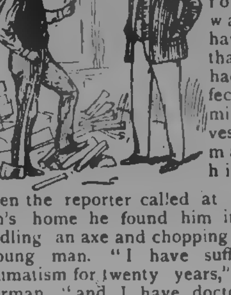
Make Rich, Red, Energy-giving Blood.

THROUGH THEIR USE THOUSANDS OF WEAK MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN HAVE BEEN MADE STRONG

A VICTIM OF RHEUMATISM.

From the Prescott Journal.

There is no man in the Township of Edwardsburg who is better known than Mr. John Sherman. He is one of the many Canadians who at the outbreak of the American rebellion joined the army of the North, and to the exposure and hardships which he endured during that trying and perilous time does he owe long years of suffering which he has since undergone. The writer remembers seeing Mr. Sherman a few years ago when he was so crippled with rheumatism that it was impossible for him to walk, and having heard that a cure had been effected, determined to investigate the matter for himself.



When the reporter called at Mr. Sherman's home he found him in the yard handling an axe and chopping wood like a young man. "I have suffered with rheumatism for twenty years," said Mr. Sherman, "and I have doctored with four different doctors, and yet I kept getting worse and worse. I was bent double with the pain in my back and both legs were so drawn up that I was unable to straighten them, and for four months when I wanted to move about I had to do so on my hands and knees. I tried many medicines but got no benefit, and I had given up all hope of being able to walk again. One of my sons tried to persuade me to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but I refused to take any more medicine. At last one day my son brought home three boxes of the pills, and after they had been in the house over two weeks, I at last consented to take them, but not because I thought they would do me any good. Before they were gone, however, I could feel that my back was getting stronger and I could straighten up. It required no further persuasion to get me to take the pills, and from that time on I began to get better, until now with the aid of a light cane, I can walk all over the farm, get in and out of a buggy, and do most of the chores round the house and barns. I feel twenty years younger, and I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the most wonderful medicine for rheumatism in the whole world. I began them only to please my son and it was a most agreeable surprise to me when I found my legs limber, and my back gaining new strength. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to the suffering rheumatics of the world."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills CURE

Rheumatism, Sciatica, Locomotor Ataxia, Anaemia, Heart Troubles, Indigestion and Dyspepsia, St. Vitus' Dance, Paralysis, Incipient Consumption, All Female Weakness, Dizziness and Headache, and all Troubles arising from Poor and Watery Blood, . . . , . . .

GENERAL WEAKNESS CURED.

Mr. Jas. Canavan is a well know resident of Maxville, Ont. He suffered for a long time from general weakness, approaching an almost collapse. A friend advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and a judicious course restored his health. Mr. Canavan says:—"After having used your Pink Pills I am glad to recommend them to the world as a cure for extreme weakness and debility, and I am sure that if those who feel the first approach of such trouble will only take a box or two, misery may be averted."

A WEAK HEART

Mr. Joseph Becktad, Martintown, Ont. says:—"About thirteen years ago I suffered from an attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which left me with a very weak heart. I doctored, but did not appear to get any relief. About two years ago I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after using them for some time I felt better than I had done for years. I have had no return of the trouble, and feel safe in saying that my cure is permanent. I can heartily recommend this medicine to those who are similarly suffering."

Spring Medicine

In the Springtime the blood needs attention. The change of the year produces in every one, whether conscious of it or not, some little heating of the blood. Some people have pimples, a little eczema, or irritation of the skin; others feel weary, easily tired and have a poor appetite. Purgatives are not the right cure. The best of all Spring medicines for man, women or child is

Dr. Williams Pink Pills

They cure, not by weakening the system as purgatives do, but by giving it strength. They are a Tonic—the best tonic in the world—and cannot harm the most delicate. They make people feel bright, active and strong.

SUBJECT TO SINKING SPELLS.

From the Cookshire, Que., Chronicle.

Mr Newell Waldron is a well known farmer living near East Clifton, Que. As his friends and neighbors know, he passed through a very trying illness as the result of a severe attack of la grippe and when a correspondent of the Chronicle called upon him, he had no hesitation in giving the particulars of his illness and cure. Mr. Waldron said. "I believe I owe my life to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I am glad to have a chance to say a good word in favor of that reliable medicine. During the winter of 1895 when la grippe was so prevalent, I had a severe attack of it, and it left me so weak that I was unable to do work of any kind. I consulted a doctor but as he did not appear to help me I began using different advertised medicines, but the result was the same. I got no benefit, but on the contrary was growing weaker. At times I was subject to sinking spells, which verged upon total unconsciousness. I was failing day by day and was becoming hopeless. A neighbor who called to see me urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I sent for a few boxes. After using them for a couple of weeks I began to gain steadily. I am now as well as any man, and can do as good a day's work as ever I did. I know that my cure is due to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I am always glad to recommend them.

CRIPPLED WITH RHEUMATISM.

Mr. Alpheus Mott, an esteemed resident of Morewood, Ont., says:—"For some years past I have suffered horribly with rheumatism. At times I was so bad that I was almost wholly deprived of the use of my legs, and could only go about with great difficulty. I had to give up farming entirely, and removed to Brockville where I had the best of medical advice but with no good results. I also tried many remedies said to be a cure for rheumatism, but with no better results. Some of my friends urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to do so, and somewhat to my surprise I found they were doing me a great deal of good. I then moved to Morewood, where I still continued the use of the Pills, steadily gaining in health and strength, until I could abandon the use of the cane, without the aid of which I could not move about. Every ache and pain left me, and only those who have suffered the terrible pangs of rheumatism can understand the joy I feel at what Dr Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. I earnestly urge their use on all who are similarly afflicted.

Mr. Jas. Gage Brookdale, Que., says:—"We have always found Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a good family medicine, and think they should be kept in every home."

A WOMAN THE STAKE.

SHE WAS PLAYED AGAINST $50,000 IN A GAME OF ECARTE.

Though the Kentuckian Won at the Game, He Was Beaten In Another Way—Strange Story of an Old, Grewsome Looking House In San Francisco.

In 1867 there stood an old fashioned shanty east of the locality now occupied by the Presentation convent, in front of the graveyard, and the people in the neighborhood used to tell strange stories about this grewsome looking dwelling. For several years its occupancy was apparently confined to a decrepit old man, who used to crawl in and out about once a day, his arms filled with packages from the market.

He was known in the neighborhood as the old dago, though in reality he was a native of Alsace. For several years he lived a hermit's life, and the neighbors got so accustomed to his comings and goings that even the small boys forgot to molest him. But one morning all the gossips found food for conversation by the appearance of a remarkably lovely young woman who went out to and returned from the butcher's stall and the grocer's. She spoke English imperfectly and with a very pronounced French accent. This little cabin was destined to be the scene of a very dramatic incident in the history of California gambling.

It was natural that a girl as pretty as Irene should not be long without admirers, so it came to pass that the windows of the old house were lighted up every evening, and the Frenchman developed the natural hospitality of his race and gave little dinners and suppers to his exiled countrymen. But among those, as was only natural, there were some who existed not by honest industry, but by the gaming table. Among them was a young man of striking appearance who had served in France as sous officier in a hussar regiment, had gone the pace, ruined himself, and finally drifted out to San Francisco, where he became the hanger on of the gambling table.

Louis Le Marronais was a strikingly handsome specimen of the Parisian of his class. It did not take him very long to gain the confidence of the old Frenchman, and to him he confided the story of his life. It was not a very eventful one. He was a member of an old French family and could use if he pleased a title which dated back to Charles the Bold. He had been ruined by the extravagance of his younger brother and was then living on the income of a little property in Brittany, which he had saved from the wreck. Irene was his only child, and he idolized her. For her sake alone he wanted to be rich. He wanted to take her back to France and reinstate her in the position to which her rank entitled her.

The ex-hussar won the old man into the belief that his only chance of getting rich was through gambling. So night after night old Lescant was found at the El Dorado or some other gaming hell losing his money under the direction of the arch mentor. One night Irene followed him there to bring him back, and her first visit was a fateful one. Tom Monroe, a Kentuckian, one of the wildest and most reckless characters of that period, saw her, admired her and swore that she should become his property.

It is not necessary to recite the incidents that led up to the scene, which were related to me by an eyewitness. It is sufficient to say that Le Marronais had convinced the old Frenchman that Monroe would stake $50,000 against the hand of Irene. If he won, she was to become his wife, but if he lost the money was to become the Frenchman's property and Irene was free to bestow her affections wherever she pleased. Irene was informed of this proposition, and she looked resigned and rather amused at the transaction.

The eventful night arrived. Monroe, the old man, Louis, Irene and a friend and countryman of the host were the only inmates of the little room. The game was ecarte, and the cards, which Louis had marked, lay upon the table. The old man got the deal. Monroe's certified check for $50,000 was placed in the custody of the hussar. The old man marked the king in the first deal, and when the pack changed hands he had the best of the game. The play went on, and in the last hand Monroe scored every point.

"Irene is mine!" shouted the Kentuckian, reaching for his check.

At this moment the lights were dashed out, and Monroe fell to the floor from the stroke of some heavy instrument. The only disinterested spectator of the scene fled from the room. The next morning there was no sign of life in the old house, and in the evening when the milkman knocked he heard a groaning from the inside. He forced his way into the house and discovered the wretched Kentuckian bound hand and foot. Monroe, avowing murder, rushed the next morning to the banking house. The check had been cashed by an individual who answered the description of the hussar. The other actors in this startling scene were never heard of. Nothing in the house was disturbed, not even the girl's wearing apparel, and the incident became a portion of this strange history of old time gambling in San Francisco.—San Francisco News Letter.

One More Idiot.

Tobacconist—If you'll keep quiet about it, I'll tell you how I manage to make money out of cigars. When a man comes in and asks me for a good cigar, I invariably recommend that brand that costs me the least. It is a great scheme.

Customer—That's so. What idiots they must all be! By the way, I want you to recommend a good cigar to me.

Tobacconist—Well, confidentially I advise you to take one of these. (Customer goes out.) Only one more idiot that's all.—Boston Transcript.

CONCRETE WALKS FOR GEORGE STREET

The Question Discussed at Last Night's Council Meeting

The Street and Bridge Committee to Visit Belleville, Napanee and Other Towns and Inform Themselves as to Cost, Etc

The Town Council met in Committee of the Whole in the town clerk's office last night.

There were present, Mayor Davis, in the chair, and Councillors McWilliams, Dawson, Denne, Robertson, Best, Allen, W. H. White, Langford and Hamilton.

The Mayor said the object of the meeting was to take into consideration the advisibility of making a grant to the committee of the Bicycle Club who have in charge the Provincial C.W.A. Meet to be held here on Dominion Day. A number of ratepayers had spoken to him in reference to the matter and all seemed favorable to a grant being made. The committee in charge would be required to expend at least $2,000, and as the Meet would undoubtedly attract a large number of visitors to town he thought the Council should certainly treat the bicycle people liberally.

GRANT TO BICYCLE CLUB.

Moved by Councillor Dawson, seconded by Councillor Allen, that a grant of $300 be made to the Bicycle Club to be used in connection with the C.W.A. Provincial meet to be held here on Dominion Day.

Councillor Hamilton said that last year the Council had offered $400 and that amount should not be reduced. He believed, considering the advantages to be derived that $400 was little enough.

Councillor Dawson thought the finances of the town would not stand any larger grant than $300 and he was opposed to increasing that amount. Times were hard and he thought this sufficient recognition.

Moved in amendment by Councillor Hamilton that the grant be increased to $400.

Councillor McWilliams, from views he had heard expressed by the ratepayers, thought that $300 cash and use of the town lumber was quite sufficient. The use of the lumber was equal to $100.

The Mayor believed that $300 was the limit. That amount would suit the ratepayers and the council should not go beyond their wishes.

Councillor Langford was in favor of a guarantee of $500 in case that the Bicycle Club met with loss through unfavorable weather.

Mr. Best viewed the matter in the light of a straight grant in preference to a guarantee.

The motion was then put and carried unanimously.

CONCRETE WALKS.

The next matter taken up was the question of permanent improvements.

Town Engineer Belcher presented specifications of the works required to be done in the construction of ten-foot concrete sidewalks with kerbing for the three blocks on George street between Brock and Charlotte streets.

In answer to a question Mr. Belcher said that the work would cost $2 per foot or $1,600 for each block.

After an informal discussion of the pros and cons it was Moved by Councillor McWillaims, seconded by Councillor Hamilton, that Mr. Belcher be instructed to prepare plans for a five-foot concrete sidewalk on both sides of Water street between Brock and Murray streets, and that tenders be asked for construction of that block and a ten-foot concrete sidewalk on George street between Simcoe and Hunter streets.

Councillor McWilliams explained that if this work was done it would serve as an object lesson to the ratepayers and enable them to vote intelligently when a money by-law for permanent improvements was submitted.

Councillor Langford said that he could not support the motion as it would mean an expenditure, according to Mr. Belcher, the town engineer, of $1,200, on Water street, which would be manifestly unfair to other localities.

A general discussion took place in which the concensus of opinion was in favor of a committee visiting towns with permanent improvements, and enquiring into the methods of construction, cost, etc., and profiting by the experience of such municipalities.

Councillor McWilliams concurred in the opinion and withdrew his motion when it was Moved by Councillor Langford, seconded by Councillor White, that the Street and Bridge Committee and the Mayor be a deputation to visit Belleville, Napanee and other places, and enquire into the methods of construction, payments, etc., of the permanent sidewalks in those towns.—Carried.

The Mayor thought it was a disgrace to the town that this matter of permanent improvements should be shelved from year to year.

The question should be dallied with no longer. Other towns were ahead of us in this respect and the matter should be settled now—once for all.

Councillor Best differed with the Mayor. The towns referred to by the Mayor had permanent sidewalks but no sewerage systems. Peterborough, he claimed, had made a proper start with its permanent improvements. Our sewerage system would soon be completed and then permanent sidewalks would follow.

Wednesday of next week was fixed as the date for the committee to start out on its tour of investigation.

AUBURN POWER CO.

Councillor Denne drew the attention of the Council to the condition of the streets where the Auburn Power Co's posts had been erected. In some places banks of earth had been left on the sides of the street and in others the soil around the posts had sank, leaving cavities that were a source of danger to the public.

Moved by Councillor Dawson, seconded by Councillor McWilliams that the Auburn Power Co. be instructed to have those streets which have been rendered dangerous through occupation by their poles restored to their normal condition.—Carried.

MARKET SCALES.

Councillor Denne presented an account for testing the market scales. It amounted to $7.65, and was ordered to be paid.

On motion of Councillor Robertson, seconded by Councillor Langford, the Property Committee were authorized to accept the tender of the Peterborough Hardware Co. for market scales.

The Council then adjourned.

STR. ECLIPSE HAS TROUBLE

With a Cargo of Live Stock Other River and Lake Notes

Captain C. W. Calcutt, of the str. Eclipse, arrived from Harwood Thursday night with a scow load of cattle and hogs for H. P. Kennedy. The steamer had quite a thrilling experience. The cattle broke down the partition which separated them from the the pigs and drove a number of them overboard. After they were fished out one was so exhausted that it was found necessary to kill it. The steamer returned down the river yesterday morning to bring up the booms and pier for Hales' bridge. She will return to Peterborough to-day with an excursion from Alnwick and Hamilton, will arrive in Peterborough at 10 a.m., and will return down the river at 4 p. m.

Mr. Calcutt has received several communications from United States parties who wish to come to Canada to spend the summer on account of the war.

The Eclipse has already made arrangements for several excursions from the Eastern part of the Lake to Jubilee Point. Arrangements are being made for the Farmers' picnic, which will be held in June.

The steamer Golden City is being overhauled preparatory to taking a dip into the water.

Mr. P. P. Young is having his staunch and tidy steamer Majestic repainted and she will soon be seen gliding swiftly o'er the waters of the back lakes. She will be engaged this week at towing logs from Deer Bay after which she will then haul wood to Lakefield. She will also be in charge of the same crew. Capt. Scollard, Ed. and Jerry.

OTTAWA THEIR CHOICE

The 57th Voted Almost Unanimously in Favor of Ottawa Last Night

At last night's drill, as predicted in yesterday's Times, the members of the 57th Batt. voted almost unanimously in favor of Ottawa as the objective point of their annual outing on the 24th of May. Kingston had very few supporters owing, no doubt, to the fact that only a few years have elapsed since the battalion paid that city a visit.

Major Edwards took the vote in the absence of Lieut.-Col. Bell.

The parade was not very largely attended owing to the unfavorable weather.

From now until the 24th of May there will be company and battalion drill every Tuesday and Friday nights, and every man will be expected to be on hand in order that a good showing may be made at Ottawa.

ANKLE DEEP IN PAIN.

Sinking in Rheumatic Mire—South American Rheumatic Cure was the Saving Strong Arm.

W. F. Beggs, Vancouver, B. C., says: "Five years ago I was afflicted with a very acute form of rheumatism causing a great pain in my ankles and feet. I tried everything I could read or hear of, and consulted many physicians, and a Toronto specialist, without receiving any benefit. I was induced to try South American Rheumatic Cure. The first dose gave me relief the first bottle greatly helped—and two bottles brought me a complete cure."

Preparatory Services

Services preparatory to communion were held in St. Paul's church last night. Rev. J. G. Potter of St. Andrew's conducted the services, which were well attended.

Pages from the Diary of Capt. John W. Moore, Newbury, Ind.

Jan. 9.

"Our little boy, who has suffered for six years with lameness in his hip, continues to grow worse, although we have applied many kinds of liniments. The family doctor has decided that the boy has hip joint disease, and he urges us not to meddle with the case, saying it is best to allow it to take its own course. We feel very anxious about him. I wish we could find something which would effect a cure. I fear it will develop into a very serious affair." J. W. MOORE.

March 22.

"A sore has broken out on the under side of my boy's hip, and it has discharged very freely and left an opening about an inch deep, the size of a silver dollar. He has to be given constant attention. Our physician tells us to keep the sore running. A second sore has appeared on his groin and broken. The boy is very low. I asked the doctor about giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has cured so many such cases, but he said he could give him medicine that is four times better and does not cost as much." J. W. MOORE.

May 10.

"The doctor's medicine which I have been giving our boy has not proved of any avail. The child continued to grow worse and I have stopped giving it to him, and now he is taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. I got a bottle from the druggist a few days ago and I believe I can see that the boy is improving under the treatment." J. W. MOORE.

Oct. 6.

"How glad I am that I ever tried Hood's Sarsaparilla for my boy's hip disease. When he had finished taking the first bottle he looked fifty per cent better. I continued giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and now he is quite well. He runs and plays with the other children and we can hardly believe he is the same child, thanks to Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we have proved to be indeed the One True Blood Purifier." J. W. MOORE.

Pages like those above are penned in the personal records of thousands of people.

In the memories of many more the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is indelibly imprinted. The cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla are literally written in blood—in blood made pure, enriched and vitalized, cured of scrofulous taints, salt rheum, boils, pimples, spring humors—in blood which properly builds up the nerves, strengthens the stomach and gives that tonic to the system so imperatively needed in the Spring.

THE AMERICAN FLEET UNDER FIRE

Morro Castle Guns Open Fire at a Five Mile Range

FRANCE WILL NOT SEE SPAIN GO DOWN

The Hundreds of Millions of French Capital Invested in Spain Must be Protected and the Latin Race Must be Upheld Against the Anglo-Saxon—French Army Want a Diversion.

(Special Despatches to the Morning Times.)

ON BOARD THE FLAGSHIP NEW YORK OFF HAVANA—APRIL 23RD, 2 A. M.—Morro Castle opened fire on the flying squadron of the United States at 11 o'clock last night. About ten shots were sent in the direction of the American ships, but not one of them took effect and no shots were fired in return. The Spaniards had apparently seen the lights of the New York while the latter was signalling to a ship of the squadron. The firing was reported by the officer of the deck—Ensign J. R. Edie—to Captain Chadwick, who was asleep at the time. The young officer asked the Captain in somewhat excited tones whether the New York had not better discontinue signalling: "No," muttered Captain Chadwick, with the utmost coolness, "there is no necessity for stopping the signals—go ahead!" A little later Capt. Chadwick was on the forward bridge, from which he viewed the tongues of flame shoot out from Morro Castle. He glanced in the direction of the Spanish fortifications for a few seconds and then turned his back on them and went back to his bed, perfectly certain that the Spaniards could do no damage at five miles, which was then the approximate distance of the flagship from Morro Castle.

SPAIN PRACTICALLY PROCLAIMS WAR.

MADRID, APRIL 24.—The following decree was gazetted today:—"Diplomatic relations are broken off between Spain and the United States and the state of war being begun between the two countries, numerous questions of international law arise which must be precisely defined, chiefly because of the injustice and provocation coming from our adversaries, and it is they who by their detestable conduct have caused this grave conflict."

THE UNITED STATES CONDEMNED.

LONDON, APRIL 24.—With an important exception there is general continental condemnation for the United States today. This exception emanates from Russia. The St. Petersburg Viedemesti, treating of Russia's attitude towards the United States says: "The friendship which has subsisted for many years between the two states excludes every idea of anything but a friendly attitude upon the part of Russia at the present juncture."

FRANCE WILL NOT LET SPAIN GO DOWN.

LONDON, APRIL 24.—A despatch from Paris to the Sunday special reads: "The American methods of dealing with Spain have excited unanimous indignation. France will not let Spain go down without a helping hand. The possibilities of present active interference upon her part are many from the point of view of self preservation. The Monroe doctrine must be combatted. The hundreds of millions of French capital invested in Spain must be protected, and the Latin race must be upheld against the Anglo-Saxon. The army has been under a cloud lately and would be glad of a diversion. Finally, French prestige would be fully restored by the step, which would meet with the approval of Russia, Austria, Italy and even Germany.

THE SITUATION AT WASHINGTON.

Washington, D. C., April 23.—The United States is now on a war footing. The action of Spain in handing Gen. Woodford his passports, while causing American chargin, is accepted as a formal declaration of war, but a formal declaration on the part of Congress will probably follow, to put the neutrality laws into effect.

One hundred thousand volunteers for and other Cuban ports is announced, one year's service have been called for by Congress. The blocade of Havana the North Atlantic squadron have sailed, and the flying squadron are in readiness. The regulars have been sent South.

The present plans, so far as can be learned, provide for the shipment of food and arms to a point east of Havana, to be supplemented, probably by some United States force. United States plans, however, are contingent on Spanish strategy, of which little is known at present.

There is little doubt, however, that Spain's object will be damage, and that letters of marque will be issued.

The constitutional recognition of the Senate as part of the Executive promises difficulties. This prevents a United States "coup," for the Democrats introduce embarrassing parliamentary inquiries.

Senator Money regards Hon. A. J. Balfour's announcement in the British Commons of the United States' intentions regarding privateering, which were undoubtedly well founded, as reflecting on the infringement of the Senate's rights. That the Administration has not a working majority in the Senate adds to the difficulty. Secret sessions will probably ensue.

Postmaster Gary retires from the Cabinet on account of ill health. It is interesting to note that he is president of large cotton duck mills, which may receive Government contracts.

Goldwin Smith is quoted here at some length as declaring that Spain must go from Cuba.

WHERE IS THE SPANISH FLEET?

Washington, April 24.—Day by day, reports to and from various sources are printed, saying one that the Spanish fleet is still at Cape Verde Islands, and the other that the fleet has left there. The Cape Verde Island telegraph wires are all in control of Spain, and nothing purporting to come from there can be relied upon. Still, the truth from that source is the most important war news to-day. If the Spanish fleet is still there, it means that Spain is signally inefficient to carry on a war, or that a masterly inactivity is being maintained to draw the United States resources into Cuban waters, while the Spanish preparations are directed toward bombardment of New York.

If the Spanish fleet left Cape Verde Islands several days ago, it is on its way toward New York to strike the United States in its most vulnerable part.

If the fleet is still at Cape Verde Islands, Spain is calculating on getting the ships so quickly across the Atlantic that the United States warships cannot get back from Cuban waters in time to aid in the defence of New York.

NEW YORK'S FEAR.

New York, April 23.—New York was thrown into a panic this morning by a Berlin despatch, saying this city would be bombarded as the real beginning of Spanish naval hostilities, and that the Spanish fleet was quietly waiting at Cape de Verde Islands until all our war vessels were engaged blockading Cuba and concentrated at that point before the Spanish vessels left for this city, or some other prominent Atlantic sea coast city, to begin the work of bombarding and destruction.

The naval officials here put a great deal of credence in the story, saying Spain sees the hopelessness of saving Cuba, after the "American" fleet opens a landing place for our overwhelming body of troops, and it is a part of the cunning play of Spain to get all our ships and troops down to Cuba before she moves with her fleet.

The same naval officers pointed out the masterly inactivity of the Spanish fleet, which is quietly at rest at Cape de Verde Islands, while stirring scenes are going on in front of Havana and off the entire Cuban coast as purely strange.

They also say this masterly inaction is significant, and that Spain knows the capacity of the forts guarding our harbor as well, as all our sea-coast defences, and whether she is able to silence our forts in a conflict.

"Spain is up to some cunning trick, you can rest assured," says an attache of the Brooklyn navy yard, "and she has begun her work to keep us guessing what will be her first strike. So far, the United States has not the slightest intimation of the future movements of the Spanish war fleet, which is as puzzling to the Navy Department at Washington as it is to us here."

AFTER THE PARIS.

London, April 23.—One report says the American Line Paris has been captured.

Another has it that she is returning to Southampton.

Both reports are discredited.

The first rumor appears to have arisen from the fact that, before sailing, the captain of the Paris was warned to run for the nearest port in case of danger.

As to the second rumor, it is pointed out that the Paris passed the Lizzard at 11.45 o'clock last night.

AN ALLEGED PRIZE.

Key West, Fld., April 23.—2.30 p.m.—An incoming tug reports that the New York has captured a Spanish passenger steamer plying between Havana and Porto Rico.

It is believed here that the prize is the Alfonso XII., the mail steamer due at Havana to-day, not the warship of that name.

The steamer was sighted about ten miles off Havana. The New York sent a shot across the Spaniard's bow. This did not stop her. Then Capt. Sampson ordered all steam on, and a stern chase of four miles followed. When the flagship got in better range she sent three more shots after the Spaniard. Then the steamer hove to. She will be towed to port this morning. The Alfonso, if it be she, is a rich prize, worth a million dollars. There were 1,000 Spanish troops aboard.

BRITISH STEAMER CAPTURED.

London, April 23.—The Daily Chronicle publishes a despatch from Liverpool which says a private cablegram received there reports that the United States fleet off Key West has captured a British steamer, probably the Gracia, flying the Spanish flag, which cleared Pensacola April 18, and was bound for Liverpool.

PRIZE FOR THE SPANIARDS.

London, April 23.—It is reported here that the Spaniards have captured the American ship Shenandoah, which sailed from San Francisco in January for Liverpool. She is a four-masted vessel of 3,258 tons register, and owned by Arthur Sewall & Company, of Bath, Me. Sewall was candidate for Vice-President on the Bryan ticket.

SAILED LONG AGO.

London, April 23. A report has reached the United States Embassy here to the effect that, in spite of denials, the Spanish fleet left the Canary Islands several days ago.

SPANISH INCAPACITY.

London, April 23.—The Madrid correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says:

In well informed parliamentary circles a pessimistic view is taken as to the upshot of the war. Even the politicians who are patriotically supporting the Government, accuse the Liberal Cabinet of having brought about the war and of having made no preparations to carry it on.

Those who have studied the question affirm that the war will be of very short duration, and that when it is terminated those who are responsible for it will be called to account.

It is rumored that Senor Sagasta will be succeeded by Captain-General Lopez Dominguez; but even if this new Ministry should be formed it would not survive the conclusion of peace.

There have been enthusiastic demonstrations in the city and provinces, the crowds in many cases demanding the release of Gen. Barbon de Castelvi, sentenced to two months' imprisonment for taking part in the rioting on the night of the 12th inst.

When the marines started for Cadiz during the cheering of the crowd Gov. Aguilera took off his hat and took up a collection. The hat was thrice filled with silver from the well-to-do and copper coins from the poor.

The rumor that Britain intends to limit the conflict to the Gulf of Mexico, and that an understanding thereon nuent with the United States had been reached, caused a great sensation.

ITALY CHANGES FRONT.

New York, April 23.—A special to the World from Rome says: Ex-Premier Crispi, in conversation with a World correspondent said: "Great danger is threatening the principles and institutions of the Latin people. De Tocqueville's prophecy will soon be fulfilled, and, for weal or for woe, American democratic principles will have revolutionized Europe."

Italie, the Foreign Office organ, says: "The powers must either urge Spain to abandon Cuba or face a long war, probably fatal to Spain and its monarchy."

This declaration indicates a change of front on the part of the Italian Foreign Office, which heretofore has supported Spain in her determination not to surrender Cuba.

Wheels will be shipped same day list of subscribers is received at the Times Office.

Borrowing and Lending.

In old times, when the country was new and shops and stores were a day's journey from the door of the householder, borrowing appeared sometimes a necessity. The good man or woman of the house came to an emergency where nothing but a call upon the neighbors seemed to meet the case. In most instances lending was a cheerful courtesy, and the borrower merely felt under obligations to reciprocate if occasion offered. But every community had what might be called its professional borrowers—families who perhaps were not as improvident as they were greedy and selfish. What they borrowed they didn't have to buy, and anything obtained in this way was clear gain. They would borrow anything that the neighbors would lend them, from the carving knife to the family carriage, and it was a fortunate circumstance indeed if the things came back in good condition. No matter what the breakage, the entire family would testify that it was cracked and came to pieces almost immediately.

Borrowing with some people is almost equivalent to a peremptory demand for one's property without the slightest idea or intent of compensation. There is one kind of borrower, however, who is more difficult to get along with than all the rest. It is the man who comes on one's premises in the absence of responsible persons and takes away what he wants, telling his neighbor afterward that as nobody was home he took the article, for he was sure the owner wouldn't mind. Possibly the owner might not mind so much if the thing were returned promptly and in good order. But it is likely to be something of everyday necessity, the lack of which causes its owner great inconvenience, if not serious loss.—New York Ledger

The Criminal and the Villain.

"I was shadowing a well known criminal one evening," said a detective, "and was rather surprised to find that he made straight for an east end theater. I followed him into the gallery. He settled down comfortably, and it was soon clear to me that he had come out that evening for no other than the innocent purpose of enjoying the play. Nobody in the gallery was worth robbing. I staid on for the fun of the thing.

"The play was a heavy melodrama, in which the usual kind of villain tried to rob the common or garden order of hero of untold wealth and to marry his sweetheart at the same time. He committed one murder and instigated a couple of others.

"I was less interested in the play than I was in the demeanor of my friend.

"He gnashed his teeth at the villain's villainy and hissed him with mighty energy. He was loudest in his applause of the hero's platitudes. Toward the end of the play, when the villain was getting

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 25, 1898

A BIG STRIDE FORWARD

The many readers of the Times will be pleased to learn that the circulation of the paper has grown so large that a modern printing press has become absolutely necessary. We have therefore just completed a contract for the purchase of a Webb perfecting press, similar to those used by the Globe, Mail and Empire and other leading papers. The machine will print and fold 60 papers per minute, and costs $4,500, exclusive of duty and freight, which will run the price up to $5,000. The paper is supplied in rolls, fastened to one end of the machine, and when everything is ready the machine is started, the paper is unwound automatically, cut off, printed, leaves pasted and placed in piles at the rear of the press. The press will, we understand, be the only one of its kind in Canada, outside Toronto and Montreal.

With a modern Webb perfecting press, two typograph (type setting) machines and a modern, up-to-date plant in addition, we feel that we occupy a proud position in the newspaper world. Comparisons are said to be odious, particularly if of a local nature, consequently we refrain from dragging our boiler-plate contemporaries into a class to which they do not belong, but prefer allowing them to pursue the even tenor of their way. Let them enjoy their Rip-Van-Winkle sleep while they may but this great family journal will always be found very much awake in the front rank of progressiveness.

A CURSE TO THE EARTH

While not of a particularly sanguinary disposition, this great family journal must say it is pleased there is war between the United States and Spain. While we have not much use for the States, we recognize the fact that it is not the first time Providence has used a mean instrument in administering a just vengeance. Therefore we hope and trust that when war is over Spain will exist only in history. She has been the curse of the earth ever since she was [illegible] enough to [illegible] in its affairs. She has been a scourge wherever she has gone. Even to-day, when civilization is extending into the heart of Africa, the highest ambition of her people is to see bulls tortured and horses gored to death. The Spanish talk about their honor. Neither honor, honesty, nor bravery is a Spanish characteristic. Spain has gone to war to temporarily check the tottering throne of a played out monarchy, for fear it will totter over altogether. The only thing regrettable about the war is that the policy of the United States does not include the seizure of the whole outfit and the opening up of the country to the effects of modern civilization.

History, from the time the Moors were driven from the country, down to the present day, does not show one redeeming national trait. Spain has sown to the wind in gales and now that she is reaping the whirlwind, she deserves not the faintest sympathy. It is doubtful even if she will attempt to defend her Cuban possessions. For [illegible] sake she will leave troops there until the United States starves them out. Her fleet will be used for privateering purposes on the other side of the Atlantic. The probabilities are she will purposely commit some overt act against British commerce, so as to call down the wrath of England, so that will give her an excuse in the eyes of her own people and of Europe to yield to the [illegible] of the combined Anglo-Saxon race.

No, we don't think much of the United States. When this war is over the people will probably be too bumptious to contain themselves. But at the same time any old thing is good enough to thrash Spain with and if the United States cannot do it alone they may have the free use of the advertising columns of this great family journal to call for Canadian recruits who can.

Don't talk about Bering Sea, John! Don't talk about it. It hurts me. And besides I'm ready to whack up.—Uncle Sam.

The British budget just submitted shows the Mother Country to be in an exceedingly prosperous condition. Notwithstanding the enormous extra expenditure on the navy last year, and the payment of thirty-three million in reduction of the national debt, there was a surplus of over eighteen million dollars in the treasury.

• • •

The war of the Union from 1861 to 1865 cost up to the end of the last fiscal year 7,000 millions of dollars. When all the pensions and interest are paid the amount will be swollen to 12,000 million dollars. The Troy, N. Y., Press points to three legacies left by that war over a generation ago. The first is a pension list of $150,000,000 a year, a tax of $2 per head on the total population of the United States. The second is the bondholding class, whose money was loaned to carry on the war. Third, the numberless army of tramps, largely the direct outcome of the war.

England has decided that coal is to be treated as a contraband article in case of war. Orders have been sent to the colonial authorities in Jamaica accordingly. While this rule is expected to be enforced impartially, it will affect unfavorably Spain rather than the United States in case of war. The latter country will probably not need to look for coaling stations in foreign ports. Spain, without the possession of Cuba and Porto Rico, would find its navy helpless and useless in American waters for want of coal. England's position in this matter is one of the ways in which that nation can show its friendship to the United States, and in fact, prove of great assistance to it, without violating any rule of neutrality.

The Plebiscite Bill has been introduced by Hon. Mr. Fisher in the House of Commons. The vote will be taken on the plain question. "Are you in favor of the passing of an act prohibiting the importation, manufacture or sale of wine, spirits, ale, beer, cider and all other alcholic liquors for use as beverages?" An interesting feature of the debate was a threat thrown out by a Conservative member that the Senate was going to reject the new franchise measure, and as that is the basis for the voting laid down in this measure, the plebiscite bill might be nullified by the Senate's action. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that in such an event there could be a revision of the old franchise list before a vote was taekn on the plebiscite, as the Government would not think of using lists four years old.

Scrofula is Snake-Like in its subtlety. It lies hidden for years in the ambush of the blood, and when it strikes it voids its venom alike on strength and beauty, disfiguring the one and undermining the other.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is a specific for scrofula in its worst and most malignant forms. Scrofula is a blood disease. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a blood purifying medicine. Mineral medicines only drive scrofula below the surface. Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a vegetable remedy and it eradicates the disease. There is no remedy for scrofula equal to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"I was cured of a long-standing case of scrofula by Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The disease first manifested itself when I was a child, by breaking out in red blotches all over my body. I was not free from the trouble until I took several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. That effected a permanent cure."—MRS. E. H. SNYDER, Lehighton, Pa.

English Jacobite Societies.

To judge from the list of Jacobite clubs and associations given in the "Legitimist Calendar For 1895," which includes the order of the White Roses, the Devon White Rose club, the Legitimist Jacobite League of Great Britain and Ireland (ponderous title!), the Eastern Counties' (shade of Cromwell!) White Cockade club, the Forty-five club of Grimsby, the Glasgow Jacobite club, the Oxford University Legitimist club, the St. Ives (Hunts) Jacobite club, the Jacobite Restoration league, the Surrey White Rose league, the Mary Stuart club of Lanark, the Legitimist Registration union, the National Royalist and Jacobite association, the order of St. Germain and the Hemingford Grey Royal Oak club, not to mention our old familiar Thames Valley Jacobites and two or three foreign legitimist bodies, it ought not to be difficult for the supporters of the lost house of Stuart to put several hundred adherents in the field (or even Ludgate circus) if they so decide.—London Mail.

WANTED CHRISTIAN MEN AND WOMEN

to introduce "Glimpses of the Unseen," the most marvellous book since the publication of the Bible. Revealed religion demonstrated. Supernatural facts of the Bible no longer in doubt. Rev. Dr. Austin is the Editor; Dr. Badgley, Professor of Philosophy, Victoria University, writes the introduction. The contributors are scholarly and devout men, among whom are Rev. Dr. Thomas, Judge Groo, Rev. G. W. Henderson, Rev. Wm. Kettlewell, J. H. Coyne, M. A., Chaplain Searles, Evangelist Crossley and many others. Contains experiences of Wesley, Mark Twain, Dr. Buckley, W. T. Stead, and a host of similar men. The veil separating the spirit land is drawn back so that all may at least have a "glimpse." Full bound canvassing book, 75 cents; worth twice that. Experience unnecessary. Books on time. Freight Paid. Big commission. Sells on sight.
